The Smartest Fashion By Well-dressed Folk

Grandmother's Birthday

DEAR MADGE:

I am writing to find how you and little Eleanor got home yesterday. It was such a beautiful day, and mother seemed to enjoy it so much, especially when Nellie gave her that quaint bouquet of roses and forget-me-nots.

By the way, Madge, was it on purpose that the bouquet just matched the quaint bunch of flowers under the lace-frill-covered (I like that word) crown of your hat? That flat trimming was very effective, with the black satin facing and that brim turned up at the back.

So was your gown. I love that light blue-and-white striped voile, and the plain, deep hem was stunning stitched in that scalloped line at the top. The fichu effect and the cuffs were tucked lawn, weren't they, with lace edgings to match the V-shaped chemisette and the undersleeves? And that big obi bow at the back was just the right finishing touch.

Nellie was as cute as she could be, too. I am so glad smoking is coming back; it looked lovely at the neck and cuffs of that pink batiste. And that quaint strapped arrangement at the belt—just stitched to the skirt and fastened to a sewed-on button at each side, wasn't it?—gave the waist line that all but very slender youngsters need. I flattered myself that I looked "some," as Ted says, also. The military styles in vogue now just suit my style of beauty, and I think that yellow of mine is a duck—although it's a linen! Didn't you like the hip-length coat, with the high-waisted black satin girdle? (Linen and satin again, you see.) And that tucked front frill and shallow sailor collar and cuffs of sheer linen, with the linen buttons on the frill and the bias band on the cuffs and collar emphasize just sufficiently that becoming military effect.

Mother looked dear, I thought, in her white fichu and cuffs. It's pleasant to see black grenadine in style again. And if she WILL wear caps at her "young old age," the bit of lavender ribbon is very pretty.

Oh, I forgot to ask you if you liked my hat: those white chip helms 'hapes really need nothing but a bit of decoration at the side and something in the way of a narrow wreath. My silk buttercups were just right, I thought, together with that clump of dark green and black grass; and the buttercups wandering in a single line about the bottom of the crown gave the proper line there.

Have I talked clothes enough? We must see more of each other, Madge. At the very least, write to me soon.

Your affectionate sister,

ELEANOR.

PARIS POLICE IN DARK;
SLAYERS MAKE ESCAPE

Mystery of D'Abbadie Arrast's Death Proves Too Much Even for Expert French Officials

(By PAUL VILLIERS.)

PARIS, June 11.—The mystery concerning the death of D'Abbadie Arrast is like to remain unsolved, although the police have been doing everything that men can do to run down the assassins who slew him. More is now known of the circumstances in which he was seen last. This, curiously enough, was only a short time before his death. He was discovered on the bridge near the Quai Debilly, where he had called on his cousin, Maitre Zoeger, a lawyer, who lives opposite the footbridge. He had left Zoeger to take the train. The victim had left Buxeuil in the morning with the intention of staying only a few years here. His movements up to the very moment almost of his disappearance. After the complete mystery prevails, as in the case of the famous Steinhilber affair.

The sudden vanishing of such a well-known personage has aroused no end of speculations, but all the indications as to present known facts, a strange crime. D'Arrast called on his solicitor, Maitre Tolly after he reached this city. They chattered about various things, and among others a will case in which D'Arrast was interested. Then he went to lunch. In the afternoon he called at his printer's and then returned to a cafe where he had an appointment with a friend, who was unable to meet him.

After dinner he paid a surprise visit to his cousin, Maitre Zoeger. Then, taking out his watch suddenly, he exclaimed that he had been staying longer than he had intended, and that he would have to catch his train. An hour later two constables found his coat and hat on the footbridge, hardly more than a stone's throw from Maitre Zoeger's home. The only supposition that can be made is that he was attacked and murdered immediately on leaving his cousin's house.

BAR GAMBLING

Gambling is prohibited in this country. Officially, no gambling is allowed except in the casinos of the Villes d'Eaux or watering places. There are raids every week on a number of clubs where Baccarat is played. The club furniture is seized, the names are noted down, and the police take the club money, and the gamblers have to move on to other premises—and does so.

But Engheim, the Monte Carlo of Paris, is not far from the boulevard. Ten-minute trains run out to Engheim-Bains without stopping, three minutes up the Avenue du Casino, and there you are.

Engheim is a watering place, not a mere suburb. There is a lake there, there is a spring from which some water with a little iron in it trickles. The casino people are wealthy—as all casino people are—and gold has bluffed the authorities. Therefore the shop-boy can gamble at "La Boule," and anybody who cares to pay for the privilege can become a member of the Cercle Prive, where there is baccarat.

PROTEST INDEMNITY

A well-known Englishman, who spent several weeks here writes: "It is the height of discourtesy for a French theater to permit things upon the stage which must shock a large proportion of the audience. Not long ago I went, for the second time, to a musical which is visited by hundreds of English people every evening. In the middle of the show was a hopelessly indecent and vulgar exhibition. French people in the audience were disgusted with it. The manager's only excuse for it was that the show had been running a long time, and the thing that I objected to had been put in to 'brighten it up.' The manager said that he had seen the change in the program himself."

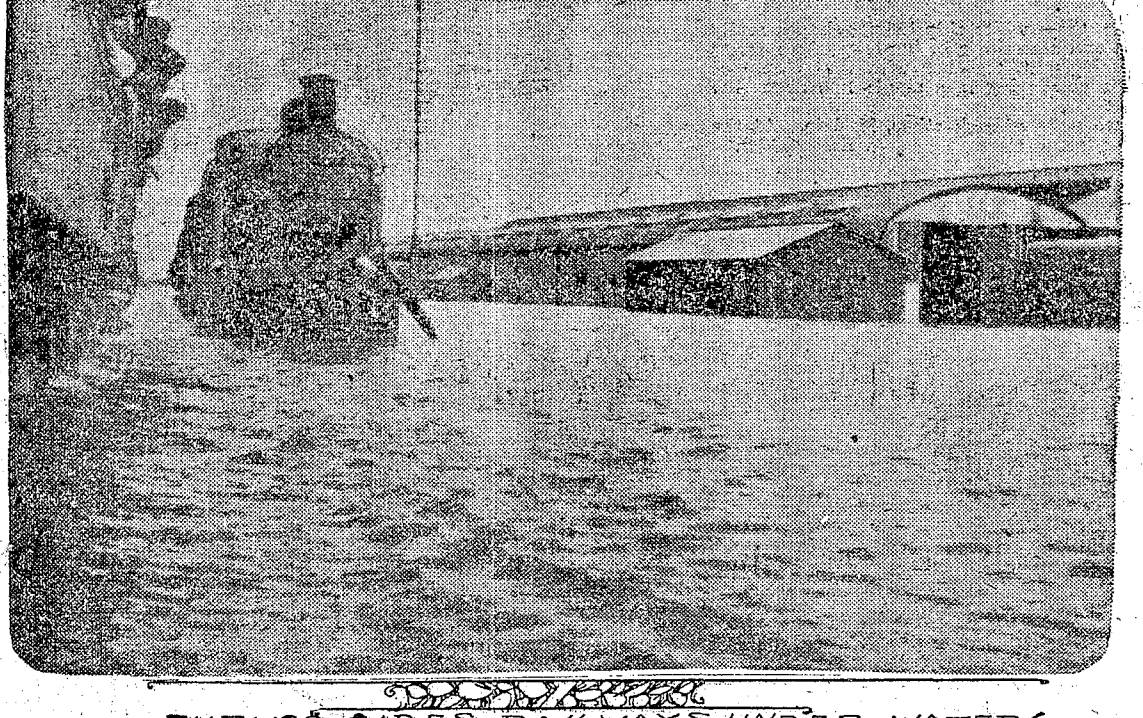

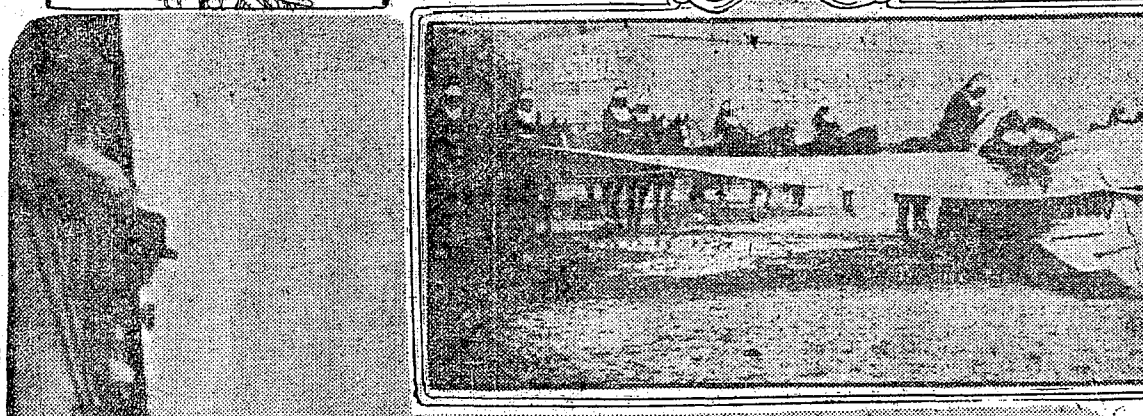

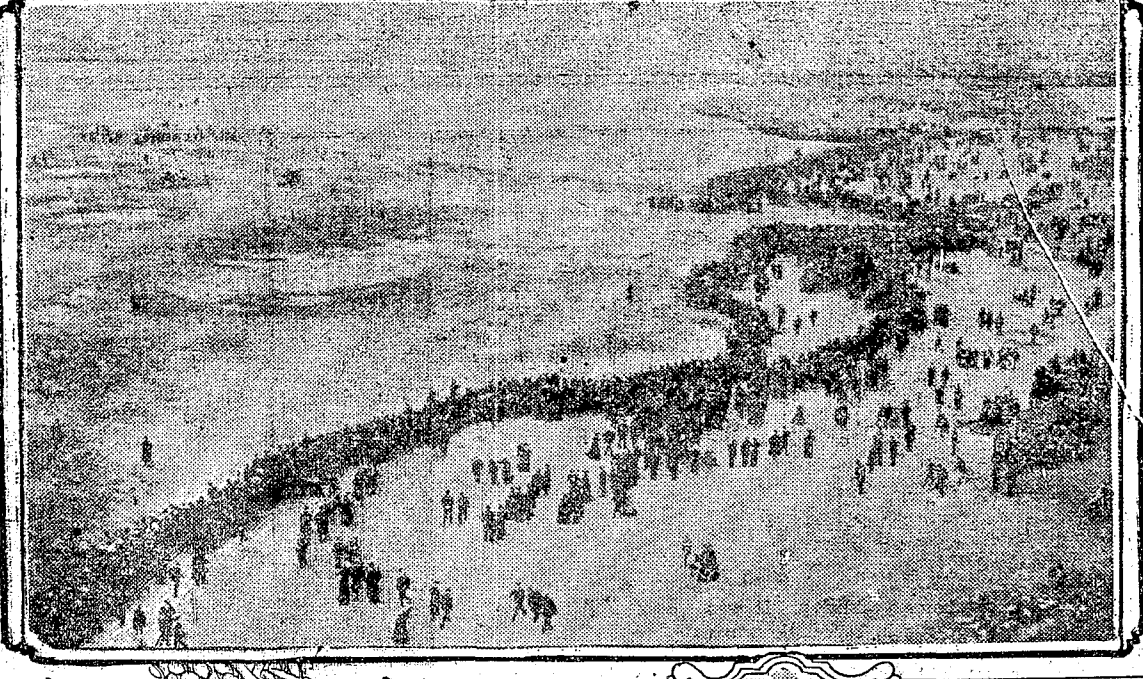

A strange story is told of a detective who was guided about in a foreign country by an alleged murderer whom he was sent to arrest. A man named Valeri is accused of having shot the director of an asylum at Aix last September. He fled to Buenos Ayres, and the police, having traced him, sent a detective to secure his arrest. As the fugitive was a Corsican, the detective at once sought out some Corsicans on his arrival in Buenos Ayres to help him in his search. He found one man who was a day's pilotage his about the city in quest of the fugitive from justice. Suddenly the amiable guide disappeared, and the detective greatly regretted his loss. He will probably never see him now, for he has learned that his guide was the very man that he wanted. In a letter written by Valeri from Buenos Ayres to someone here and intercepted by the police he refers with great deference to the detective who had been in search of himself. But fearing that sooner or later he might be detected, he thought it safer to vanish.

The war minister who was killed at Issy-les-Moulineaux was a generous man. A story of his charities would fill a volume. He gave away thousands. He inherited a fortune and tripled it himself. He was a Socialist, but it is well-known that many of M. Bertheaux's electors voted for the man rather than his political opinions, and a remark of Clemenceau about him is historic. "Bertheaux," he said, "will always be a power when he likes. He is elected not from political reasons, but because he is a good man, a brave man, a clever man, and, above all, a good fellow."

A famous old belfry from which the bells rang out for the wedding between Henry V of England and Catherine, daughter of Charles VI of France, has just fallen into Troyes. The belfry, which was built in the thirteenth century, formed part of the church of St. Jean. It had been unsafe for some time, and its fall was expected. A thousand persons witnessed the accident, which happened on a foggy morning. It toppled over and fell with a crash on a house opposite.

BRIDGE LOSING
HOLD IN ENGLAND

Card Games Declared Unsuitable to this Feminine Temperament.

Bridge is losing its hold lately. Recently an inquest was held on a straitened lady who committed suicide after losing some rubbers at bridge. It was said that she was as a rule a first-rate player, but that on the evening of her death she played very badly, and lost of nervous tension that made conversation impossible. It is a tragedy, it is said, that the game of bridge is losing its hold in England. Many women are admirable bridge players, as far as mere skill and knowledge are concerned, but they are nearly all bad losers. They are too emotional, and too easily upset by the nervous tension that makes conversation impossible. It is a tragedy, it is said, that the game of bridge is losing its hold in England. The Paris of the New World, like its prototype of the Old, has recently been the scene of unprecedented floods. The low-lying suburbs suffering severely and several streets being completely drowned. The railways, in which millions of francs are invested, have been greatly damaged. In places, sections flooded to the depth of three or four feet, and all traffic being suspended. On the Great Southern Railway, an old Midland Railway road train, being derailed, owing to embankments being undermined by the water.

A magnificent reproduction of a Roman gallery is the central attraction of the amusement section of the exhibition. Plans for the vessel were carefully prepared from historical manuscripts, and the result goes far to show that the modern floating palaces are not much more splendid than were the pleasure boats of the early Roman emperors.

The vessel is 320 feet long, 80 feet broad and the main deck is 40 feet above water line. The prow and poop are surmounted with statues, and the sides are decorated with statues, statues, and statues. The lower decks are held such sports as roller skating, Greek and Roman dances, and the "posse plastique." Here also is situated the magnificent gladiators' ring, reproduced on historical lines. On the second deck is the restaurant, the Greek-Roman theater including a "revue" of Roman pomp and splendor.

"BLACK PERIL" FEARED IN AFRICA

Attempted Assaults Work Cape Town Up to Fever Heat.

CAPE TOWN, June 17.—The "black peril" is stirring South Africa from one end to the other. The government is seriously concerned over the situation and is doing all in its power to deal with a very difficult problem. In the meantime sensational cases multiply. A prominent resident of Bulawayo, Sam Lewis, went to local office, had the native boys paraded and picked out one who, he alleged, had made overtures to his girls.

Lewis calmly marched the native to vacant ground behind the building, and shot him dead. He then surrendered himself, and was charged with murder, but was released on $15,000 bail. Public subscriptions were tendered for his bail while he was in court, but were not required.

Public feelings in Bulawayo seem almost entirely in Lewis' favor, and a difficulty is expected in getting any jury to convict him. An organized endeavor to lynch the culprit in another case is reported from the village of Bergville, in Natal. Two women were driving home from tennis along a country road when they were held by a native, who attempted to molest them. The women defended themselves and the native bolted.

The foregoing cases and others are forcing the whole problem on public attention, and while the public generally is opposed to lynchings, it is feared that the tendency in that direction will be dangerously increased, unless ordinary lawful measures soon place a check on what is regarded as a growing menace.

JAPAN MAKES BID

Begins to Build Five of Largest Armored Ships in the World.

TOKYO, June 17.—Japan is making a new bid and a high one for the naval mastery of the Pacific. She is beginning this year a program of five of the largest armored ships, a tonnage actually superior to that which will be laid down in the same twelve months for the British navy.

Of these five ships which will each displace about 28,000 tons, four will be armored cruisers. One is now building at Messrs. Vickers' yard at Barrow. The other three will be built in Japan. Contracts for them have been awarded, and they are to be completed in three years. Each will mount ten 12.5-inch guns, similar to those carried in the latest British designs.

The fifth ship will be a battleship, and will be built in Japan. When these vessels are complete in 1914 the "all big-gun ships" of the Japanese navy will be as follows: Five new ships armed with the 12.5-inch gun. Kawachi and Settsu, each carrying twelve 12-inch guns. Aki and Satsuma, each carrying four 12-inch guns and twelve 10-inch guns. A total of nine "all big-gun ships," which six older battleships and six older armored cruisers will be on the effective list.

Icelandic Parliament Gives the Vote to Women Over Twenty-five.

Sweden to Entertain Athletes of the World Next Year.

COPENHAGEN, June 17.—The Woman's Suffrage movement has scored another victory in Scandinavia.

Word has reached here from Iceland to the effect that the Icelandic parliament has passed a suffrage bill which gives to women who have reached the age of 25 equal political rights with men. There are no other restrictions on women voting or holding office than is imposed upon men.

The suffrage for women has worked so well in Norway that it probably will be extended not only in that country but in all the Scandinavian countries.

The great gathering of suffragists in Stockholm, the presence of leading women in the movement from all sections of the world had a marked effect on public sentiment.

The court of Denmark is extraordinarily simple and free from etiquette. Dinner takes place at 7, as a rule—and there is a long evening, which would be wearisome were not the Danish royal family an essentially happy one. The queen is serious and belongs to a sect which has somewhat Quakerish ideas with regard to amusement. Nevertheless, there is no lack of gaiety at the court in the way of balls, concerts, and musical plays. King Frederick walks about the streets just as his subjects do, and it seems strange to see the sovereign striding along with workingmen saluting him with a friendliness greater even than their respect.

Sweden will entertain the world's athletes who gather at Stockholm for the Olympic games next year as they have been entertained.

From the King and royal family down to the humblest subject there is a disposition to make the stay of contestants and visitors a memorable one.

Three magnificent cups to be competed for have been sent by the Tsar of Russia, the Emperor of Austria, and the King of Sweden to the International Olympic Committee.

The first woman to assume the ordinary duties of a uniformed policeman is Miss Tellmann Ibsen, stationed at Aalborg in Denmark.

PARIS AS IT WAS TO BE EXHIBITED

PARIS, June 17.—Paris as it was under Louis XIII and Louis XIV is reconstructed by a collection of relics, prints, engravings, caricatures, maps, playbills, guide books, uniforms, coins, tools, weapons, love letters, street signs, and other seventeenth century documents, exhibited in the ancient mansion of St. Fargeau, near the Carnavalet Museum, which now contains the historic library of the city of Paris. This exhibition, organized by Marcel Poete, curator of the Municipal Library, was opened yesterday and will continue until October 2.

It gives a complete picture of Paris of the classic epoch, with its grand seigneurs, find ladies, street loafers, water carriers, six-horse carriages of the nobility, big wheel carts, trained dogs, wig dealers, rat catchers, comedians, priests, wine sellers and hundreds of other quaint and picturesque seventeenth century types. This highly successful show is well worth the attention of all American visitors to Paris.

SPECIAL TO PUBLISHERS' PRESS.

DUBLIN, June 17.—The American Consul at Queenstown has received official information from Washington that three battleships of the United States squadron will visit Queenstown June 19 and remain for eight days. The ships are the Iowa, Indiana and Massachusetts. Two officers of King George's household were here as that taken by the royal processions on the occasion of Queen Victoria's last visit to Ireland and King Edward's first as King.

James Dillon, who was summoned to give evidence on the hearing of the election petition against Captain Donelan's return, committed suicide by hanging in his house at Killeaugh. The old man was unweary by the thought of being a witness.

Budapest Professional Circles Stirred by the Recent Discovery.

Dr. Szendeffy Declares That Tuberculosis Yields to Treatment.

(By EMIL ANDRASSY.)

VIENNA, June 17.—A Hungarian physician, Dr. Szendeffy, of Budapest, is the latest conqueror of tuberculosis. His discovery, which has been made public after three years of exhaustive experiments, has caused a sensation in the medical world throughout Europe. The treatment is based on injections of a preparation of pepton, iodine, and radium, calcium chloride. The healing power of iodine in cases of tuberculosis is well known, but great difficulties have been experienced in its use, owing to its exceedingly unpleasant effect on the patient and the intolerable pain that follows the injection. With the new injection of radio-active menthol iodine, however, daily injections have been carried out thirty times in succession without any ill effects. In a pulmonary consumption there was a distinct improvement after ten injections. Blood-spitting ceased, as well as night sweats, absence of appetite and weakness, and confidence and courage returned.

INCREASES WEIGHT.

The treatment has always been easily supported even in the case of children. Its most remarkable feature is that it at once increases the patient's weight. Equally remarkable is the action of radio active menthol iodine on the patient's appetite. The patient rapidly gains strength and, whereas his legs had refused to bear his weight, he is soon able to walk for some hours. This is attributed to the radio-active emanations. All the doctors who have been observing these cases are unanimous in recognizing that radio-active menthol iodine has an anti-tuberculous power so great and so rapid that no other product can be compared with it.

"We know," says one noted physician, "that it is impossible even with the most powerful specific to cure all consumption patients indiscriminately. It will always be difficult to repair the grave and deep disorders caused by the wounds of the third period. We affirm, however, that the radio-active menthol iodine is destined to furnish this remedy for all forms of tuberculosis in the first and second stages. It restores strength, improves the appetite, destroys the microbes and suppresses their toxin, thus causing the cessation of all the symptoms habitual to consumption."

ABUSED DEAD QUEEN.

A Vienna court has sentenced a woman named Leopoldina Futschel to three months' imprisonment for abusing Empress Maria Theresia, who died in 1780. Frau Futschel, who had been ordered by the police court to be expelled from Vienna for some offense heard from a fellow prisoner in her cell that the law providing for expulsion from a town was passed by Maria Theresia's reign. She then relieved her feelings by violent abuse of the great empress; not knowing and not caring that under the Austrian law the ancestors of the emperor are protected from unduly unfavorable criticisms, written or spoken, for two hundred years.

A Vienna goldsmith, who was called upon to move after occupying the same premises for forty-five years, found and recovered $2500 in gold and silver dust from the floor and walls of his workshop.

At Penge an Austrian named Jean Krier was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment and recommended for deportation for stealing business cards belonging to the general manager of an amusement palace.

An Austrian military deserter attempted to escape from his guard by dropping into the main sewer at Vienna, and was only recaptured after traveling a mile on all fours in the drain-pipes.

LOOKING TO AMERICA FOR NEW GRAND OPERA

RICHARD STRAUSS, COMPOSER OF "SALOME"

CAMILLE SAINT-SAËNS, COMPOSER

REGINALD DE KOVEN, COMPOSER OF "HIS LIGHT OPERA"

none of the objections to American grand opera, or grand opera in English can be sustained and that the claim that the opera by foreign composers cannot be sung in English as well as Italian, German or French is untenable.

In speaking on the subject recently Mr. Dippel said: "I have found that 'foreign' artists not only can sing in our language, but are anxious to do so. In the Victor Herbert opera 'Natoma,' which I have had the honor and pleasure to present to American audiences, there are only four English-speaking singers in the cast—Miss Garden, Miss Lillian Grenville, John McCormick and Frank Preisch. Hector Dufranne and Gustav Huberdeau are Frenchmen, Armand Crabbe is a Belgian, Mario Sammarco is an Italian and Constantin Nicolay is of Greek parentage. So far as singing was concerned English was to them a strange and unknown tongue, yet they began rehearsals eagerly, and the fair measure of their success is a pretty good argument against the foreigner's alleged inability to sing English.

That we have the composers and librettists equal to writing grand opera Mr. Dippel is fairly convinced. In this connection he points to the success of 'Natoma' as showing that American composers can win genuine success in the field of grand opera. Nor is Herbert in any means our only American composer of merit, as it demonstrates the success of the $10,000 Metropolitan opera prize and is also instanced by the success of another American grand opera last season, 'The Sacrifice,' by Converse, which was produced in Boston.

DEKOVEN WIDELY KNOWN.

Reginald DeKoven is also a widely known American operatic composer, although his efforts have been more along the line of what is known as light opera, still many of his compositions are far above the usual light opera standard and rank indeed very favorably with much the so-called grand opera music by foreign composers. To the world's musical giants are fully alive to the tendency of opera in this country is instanced by the fact that all are anxious to have their operas sung in this country before being presented in Europe, and also that more than one of them has selected American themes for the subjects of their operas.

Puccini's 'The Girl of the Golden West' is the latest instance of this, although this was not Puccini's first injection of the American into his operas, as although 'Madam Butterfly' is Japanese in subject, the principal male character is an American, and the opera moreover is an adaptation from a play by an American author. On a trip to London the composer witnessed the play and though he did not understand a word of what was said he nevertheless then and there decided to write an opera on the same theme. He secured the necessary permission, obtained the 'local color' from the wife of the Japanese minister to Italy and finished the task after two years of restless work. When the opera had its initial production at La Scala, in Milan, it was greeted, according to one account, with 'whistling, shilling on house keys, grunting, roaring, bellowing and laughing.' Puccini at once withdrew it, but not his faith in it. A few months later he had it produced at Briscia, where his success was pronounced. Since then it has triumphed everywhere. And Puccini has made so much out of it that he now has three country seats, a motor boat bearing the name

Game in the Philippines

'A paradise for hunters,' is the way Judge Liddell describes the country in the vicinity of his home and plantation on the southeast coast of Mindoro. One game, Mindoro excels in—is the tamaroa, rarest of animals, and one which is found only in Mindoro. It is a small animal, much like an American buffalo, is held in universal dread by every native on the island, who look on him as a far more formidable creature than the maddest of wild carabao.

Mrs. Liddell, wife of Judge Liddell, is perhaps the only white woman who has ever seen a tamaroa. A few weeks ago one came within fifteen feet of the window of the Liddell kitchen, where she was instructing the cook, and peered in. The natives in the neighborhood took to their heels and then the tamaroa walked off. But if the tamaroa is the piece de resistance among the game of Mindoro it is not the only game to be found on the island. There are myriads of deer, wild chickens, and game birds of all sorts. There are also plenty of wild boars on the island, some of them of extraordinary size and none of them noted for their docility. Judge Liddell has one truly magnificent lioness. This came from a monster boat, which charged the hunters repeatedly before he was shot down.

Wild carabao hunting is another pastime of the Mindoro planters and one that is not destined to soothe the nerves of weak-hearted men. These big animals are at all times dangerous, and when once wounded or angered will charge their hunters with all the ferocity of an African buffalo. James Liddell, a son of the judge, had an experience with one of them recently that will not be forgotten in a hurry. He was hunting and shot the big fellow, knocking him off his feet. As the carabao lay still he approached him and when not a foot away the carabao leaped to his feet and charged.

There was no time for a shot, so young Liddell did the only thing open to him—grappled with the infuriated beast. Three times the animal gored him, and finally the boy made his escape. What the Filipinos in his party regarded as the miraculous feature of the incident was the fact that the carabao had permitted him to escape. —Manila Times.

'Madam Butterfly,' an automobile or two and other luxuries of the rich. HISTORY IS RICH.

As Mr. Dippel has pertinently remarked, 'Though America is young, its history is abundantly rich in historic incidents—incidents that are full of romance and bravery. These can be idealized by librettists and they will have dramas far superior to those of many operas that we regard as 'classics.'

We do not have gods and goddesses for opera. The tragedies of the east side of New York can be made just as effective in song as Charpentier's Montmartre district is 'Louise.' There is no prescribed territory, there are no certain characters to be chosen. The subject is as broad as the country itself, for a story of California will appeal to New York just as much as a story of New York will appeal to Californians.

The traditions of one section are, more or less, the traditions of another, and American music will be recognized as American music wherever or wherever it is heard by American ears. Mr. Herbert in 'Natoma' has made a worthy start in this direction, for, excepting its Spanish motifs, the opera is American from the rising of the curtain to the Indian 'Theme of Fate' which marks Natoma's entrance into the convent at the close.

Humperdinck is another foreign grand opera composer, who thinks highly of American musical taste. The productions last winter of his opera, 'Königskinder,' for the first time on any stage at the Metropolitan opera house, New York, is the very best proof of this that could be offered. It is said that Humperdinck was most anxious that the opera should be sung in English, but for some reason this wish was not carried out, although it undoubtedly will be later.

But Puccini and Humperdinck are by no means the only foreign composers who are apparently anxious to foster or at least to cater to the American taste for opera. As Strauss, Mascagni and Camille Saint-Saëns have all visited us to study tastes and conditions here and have undoubtedly exerted their musical talents with an idea of pleasing American audiences, all are said to be most anxious that their opera should be sung in English here by competent artists.

Asbestos Mines of Canada

The mines of Canada today produce the major portion of the asbestos in the industrial world, says the India Rubber World. For six decades or more it was known that Canada possessed this mineral, but the fact was not considered of commercial importance.

In 1877 a farmer named Fecteau discovered deposits of importance, and the first real mine began operations shortly afterwards. It is said that the enterprise was a paying one from the start. Seven mines in all were opened in the first few years. One of these is said to have paid $24,000 net in one year upon an investment of $8000.

Asbestos was first mined in Italy, and prior to 1890 it was the only country that produced it at a commercial profit. The Italian asbestos is very silky in appearance and gray to brown in color. Often the fibers are several feet in length.

Asbestos upon leaving the cobbling sheds is sent to the spinning mills in bags holding about 100 pounds. Upon its arrival it is first forwarded by a machine similar to the saw tooth and gin used in cotton mills. This separates the tangled fibers, after which a final carding takes place on a regular carding machine. When the asbestos leaves the carding machine it is combed smoothly and the fibers laid parallel in a uniform mass. This mass is treated in a rota spinning machine.

This first spins it into a coarse yarn and then draws and spins this yarn until it becomes fine and quite strong. Where a hard, strong thread is required for certain fabrics the asbestos yarn is put into a doubling and twisting machine, where two or more of the yarn threads are combined. Of course, if the asbestos is to be impregnated with rubber, a smooth, hard-finished thread is not desirable.

The spinning of asbestos for a long time seemed of great difficulty, owing to the manner in which the threads persisted in slipping past each other. Finally it was discovered that under the microscope a thread of asbestos showed a notched surface, and that by means of special twisting the spinning could be made successful. Now, after much experimenting, manufacturers are able to spin a single asbestos thread of 100 yards in length not weighing over an ounce.

Will Cross Sea in Motorboat

Model of Motor Boat "Romania" and Captain John Weller.

To cross the Atlantic in a fifty-foot motorboat is the latest venture of an undertaking of an American, Captain John Weller of Carlstadt, New Jersey. The name of the little vessel, which will be the first motorboat of such dimensions to undertake the voyage, is the "Romania," and Captain Weller hopes to be ready for the crossing during the coming spring. The boat is being built by Captain Weller himself, assisted by his sons, and will be equipped with every necessity for the passage, including a most comfortable cabin. Provisions will be made for small sails in case of mishap to the motor.

REMARKABLE LAFAYETTE THE GREAT UNIQUE CAREER OF ILL-FATED ACTOR

"The Great Lafayette," the actor who was hurried to death in the Empire theater, Edinburgh, recently, was an American who made a tremendous fortune on the English stage. For the past ten years he is said to have made more than $200,000 per year.

His death in the Edinburgh theater occurred under strange circumstances, for it seems that the great lion, a big factor in the turning of the tide, "The Lion's Bride," prevented his escape after the fire had attained headway. When the fire started, the author went mad and in his fury, blocked the exit from the stage.

Lafayette, who was devoted to the lion, and to whom the beast was much attached, tackled the brute, and endeavored to get it away. The author, who must have sacrificed his life either in a desperate and courageous effort to get the lion away from the exit or in a desire to save it.

Speaking of the dead actor, the London Star says: "Lafayette's whirlwind performance generally covered half the bill at the particular theaters he visited, and he was listed as a rule about an hour. His dresses were gorgeous, and his scenery magnificent, and his change in both was equally marvelous. He usually appeared first as a Chinese emperor, then as a duke, and gave a remarkably clever and baffling show. He was the first to produce real live lions and pigeons from the same miniature from nowhere, and real thin ether, and had trouble at the introduction of this performance in getting his little picaninies licensed as stage performers."

"The second part of his performance was generally as a sculptor. In 'The Sculptor's Dream,' or 'Dust to Dust,' when from a slumberous mass of clay he fashioned with his hands what eventually resulted in a real live statue of a perfectly perfect girl."

"This perfect representation of the sculptor's studio would whisk away, and the stage would be occupied by the wonderful 'Favos' band of forty performers, who would be taken through travesties of well known comedies, with Lafayette as conductor, and each performer with amusing effect."

"His Sousa used to be perfect, and in the travesties, often, he was the work of the huge colored man with the big drum invariably caused the drummer to collapse with humorous effect."

"In 'The Lion's Bride' performance, which generally came last, a great iron cage appeared on the stage, with a real lion roaring inside."

"In the course of the 'story' the bride is carried with the animal, and Lafayette, as the Ethiopian hero in tiger skins, makes the play to spring into the cage and to rescue his bride."

"He forces his way in, but the lion springs on to the girl, and the audience in the midst of their shivers when the lion rears itself upon its hind paws, its head falls aside, and Lafayette himself is revealed inside."

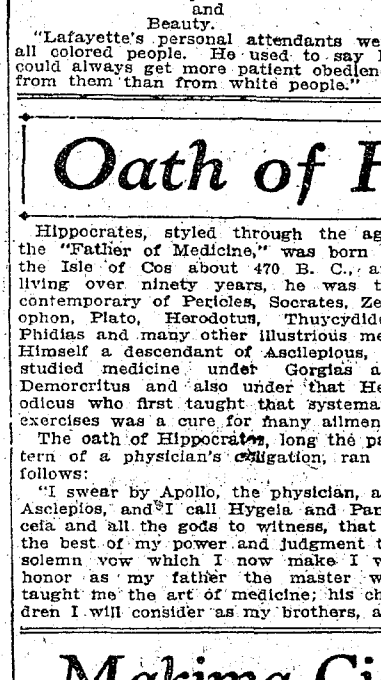

"It is used to be concluding great illusion and disappearing act worked at a frenzy and up to a degree of excellence that has never been equaled in the house, and Lafayette, in gorgeous eastern robes, would bow his acknowledgments from the curtain."

"The Great Lafayette," as the deceased artist styled himself, was a remarkable man in many ways. He came to this country from Chicago in 1900, with big ideas. In his obtaining an opening engagement at the Hippodrome, London was flooded with his great three-color posters, and his wonderful six-turns-in-one show was an instant success."

"From that time," said one of his intimate friends, "he was connected with him, and for everyone connected with him. He has been making over $200,000 a year for the last ten years."

"In his personality, Lafayette was dominating and peculiar to a degree. His most remarkable trait was his extraordinary affection for his dog 'Beauty.' 'Beauty' was a cream colored Tennessee hound which appeared in his performance, and Lafayette demonstrated

NEW MEXICAN DIPLOMAT HAD LONG CAREER

SENOR MANUEL M. DE ZAMCONA, the new Mexican Ambassador at Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Senor Manuel M. de Zamcona, the new Mexican Ambassador at Washington, is a diplomat of unusual prominence in his own country. He is about 50 years old and was born in the City of Mexico August 30, 1860.

Senor de Zamcona began his diplomatic career as an attaché of the Mexican Embassy in Washington in 1880, when his father was Minister to the United States. Later he returned to Mexico and became a member of the railroad tariff commission. He has recently been financial agent of the Mexican government in London.

Oath of Hippocrates

Hippocrates, styled through the ages the "Father of Medicine," was born on the Isle of Cos about 470 B. C., and living over ninety years, he was a contemporary of Pericles, Socrates, Zenophon, Plato, Herodotus, Thucydides, Philides and many other illustrious men. He was a descendant of Asclepius, he studied medicine under Gorgias and Democritus and also under that Herodotus who first taught that systematic exercises was a cure for many ailments. The oath of Hippocrates, long the pattern of a physician's obligation, ran as follows:

"I swear by Apollo, the physician, and Asclepius, and I call Hygieia and Panacea and all the gods to witness, that to the best of my power and judgment, I will give to the sick, and I will keep it a profound secret. If I observe this oath, may I have success in this life, and may I obtain general esteem after it; if I break it, may the contrary be my lot."

teach them my profession without fee or reward. I will admit to my lectures and discourses my own sons, and those pupils who have taken the medical oath; but no one else. I will prescribe such medicines as may be the best suited to the cases of my patients, according to the best of my knowledge, and no temptation shall ever induce me to administer poison. I will religiously maintain the purity of my character and the honor of my art. Into whatever house I enter I will enter it with the sole view of relieving the sick and conduct myself with propriety toward all the members of the family. If during my attendance I hear anything that should not be revealed, I will keep it a profound secret. If I observe this oath, may I have success in this life, and may I obtain general esteem after it; if I break it, may the contrary be my lot."

Making Cigarette Paper

Of the great army of cigarette smokers there is probably not more than one in a hundred who knows that paper, in which the tobacco is wrapped, has nothing to do with rice, but is made from the membranes of the breadfruit tree or more commonly of fine new trimmings of flax and hemp.

So light is this paper that 500 of the tiny sheets go to make an ounce. They are perfectly combustible and give off the minimum of smoke. Being rolled with tobacco they are analyzed to prove they are free from all deleterious ingredients and that they contain nothing but the purest paper fiber. Only new material—flax and hemp trimmings—is used, and these are thoroughly purified. Chopped by machinery into minute particles, they are well mixed by a revolving fan and then reduced to a dust, which is placed in a solution of lime and soda. After remaining in this solution for some time, in order that all foreign substances may be eliminated it undergoes a thorough washing process, the water being the purest kind coming from artesian wells sunk especially for the purpose. Then the pulp is rolled into paper. At first it is of a grayish tinge, the pure white of the finished product being obtained by an electric process, which in bleaching also cleans it of whatever impurities might have escaped the bath.

The French manufacturers of cigarette paper practically supply the entire world's output of Austria and Italy being insignificant. Scientific American.

What Ho! for All Outdoor, Writes Suzette of Smart Set

By SUZETTE

SUMMER is here, bringing to the smart set everywhere a varied round of activities. It is the Gypsy life these days—for, after all, most of us are descendants of the Romany Rye. The gypsies of the old days wandered in picturesque fashion—and the gypsies of modern days roll along in automobiles, but all the same each has heard "the call of the wild," and each in his own way has answered to the call. And so it is that "al fresco" entertainments are the order of the hour, and one hears of picnics, barbecues, automobile excursions and yachting trips. One entertains in one's garden whenever that is possible. We have a way of arranging the grounds this summer that is charming. The lawns and paths are covered with Turkish rugs and the trees are hung with Venetian lamps, and with Chinese or Japanese lanterns, which lend a gorgeous, Oriental color scheme to the fascinating picture. Tables are set for bridge, and if it is a large affair, there is an orchestra to lend an atmosphere of gaiety to the scene.

The smart set entertains also at all the large hotels, leading hostesses planning delightful out-of-door affairs. At Del Monte there are many things possible. One may invite guests for the seventeen-mile drive, taking luncheon from the hotel, and a favorite mode of entertainment is to give a picnic at Pebble Beach.

Up at Tahoe there is a big picnic launch called the "Wild Goose," and it takes merry parties to some of the beautiful beaches that line the shores of Tahoe.

Out-door life is a special feature of this season's activities and the good times possible run the gamut, from the simple picnic to the barbecue, planned along elaborate lines.

GOLF TOURNAMENT TO ATTRACT SMART SET.

Early in July the golf tournament at Del Monte will attract visitors from all parts of the state. Mrs. Walter Martin and Mrs. Eugene Murphy are now at Del Monte and they go over the golf links daily, getting in form for the coming tournament.

It is not decided who will play from the Claremont Club, but many of the latter's members would make a good showing, for among the best players are Jack Neville, Frank Kales, George De Golla, Ernest Folger, Robert Fitzgerald, Harry Knowles, Arthur Crellin, Charles Parcelis, Mrs. William Pierce Johnson, Miss Josephine Johnson, Mrs. P. E. Bowles and Mrs. John Valentine.

At Carmel-by-the-Sea there is to be the annual celebration, which bids fair to be an event each summer to which the fashionable world will look forward. Carmel-by-the-Sea will be crowded with visitors, all eager to be present at the rendition of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night." It is to be given in the Forest Theater, to commemorate Carmel's one hundred and fortieth anniversary of the founding of the Mission, when the famous padre, Junipero Serra, discovered Monterey Bay.

The whole affair has been most delightfully planned, and the pageant will be full of color. There is to be a gala celebration of much historical interest, planned to represent the pageants of Bury, St. Edmunds and Sherburne, recently presented in England. This is the first affair of this kind to be planned in America, and Carmel-by-the-Sea will be crowded to its fullest capacity in honor of the event.

SIGMUND BEEL CONTINUES TO SCORE.

From Europe comes news of the continued success of Mr. Sigmund Beel, the California violinist, who is such a favorite in the leading cities of Europe. Mr. Beel had some unpleasant experiences here, but they fall to all artists who have to accept criticism at incompetent hands. But Mr. Beel also found out who were his true friends. San Francisco and Oakland people heard him at his best, in the superb recital he gave, when Mrs. Hearst entertained nearly 500 guests.

Mr. Beel was at the head of the great Dublin festival this year, a musical festival most unique. All sorts of competitions for musical prizes are planned, and it is one of the great musical events of the year abroad.

A friend writes of it: "Dublin is the city of laughter all the day long and all the year round. It is good to be in Dublin and feel like three and twenty again. You walk down Grafton street on the sunny side and rejoice in the beauty of the display, both inside and outside the shop windows. Every road leads to a golf course. No one talks money, or asserts either the possession or the need of it."

And among this people, no wonder Mr. Sigmund Beel has achieved added distinction. They have natures attuned to music, and it might be added in passing, that in Scotland and Ireland are to be found the finest golf players in the world.

ADMIRAL AND MRS. MILTON REPORT DELIGHTFUL TIME.

Letters received from Rear Admiral and Mrs. Milton tell of the delightful time they are having at the Isthmus, where there is a gathering of many people. Many of the wives of the officers attached to the Yorktown and the Vicksburg are there, and there is much in the way of social gaiety. Miss Anna Poston of this city went to Panama with Admiral and Mrs. Milton, and she writes most interesting letters. Miss Poston is a relative of Elbert Hubbard, and she is an exceedingly clever girl. She has much literary ability, and her letters are most charming.

MRS. FRANK CAROLAN CREATES STIR IN PARIS.

A Californian who has created a great sensation in Paris is Mrs. Frank Carolan, who has spent most of the winter in that historical city by the Seine. Mrs. Pullman, Mrs. Carolan's mother, was recently in San Francisco, and she was also Mrs. Requa's guest at Highlands.

Mrs. Carolan made a great stir in Paris, where she has spent several months. She had a superb apartment in the Rue Chardin, over which she presided with grace and dignity. She entertained lavishly and her apartment was a salon, connected along French traditions.

Mrs. Carolan is exceedingly fond of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, whom she is said to resemble. They are much together, and Mrs. Campbell introduced Mrs. Carolan to many English people of note.

She is also a great friend of Mr. Townsend Martin, the brother of the Bradleys, the multi-millionaires, who own the most superb estates in England and Scotland. Frederick Townsend Martin is a power socially in New York, and he can do a great deal there in advancing Mrs. Carolan's social interests.

Mr. Martin and Mrs. Carolan recently gave a large social fete in Paris for charity. There was a lottery scheme in connection with the fete, which occasioned much remark, but everything goes, when it is a matter of charity—even a lottery scheme.

Mrs. Carolan is, however, tired of Paris, and she is coming home in July, and will open "Crossways," the Carolan place at Burlingame.

MOTOR ENTHUSIASTS REVEL IN SUMMER.

While a great many people are away there is always the contingent which prefers to remain at home, taking short trips, and these are to be found mostly among the motor enthusiasts. One finds them on the delightful Marin roads, up in Lake county, down in Monterey—for California bids fair to prove a second France in the superb beauty of its picturesque roads.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Hamilton Brown are often automobile hosts, entertaining friends in their car, a Haynes, recently purchased. Mrs.

Brown was formerly Florence Sharon and she is a very delightful and very interesting young matron.

The Oscar Lunings each year take with them a party of friends and Mr. Luning drives his own machine in a skillful fashion.

The Wickham Havens are very fond of motoring to Monterey for the week end, and they also have friends who occupy seats in their car.

Mrs. C. C. Clay is another hostess who plans delightful motor trips for her daughter and the latter's young friends. They have explored most of the automobile roads in California and Miss Clay prefers motor trips to any other form of holiday recreation.

Among those to whom automobile trips carry a special appeal in summer are Mrs. Giles Easton, the Schillings, the Henshaws, the Granville Abbotts, the J. H. Dieckmans, the Robert Knights, the Charles R. Allens, the William Thornton Whites, the Edward Walshs, the Joseph Laymanes, the Mark Requas, the A. L. Whites, the F. M. Smiths, the William Letts Olivers, the J. R. Burnhams, the Evertons, the A. A. Moores, the Wallace Alexanders, the James Moffatts, the Joseph Mathews, the H. C. Capwells, the H. C. Tafts.

At the different summer resorts one meets them for a day or two and then home again they come to rest before attempting another long journey.

FRIENDS ENTERTAIN THOSE WHO STAY HOME.

The law of compensation is a true one, and for those who stay home there is much that makes for happiness. Our elders used to quote all manner of wise sayings to us in days gone by—and they used to tell us that man's choicest blessings lay close about his feet. And one interpretation might be that good times are just within our grasp.

In the summer time one can really see friends, and the summer visits in the long afternoons are a real delight. No one now makes the visits of the old days, when the good housewife took her mending and went over to a neighbor's, as she said, "to sit a spell."

Life is so strenuous that cards are often sent by mail, and it is only on a long summer afternoon that one can enjoy the real comradeship of true friends. So the good times that one might chronicle are numberless.

In the late summer friends gather at Highlands, Mrs. Requa's country home, and "afternoon tea" is a social date of interest and enjoyment. On the hillside in front of the house, in a growth of natural trees, a clearing has been made, and here Mrs. Requa has placed tables and chairs and there are restful hammocks, and in the soft air of Piedmont one might dream away drowsy hours. Here Mrs. Requa is fond of entertaining her guests, and in "Cherry Chase," as the picturesque place is called, there are many gatherings that represent a friendly comradeship well worth while.

The R. G. Browns keep their Wednesday afternoons all through the summer when they are at home. Miss Florine Brown and Mrs. Everts serve tea on the shady veranda and the neighbors enjoy the delightful hours there, overlooking the quaint old garden of the Browns and the beautiful lake.

All the friends of Mrs. Frank Havens are looking forward to the time when the beautiful East Indian home will be completed, for here, indeed, one will find the heart of summer. Nothing can be more beautiful than that densely wooded ravine, and the lovely paths winding through sylvan solitudes. Here one finds the essence of the country, and here one finds that cordial hospitality which adorns a sincere friendship.

In cherry time Mrs. Horry Meek, the Will Meeks and the Egbert Stones entertain many friends, and "Grasmere," the home of the Misses Huff, is of exceptional beauty in the summer time.

Among the large suburban homes in which there are many house parties in the summer time are the country places of the Ellsworths at Niles, the Meeks at San Lorenzo, the Hugh Hogans and the Thomas Hogans at Sunol, the Dyers at Alvarado, the Mehrmanns, the Leaches at Pleasanton and the Hayward home of Mr. and Mrs. William Angus.

EGBERT STONES PLAN IDEAL VACATION.

The Egbert Stones have planned a most ideal summer vacation, and they will spend several weeks in camp on the banks of the Russian River. They

ORPHEUM

A magnificent new program of vaudeville acts at the Oakland Orpheum is expected by theatergoers today, when the new show has its first inning. There will be five new acts on the program and all of them of the Orpheum's high standard of class.

Master Gabriel is coming back. Joy! Master Gabriel, although 26 years of age, has already won a place in the theater world second to none. His portrayal of that famous cartoon character, Little Nipper, will long be remembered by young and old alike. It was said at one time that Master Gabriel was not real flesh and blood, but had just slipped off the front page of a comic supplement.

Master Gabriel will be seen in a one-act comedy by Al Lamar entitled "Little Tommy Tucker." It is said to be constructed for laughing purposes only, and those who wish to wear the smile that won't come off will do well to see this diminutive little star in his new play. The cast includes such well known players as Edwin Lamar, late of the Drury Lane spectacle; J. Hooker Wright, late of the 8th Henry Irving company; Al Lamar, who has been associated with Master Gabriel for the past ten years; Nan Dodson, late of Denham Thompson's company; and Vida Fennell, the Canadian beauty.

It is practically a new act George Austin Moore and Cordelia Haager offer in vaudeville this season. Mr. Moore is a well known monologist but very recently Miss Haager has joined, and the two are said to be the most pleasing of teams. They have personality, appearance and manner that are charming. Moore is a dialect comedian whose stories of the negro type are full of fine humor. Aside from that he has a very good voice. Miss Haager is a striking little beauty with a sweet voice and is an adept in the use of the Italian dialect. She dances with a grace and swing that is scintillating. Miss Haager until very recently has been a Southern society girl and has retained a naturalness and ease of manner that makes her refreshingly free from the soporific traits of her sisters longer on the stage.

To add an Oriental touch to the bill the Namba Japs will present their gymnastic and head balancing act that is composed of some very intricate feats that are considered marvellous. The one feature that attracts the most attention is accompanied by Tokio Namba when he climbs a flight of stairs on his head. The dainty and diminutive comedienne, Isabelle d'Armond, will make her first appearance here at the Orpheum feature, playing with the assistance of George Moore a sparkling conglomeration of mirth, merriment and pretty costumes. "Jolly New York," where Miss d'Armond has been called "the dainty comedienne," who is sinking ship on Lake Erie. Another Sherman was aide to General Scott when he stormed the heights of Chapultepec and the fame of the Shermans in Civil War is still fresh in memory. Miss Sherman's father, Robert, Thomas Sherman was the commanding general of the historical march from Atlanta to the sea, during the Civil War hostilities.

pense so essential to the drama. Valerie Berge has in this act proved herself quite as successful as a producer, a player. She has secured a very capable company, Ruth Raynor as "the woman," Edward Hermon as the hotel proprietor and Richard Bassi as the bell boy, are all admirably cast.

Ed Wynn and P. O'Malley Jennings, who have created a gale of gaiety with their amusing stunts called "Daffydils," are to remain on the program, for one week.

The Five Musical Girls who were formerly soloists with the Boston Fagettes, are charming the multitude with some delightful music rendered in a thrilling and artistic way.

Henry Clive, whose travesty on "magie" is amusing, will be one of the features of the coming week's program.

An extraordinary motion picture, entitled "Faust," will be shown. This picture includes scenes from the famous opera, with special music of an appropriate character. It is said to be one of the most notable and expensive motion pictures ever imported by the Orpheum people and will constitute one of the notable features of next week's show.

BELL

All Oakland will welcome this week at the Bell, Fred Karno's London Fantomine Company, who will be the leading feature of the new bill. These artists who number twenty of Europe's foremost pantomimists will be seen in the laughter sensation of both continents. "A Night in an English Music Hall," there are screams every second of the time this troupe is in action, and audiences have been known to laugh themselves into exhaustion at this great big rip-roaring comedy success. The foundation of this satire is laid in a continental music hall and the amusing pictures of European theaters will be a delight to the Bell patrons this week.

Sadie Sherman, the American Maid coming to the Bell in her offering, "Phototypes" this week, is a daughter of the Revolution in every term the word implies, dating clear back to one of the officers of the "Mayflower." Her great grandfather, whose signature was affixed to the Declaration of Independence, was with George Washington when he crossed the Delaware and served throughout the Revolutionary war as a colonel. Another grandfather with Perry when he left his sinking ship on Lake Erie. Another Sherman was aide to General Scott when he stormed the heights of Chapultepec and the fame of the Shermans in Civil War is still fresh in memory. Miss Sherman's father, Robert, Thomas Sherman was the commanding general of the historical march from Atlanta to the sea, during the Civil War hostilities.

She also has the distinction of being grand niece of Vice-President Sherman. "A Night in an English Music Hall," there are screams every second of the time this troupe is in action, and audiences have been known to laugh themselves into exhaustion at this great big rip-roaring comedy success. The foundation of this satire is laid in a continental music hall and the amusing pictures of European theaters will be a delight to the Bell patrons this week.

The high class Perfecto Daylight motion pictures will constitute a feature worth while.

YE LIBERTY

Tomorrow evening Izzetta Jewel enters into the third week of her special season with the Liberty Players at Ye Liberty.

which will be devoted to a revival of one of her greatest hits of former seasons, "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines." This charming comedy, one of the very best of the many that Clyde Fitch wrote, is being given again by Manager Bishop at the request of hundreds of his patrons, for of all the plays in which Miss Jewel has been seen at Ye Liberty—and there are more than fifty of them altogether—her greatest personal hit was achieved as Mrs. Trenton in the fascinating heroine of this dainty "picture comedy."

The scene of "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" is New York City in the early '70s, and it would be hard, indeed, to find a more interesting period, from a pictorial standpoint, of American history for stage reproduction than this time. The dressing of the women, with their hoop-skirts and "water-falls," was the most striking and picturesque of times, and in the matter of frills and trappings the men were not far behind them.

The play concerns itself principally with the courtship of the gallant Captain Jinks, a social leader of New York, for the fascinating song bird, Madame Trenton. The opening scene of the play shows their meeting at the old Cunard landing dock in New York. Madame Trenton, an American girl, has spent most of her life in Europe and has become the most famous operatic star of the day. Her first appearance in New York is an event eagerly looked forward to, and there is a great gathering at the dock to meet her. Among them, with some of her friends, is Captain Jinks, and he loses no time in becoming acquainted with her. The acquaintance quickly ripens into a mutual affection, and his friends, jealous of his success, place him in a bad light. His mother, too, is opposed to his marrying an actress, and for a while the lovers are separated, but the end of the play finds the course of true love running smoothly again.

In the play this love story is told in a delightful manner. But there is an appealing strain of sentiment running through the play as well, in addition to an abundance of wholesome comedy, all of which make it one of the most pleasing attractions.

Madame Trenton will be seen, again as Mrs. Trenton, and Mr. Walker Graves, Jr., formerly leading man with the Fawcett company, makes his initial appearance at Ye Liberty as Captain Jinks. Edward Fielding had an excellent role as Professor Bellart, and all the congenial roles on the remaining twenty-five or more roles. The matter of scenery and costumes is being carefully looked after, and altogether the production promises to be one of the finest of the season. It will be given for next week only, with popular matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, which comes "The Stubbness of Garaldine," another of the Clyde Fitch comedy hits.

ALCAZAR

"The Right of Way," announced as the Alcazar's attraction throughout the coming week, will afford the Roberts-Bergen-Roberts stellar combine, another splendid opportunity for individual and collective display of fine acting. In the cast with them is the complete roster of Alcazar players, and the pictorial side of the production will be the most picturesquely artistic ever presented in that theater, most of the scenes being laid in the rugged mountains of Northern Canada.

Eugene Presbury adapted the play from Sir Gilbert Parker's famous novel similarly titled, and an excellent job he made of it. It was no easy task to make a play that should faithfully reflect the story as a psychological study and at the same time have plenty of action, but this Mr. Presbury did with remarkable skill. He impressively brought out the best points of a tale of a wasted life redeemed by an act of self-renunciation, with the hero confronted by choice of love and happiness on one side and honor and responsibility on the other.

widow, the relict of a brewer, young, pretty and clever, who has fallen in love with a handsome Englishman. The man seems to return her affection, but he doesn't ask her to marry him. Mrs. Dot—that is the widow—thinks it may be her wealth that is the obstacle, so just to help him out, she proposes to him and he—refuses her!

It turns out then that he is secretly engaged to another girl. He'd lots rather marry the widow, but he can't ask the other woman to let him off. That is the situation at the end of Act I. The curtain falls, however, Mrs. Dot is heard to remark that "when a woman wants a thing she generally gets it," and the audience settles back comfortably to wait and see how she is going to solve this trouble problem. Of course, she does solve it in the next two acts and by a most amusing stratagem.

Ethel Barrymore is the last of the Frohman stars to make the coast trip, as the western tour is terminated in the east. This season, Miss Barrymore began the season loaded down with plays, some of which had been tried and not found wanting, and others which promised much. Early during her long stay in New York she evinced a desire to try a new little play, "The Two-Fold Look."

Mr. Frohman encouraged her in this and arranged that in conjunction with the little drama that she do Barrie's earlier play, "Alice Sit by the Fire." The double bill, which is to be seen here, Frank Stammers, the well known producer, has charge of the production. The double bill, which is to be seen here, has met with lavish commendation in all of the cities in which it has been given.

SAVING LIVES of MINERS

THE MINE RESCUE CAR

DR. JOSEPH A. HOLMES, CHIEF OF THE GOVERNMENT BUREAU OF MINES

INTERIOR OF RESCUE CAR SHOWING EQUIPMENT

THE entire nation is interested in the question of the prevention of the tremendous loss of life in American mining operations, as all the States are engaged in mining. Of the forty-nine States and Territories only three have a mineral production valued at less than $1,000,000 per annum. Thirty States produce coal. This total production averages $40,000,000 yearly for each State and Territory.

Some idea can be gained as to the necessity for improved conditions in mining from the fact that this industry in the United States is killing from two to three more men in every one thousand employed than is the case in any country of Europe. Conditions in Europe before the industry received governmental assistance were as bad as they are at present in the United States.

During the last twenty years thirty thousand men have been killed, and one hundred thousand injured in American coal mines alone, with eleven thousand widows and thirty thousand children left fatherless.

In response to a nation-wide demand, Congress some months ago provided for a new government bureau of mines. Dr. Joseph A. Holmes was placed in charge of this bureau by President Taft, and ever since his appointment he has been working most industriously to place the bureau on a practical working basis—this he has now accomplished.

SIX RAILROAD CARS.

The bureau of mines has six especially constructed railroad cars fully manned by a corps of miners trained in rescue work and equipped with the latest rescue apparatus and first-aid-to-the-injured apparatus, stationed at different points in the great coal-mining districts of the country. These cars are ready at a moment's notice to proceed to any scene of disaster.

In the future when a mine accident occurs a trained rescue corps, with proper apparatus, will be rushed to the mine. Upon arrival, miners, familiar with the mine, will be instructed in the use of the apparatus, or, if necessary and desirable, members of the rescue corps will undertake the rescue work.

Rescuers, each equipped with an oxygen helmet and a portable electric lamp, will enter the mine and make an exploration for the purpose of finding any men who may have been overcome by the after gases of the explosion. When a man is found he will be taken out and efforts made to revive him by administering oxygen and by exercising the body. Each rescue corps will carry a resuscitating cabinet, which consists of cylinders charged with oxygen, a resuscitating breathing tube and a hood that fits over the mouth and nostrils of the victim.

BREATHE NATURALLY.

The compressed oxygen apparatus worn by the rescuers enables them to breathe naturally and work for two or three hours at a time in mines.

HE GOES TO THEATER; AND FINDS A WIFE

WASHINGTON.—A young Frenchman, who represented himself as Viscount Jean Baptiste de Ventura, a French nobleman and former army officer, strolling along Pennsylvania avenue, waiting for the time to arrive when he would keep an engagement with a friend at the Capitol, decided to while away an hour in a moving picture theater.

He started to buy a ticket at the first theater on the route, but instead of buying a ticket he got a wife and hastened to a nearby parsonage. Miss Althea Price was selling tickets at the theater, and she happened to see the same young Frenchman with whom the young Frenchman had plighted his troth months ago, only to lose all trace of her when he was called to France to settle up on estate.

WOMAN WANTS PENSION

SHERIDAN, Wyo.—Not many men have had the varied and adventurous life led by Mrs. Louise E. Bloss of Sheridan, who has just applied for a pension on the grounds that, dressed as a man, she served four years in the federal army as a member of company G, Sixty-third Infantry, from Illinois, from 1861 to 1865. Mrs. Bloss is now an old woman, with white hair and wrinkled face, and is almost destitute. On one cheek she bears the scar left by a bullet fired at Vicksburg; a long livid gash across the upper left arm is a memento of Corinth and a Confederate saber.

She was patriotic and wanted to join the army, but, of course, could not do so in skirts. So she cut off her hair, obtained a suit of men's clothing and applied for enlistment. The disguised girl was accepted and found herself a member of Colonel McCowan's regiment, the Sixty-third Infantry. She was assigned to company G, under Captain Richardson. After drilling and being otherwise "whipped" into line, the Sixty-third started south, and with it went the girl soldier.

The bureau is also developing a uniform code of signals for use in mine operations, and a system of warning signals indicating when men should leave one or all parts of the mine and the routes to be taken, so as to avoid the poisonous gases. It will develop more efficient and cheaper methods of mine and rescue work and of preventing and fighting mine fires. It will also collect data of the best practices for safe and efficient mining followed in different countries, and will conduct investigations of mineral products.

In the early days of anthracite mining there was no necessity for the protective measures now being taken. At first the coal was scraped off the surface of the ground, or else dug out of open pits. It was not many years, however, before the supply of fuel obtainable by these simple methods was no longer adequate. Then "slopes"—slantwise tunnels—were driven. This made matters more complicated; the workers had to go far underground, and cars were hauled to the surface by means of long cables. Finally came shaft mining—the driving of perpendicular shafts hundreds of feet deep and of tunnels running out from them through the coal veins.

METHODS CHANGE.

But the first shaft mining was very different from the operation of these days. Then the shafts were sunk two, three or four hundred feet. Now they go to a depth of fifteen or eighteen hundred. Instead of one or two gangways traversing a coal vein, there are now a dozen on many different levels. Sometimes a mine car is hauled two or three miles underground from its loading place to the shaft through which it is hoisted to the surface. In every mine there is a network of underground railways, which have to be maintained and managed as carefully as a surface railroad. A forest of trees is required to supply supports for the "roof." Currents of pure air must be blown through the passages at the rate of 200 cubic feet a minute for each man in the mine. And monster pumps, costing many thousands of dollars, are installed far underground to keep the workings free from water.

So it is that the prevention of accidents is a vastly more serious problem now than it was once. By taking advantage of every useful invention, and by instituting new precautions, the bureau of mines hopes, however, in the future to reduce the risks to a minimum.

But there is one opposing element against which the officials of the bureau can make but small headway:

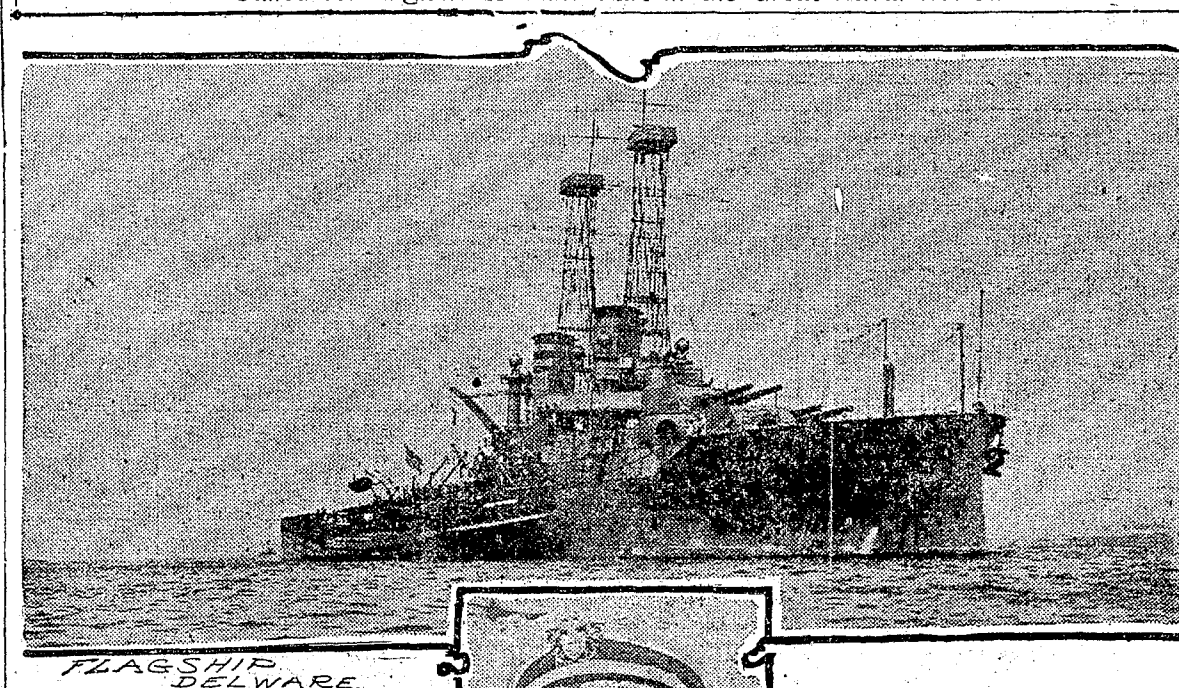

that is the mine worker's indifference to the risks that surround him. Official reports of the chief of the Pennsylvania department of mines show, year after year, that a large majority of accidents are due to carelessness and disobedience of rules. For these faults there is no thoroughly effective remedy. A partial remedy, however, is education, and in co-operation with the anthracite operators the Bureau of Mines is doing everything possible in this direction.

Throughout the Vicksburg campaign the Sixty-third Illinois saw much fighting and no man of it did more than did the young woman.

Just before the war ended the true sex of the young soldier became known to a comrade, and immediately after being mustered out of service, because of the termination of hostilities, she married John Sibley, who had served with her throughout the war.

Mrs. Bloss has all the necessary papers in connection with her four years' war experience, and her friends anticipate little trouble in securing the pension.

One of the proudest moments in the life of Princess Mary is said to have been when, as quite a baby, the late King Edward lifted her out from the back of Persimmon and led her round the paddock at Sandringham.

GIRL'S PLAYING KILLS BOY

NEW YORK.—Fireman John Roth will not have to keep his daughter Edna from the piano in their rooms at 1504 Second avenue for a full month, as he promised Magistrate House he would do.

Frederick Stout, 20 years old and Roth's neighbor on the same floor, because of whose tortured nerves the magistrate finally induced Roth to keep the piano silent, is dead of the heart trouble which attacked him last March and which his family and physician declared was aggravated by the piano practice of the 10-year-old daughter of Roth.

Dr. Charles J. Goeller, of 421 East One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street, said yesterday he firmly believed that if the Roths had stopped their daughter's practice when asked the boy would be alive, with a good chance of recovery.

"Poor Freddie raved of pianos and playing almost to the end," said his mother, Mrs. Henry W. Stout, of a re-LONDON.—The extraordinary trial of the alleged leaders of the dreaded Camorra, at Viterbo, in Italy, has afforded one of the sensations of the day, for 39 accused persons are placed in a large, enclosed cage in court, whilst the chief witness against them, Abatemaggio, once one of their most trusted men, is also kept in a cage when giving evidence, or whilst in the precincts of the court, lest he should be attacked by his infuriated enemies.

PLAYING CARDS IN CAGE.

The Camorra case is unique, but there have been many instances, nevertheless, of the use of a cage for human beings. When the American Lieutenant of the legation was shot openly in the streets of Palermo, in Sicily, some two years back, as the Revolutionary party's protest against the alleged interference of the United States consul, the whole population of Palermo was so excited that Italian soldiers, brought to act as guards and defenders, were kept by the government in locked cages on the docks at Palermo, lest there should be armed conflicts and bloodshed between them and the people of the town.

It was a most extraordinary sight to watch these troops, sitting, walking, singing, and playing cards in these large cages to pass away the time. Many of the men became little better than actual beasts from protracted confinement. Not only were the sides of the cage of strong iron bars, but even the top was roofed in after a similar fashion.

There died, only a few weeks ago, at Beekham, in Norfolk, Thomas Brown, the last of the searovers who took part with the celebrated Sir James Brooke when that roving gentleman descended on Borneo and made himself Rajah of Sarawak by sheer force of ability and arms. Thomas Brown used often to tell how, as a young man, he sailed for China in a man-of-war, and how his captain, he, and an English woman named Noble were captured by the Chinese.

The captain was sentenced to be sliced to pieces, but the woman was put into a cage and sent around in triumph as a spectacle through several Chinese provinces. Brown himself luckily managed to escape from prison ere the blood-thirsty Chinese could torture him, and at last got safely out of the country. But what eventually became of poor

Mrs. Noble, locked in that iron cage, he could never learn.

PRISONERS IN MOROCCO.

Probably no one has been confined in a cage in England since the instance of a boy, when a traveling show used to contain a youth—said to be a "wild" boy, and so advertised. They kept him in a cage on exhibition, like a wild animal. Public anger at the spectacle led to its being stopped, and the "wild" boy was no longer shown in a paddocked cage, next to a half-tame bear.

At the present time there is a prison in Morocco which is nothing better than a cage, since the captives are openly shown to all who care by the jailer. The wretched creatures come close up to the iron bars to beg alms, or to curse and swear at their fate, or unresponsive visitors, as often as they please. Two sides of the prison are walls, whilst the other two are of stout iron bars, with a locked door fitted in just like that of a "wild beast" cage in an ordinary menagerie.

Sight is a most loathsome one, for nearly every prisoner is diseased or ill, or slowly dying from the unnatural and horribly trying confinement in such narrow bounds. The only food they get is that which outsiders give them, or which they can buy from their hard-hearted jailers with the few coins they can beg from visitors.

FIGHT CONTROL BY MEN

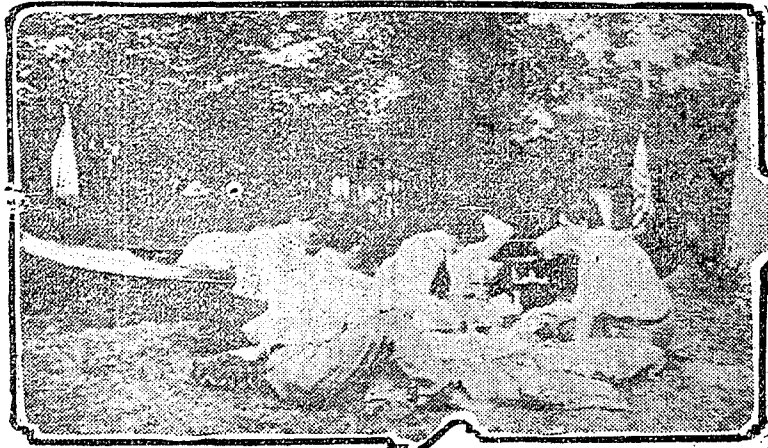

NEW YORK.—A strong combination of women teachers and principals is being formed in this city, Boston and Chicago, to prevent the recapture of the National Education association, which meets in San Francisco a few weeks from now, by what is known as the "old guard," supposed to be led by President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia university, who has long been one of the trustees.

What the women teachers are striving to do is to retain Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of the Chicago public schools, as president, and while they may have enough votes to do this, they have received an intimation that changes in the bylaws and constitution are proposed which will have the effect of continuing the control of the trustees and executive committee, where the men are still in the majority over the association.

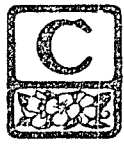

A widely known and prominent educational leader is to be put forward by the Butler faction for the presidency against Mrs. Young, but his identity is still a closely guarded secret. To defeat him, however, whoever he may be, the women expect to flock to San Francisco from every large city in the country.

The progressive camps of women teachers here, in Boston and in Chicago have already organized large parties for the trip. Three trainloads will go from here, it is certain, and probably more. Those from New York and from Boston will join the Chicago teachers in that city, and from that point the advance on San Francisco will be made together, with the determination not only to re-elect Mrs. Young, but to change, if possible, those features of the association which they call undemocratic and which they attribute to the men educators in the body.

Siren Call Of Canoe

A DAINTY SUPPER AT TWILIGHT.

CONTROLLED by no trust or patent, there are some mighty meritorious inventions which appeared with man on that furthest horizon of his origin that clings to us still as precious heirlooms common to all people.

The canoe is one of these and just as a proof of its everlasting vitality it may be said that it is even more popular today among civilized and barbaric people alike than in those remote times when the troglodites evolved the first dugout and founded the world's shipping.

Moreover, popular interest in the canoe is rapidly growing, and there is plenty of room for this expansion for comparatively few people yet know the delight of a combined campaign expedition and canoe cruise in the heart of the woods, on some wild trout stream or emerald forest lake. Roughing it is not as rough as it really sounds. And one who has tasted the real joys of life in camp will never be content with a tiled bath and costly outfit after he has once taken his morning dip in a mountain stream and cooked his bacon in the open over a birch fire in a shotgun frying-pan.

As for canoeing, probably no other sport so truly deserves the thoughtful attention of the tired business man. It has, in comparatively few years, achieved wide recognition and approval and the present demand for canoes is so great that in this country and in Canada as well, canoe makers are taxed to their utmost to keep pace with it.

Not only is canoeing the most independent and democratic outing which men and women have yet discovered, but it is the most useful and, at the same time, exhilarating of any outing which the present day affords.

One may become for the time being a part of nature, sleeping on her bosom, out under the stars; rising at dawn to enjoy the dewy morning in its best; taking the dip and afterwards casting a fly in some limpid pool to bring up a trout for breakfast, and secrets never before dreamed of in the quiet corner of the woods where the primitive tent is pitched for a temporary home and residence in the great out-of-doors.

DIFFERENT PERSON.

From the time one arrives at the little brick walls soon become loaded the canoe and camping outfit on the truck one feels a different person, seems to take on a new lease of life, to draw in contentment with the very air, and to leave behind all the sordid and petty troubles of the work-a-day world or the foibles of society for a communion with nature that seems almost sacred. Perhaps the lake or stream is (as it is likely to be) some distance from the station. Accordingly does some obliging farmer transport it on his buggy or concord wagon or milord elects to take it upon his back and start off down the wooded trail, looking like some new and interesting creature from the rear, suggesting an alligator or an armadillo. Provided the site is chosen, it takes but a short time to pitch the tent and to cut the fragrant boughs of pine, fir and spruce that form the basis of the bed. Weeklings who have paled behind brick walls soon become brown as berries and their backs adapt themselves willingly to the new demands of canoe, knapsack or a pack of "duffle."

To the uninitiated the canoe is a dangerous craft, he spoken of with bated breath, and yet for ordinary water but little experience is needed, coupled of course with care and an ordinary amount of common sense. When rapids are to be encountered is a different story, and only after considerable experience should a loaded canoe be taken through heavy water.

From what has been written above some might conclude that the canoe is only adapted for use on lakes and inland waterways. Such, however, is far from being the case, as there are several varieties of the sturdy seagoing canoe for sail or double-ended paddle, having a deck over all but the opening, in which one sits surrounded by an apron if the sea is rough.

BEST TYPE.

The Rob Roy is about the best type of this canoe as it will stand very heavy seas if properly handled, and is in any case a wonderfully safe little craft, most suitable for salt water. While canoeing is rapidly becoming a popular pastime among civilized people it has from time far beyond written record been the real serious business of many tribes of the native races of the world.

The Tatagan Indians of Tierra del Fuego, the tip and of South America, have lived in canoes so many generations that they have become dwarfed below the middle. Their only means of subsistence is fishing, which accounts for their condition of something similar to the Centaur, or half horse and half man, in that they are practically half canoe, as it has become their principal mode of locomotion. In Western Siberia the bay-dara is the thing, both with the natives and the Russians. It is found with innumerable modifications and shapes, amounting to a very picturesque and notable collection. Some types are very long and broad, ample for a number of people and much luggage. Some are hewn from logs and some built up like a skiff. The Russians use them for post boats on the big Western Siberian rivers, paddling them down the streams and towing them up currents with horses, like a canal boat, for thousands of miles. The Yukaghirs use them for fishing on a large scale.

Over on the eastern side of Siberia the canoe becomes the kayak of the Eskimos, maritime koryaks and kamachadales. In these people render them safer for family purposes and commercial fishing, walrus hunting, etc., by tying two of them together. These double kayaks are towed by dogs wherever possible.

In Alaska are the high end kayaks or the Eskimos and Athabascan Indians. In the shallows of Lake Titicaca, in Peru, is a tall rush out of which the Indians make a very neat canoe and boat shaped rafts and sails. In these boats they net and spear fish and pull out aquatic plants for cattle.

The pirouette of the Sakalavas of the East African coast are hollowed out of logs, same as those of our Indians, and called by them the lakas. The lakas, however, build long, splendid canoes with double balances with which they defy the heavy seas and go about at will.

In Ceylon the dugout has a single, or landing balance, by which people may step aboard or ashore without upsetting the canoe. In the same country, as in the Persian Gulf, is the garookuh, or enlarged, canoe, like a boat with sails, which is exceedingly picturesque in motion.

The American Indian canoe of today is the same, practically, as in prehistoric times—made of a hollowed log, bark or skins. On the Columbia river the hollowed log canoe of the natives, made out of skaying trees, is immensely long and graceful.

Of canoe-like boats, nothing exceeds in utility the modern sneak box, used by duck hunters. The square box in the center of the canoe enables the hunter to hide and "sneak up" on his prey while holding his craft steady and providing room for his game. The sneakbox has undergone modifications until it has evolved from a Barnegat Bay affair, with sails, to the great modern racers, which have defeated all English canoes.

LEARNING HISTORY OF OUR FLAG

The theory was advanced by a correspondent that the Stars and Stripes was raised over Washington's army at Camp Middlebrook, New Jersey, immediately after its adoption by Congress in June, 1777. That is in accord with the claim which is made by many patriotic Jerseymen, and which is to be commemorated by the erection of a fine monument on the site of that Revolutionary camp. There will be, and indeed there are, however, many to dispute its correctness and to challenge its correspondence to the fact that it is "generally accepted by students of Revolutionary history regard the matter as involved in hopeless obscurity."

It was long ago claimed, on some authority, that the first use of the Stars and Stripes in battle was at Fort Stanwix, New York, on August 22, 1777, and memorial tablets have been erected in token thereof. It has also been insisted that the first use of the flag in battle was at Cooch's Bridge, Delaware, on September 3, 1777, and that is set forth by an inscription on a granite monument. That it was borne at the battle of the Brandywine, on September 11, 1777, seems well authenticated, and some have held that that was the first use of it of which we have positive knowledge. Of course, the flag might have floated over Camp Middlebrook all that summer, and still these other stories might be true, for they refer entirely to its first use in battle. Yet it must be observed that there is no actual testimony of any kind that it was used at Middlebrook, but merely an assumption to that effect, on the ground that Washington would naturally use the flag of his own designing as soon as it was adopted by Congress. That is plausible, though not convincing.

The known facts are these: That the flag was designed some time in the early part of 1777, that it was adopted by Congress on September 3. The Journal of Congress does not tell who introduced the resolution of adoption, nor whether there was any debate on it, nor is there any explanation of the delay of more than two and a half months in promulgating it. Some have tried to explain this apparent lack of interest in it on the ground that the Stars and Stripes had in fact been in use for some time before its formal adoption. This seems improbable. There is little question that the Grand Union flag, bearing the thirteen stripes of America, and the crosses of George and St. Andrew in the Union Jack, was used by Washington at the beginning of 1776, and was retained by him until June, 1777, if not longer. The verse "The American ensign now sparkles a star," dated March 10, 1774, referred to a constellation in the flag, but to the white star on the forehead of the bay horse which was emblazoned on the flag of the Philadelphia Light Horse troop.

Even the origin of the Grand Union flag, the connecting link between the British and American flags, is uncertain. Admiral Preble says that it "is involved in obscurity." As early as 1704 the British East India Company had a flag of thirteen red and white stripes with the cross of St. George on a white ground in the canton, and it was doubtless often seen on shipping in Boston harbor. Botta relates that when news of the King's rejection of the first petition of Congress reached America the American soldiers were enraged and "changed at this time the red grounds of their banners, and striped them with thirteen lists, as an emblem of their number and the union of the colonies." The same statement appears in "The British Annual Register" for 1776. This Grand Union flag seems to have been used by Ezek Hopkins at sea, in February, 1776.

LOS ANGELES POLICEWOMAN TELLS OF WORK

LOS ANGELES.—To coax unfortunate or foolish girls off the streets and out of parks; to extricate women from any predicament, no matter what nature; to provide homes for young women who have been cruelly deceived and left, helpless, with disheveled babes to care for, and in rare instances where it is deemed advisable, to force a marriage under these circumstances; to investigate and control all public places of amusements; and many social forces not known under that name—such as advertised divorce bureaus—this thing is the one policewoman Los Angeles possesses.

Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, the small but plucky woman who has been in office less than a year has already had cases of just such natures as these—had many more, and declares that there are such a number in this city that one woman cannot begin to handle them.

One of the earliest cases that came under her notice was that of two young girls whom she observed walking downtown one day.

Walking arm in arm down Broadway, they were "making eyes" at the men they passed, looking expectantly in front of cigar booths, giggling into the faces of any one who chanced to look their way. Mrs. Wells followed them for six or seven blocks before she made up her mind to speak to them, and then, with little hope of being listened to, she approached and said she would like to talk to them just a minute. The girls were surprised but attentive. She had never talked to their mother, and she was marked with respect, and finally one of them, acting as spokesman for both, replied to the effect that they hadn't thought how their conduct looked to others.

"We didn't want to be bad or look bad," she said earnestly, "but we work hard all day, and we just wanted a little rest. I've got a mother who can punish me if she knows I'm flirting with men on the street."

"And we've both got nice, steady young men, who wouldn't stand for it a minute if they knew," the other interrupted. "But you know how it is—the fellows went off to the beach for a week's vacation—and we don't think there's always just what they should be, and we wanted some fun—you know how young girls are."

"To be sure, girls want some fun," Mrs. Wells once said in telling about her work. "and when once you get into that misfortune follows in the wake of such fun when the girls are so completely uncared for as some that I've come across. One night I had been inspecting cheap restaurants in Soho, and I was standing on the edge of a row, accompanied by one of the police officers in plain clothes.

TAKING A GIRL HOME.

"We had worked our way back to North Main street by midnight, and I had entered a little cafe to see what was doing. We had been there but a minute when a little slip of a girl—only I afterwards learned was only 14 years old—came in on the arm of a young fellow. They sat down at a nearby table, but had not been there long enough for their order to be brought to them before the girl jumped up hastily and started out of the room.

"We went to see what was going on, and we slipped out after her. She was standing on the edge of the walk, looking dubiously toward the car line.

"It's pretty late for a little girl like you to be out alone," I said to her. "I'm a policeman," and I showed her my star. "Can't we take you home?"

"She was distinctly grateful for my presence, and telling us where she lived, started home under our guidance. She said she had been to several picture shows with the man, who had been all right during the evening, but after they were inside the restaurant he had made some improper remarks.

MOTHER "KIND OF WORRIED."

"It was 12:50 when we reached her home. She woke her mother up and made her come down to thank us. Wrapped in a fuzzy kimono and propping herself up in curl papers, the drowsy mother did thank us, saying in a careless way, 'I'm glad you brought her home—I was beginning to get kind of worried about her.'

"It is not to be wondered at that with mothers who begin to get kind of 'worried' at 1 o'clock at night when their 14-year-old daughters are not at home that the town has need for at least one policeman."

Among the recent cases under Mrs. Wells' jurisdiction was one of a Polish girl who came to California some eight months ago, securing a position in one of the hotels. She could speak no English, but she was a rosy-cheeked, slim little person, who speedily attracted the attention of one of the men employed in the hotel.

Though an Austrian, he could express himself fluently in Polish, but brokenly in English. He had known "Katie" for a couple of weeks only when he asked her to marry him, and she, consenting, allowed him to prevail upon her to put off the marriage from one time to another.

In a short time she realized that she was to be a mother. She sought advice from a Jewish woman who lived across the hallway from her apartment. The woman counseled her to go to one of the homes in the city where she would be taken care of, at least until after the baby came. She complied, sought admission was taken in at once by the kindly directors of the home to which she had turned. But only her material welfare was improved, for day after day she grieved for the man who had treated her so ill—day after day she worried over the hapless state to which her babe would be born.

And then one day one of the city officials, coming across her case, reported it to Mrs. Wells. "I'll go to her at once," said the policewoman, and accompanied by a detective she started out.

Katie seemed grateful for the new friend and told the whole story, explaining how absolutely the man had deserted her. Finally she gave his name, and Mrs. Wells tracked him through the hotel where he had formerly worked, and after finding him, swore out a warrant for his arrest. But he proved to be more docile than she had anticipated, and wanted to run away from Katie—love my baby. If you say, I marry Katie."

Upon consulting Katie, Mrs. Wells found out that the girl thought they could establish a really happy home between them, and could bring up the child without any disgrace. And so it was all arranged, a Polish minister secured, the marriage performed, and a home founded on material that might have gone far toward wrecking two lives, at least, of the trio.

Fires That Tear at Fighter's Heart

The burning of the Cudahy Beef Packing plant at Tenth avenue and Thirtieth street, New York City, was a fire that a fireman's heart out, says former Chief E. P. Croker, in a recent article.

This was in 1904. It started on the night of November 29, and not until the next afternoon did I have it where I wanted it. More than a hundred firemen were knocked out by the ammonia fumes or injured by falling debris. The smoke, too, was bad.

And, by the way, smoke tells a fireman much at the beginning of a blaze. There is the lazy smoke that rolls away in a leisurely way from a burning building which tells the fireman that no great heat has yet occurred and that the fire may be readily darkened by prompt action. It tells him also that the building may be entered without fear.

Then there is the heavy but active smoke that pours out in great billows and with great rapidity rises several hundred feet into the air. This smoke sometimes has a yellow-greenish color in it. This tells the fireman that the fire has been burning for some time and that it has found a draught. There is great heat there, and the fire must be approached with some degree of caution.

This fire of the Cudahy plant was sending out smoke of this second sort when I arrived. And I called on all the apparatus I felt I needed, without any delay. I knew that trouble would come when the ammonia pipes were reached. The ammonia was used in the refrigerators. The plant which furnished the ammonia was in the fire zone and the prospects of a long, hard fight were excellent. In the cellar of the packing-house were stored about 400 tons of coal, and this was bound to catch.

The area of the fire was not so large at first. I poured the water in and was making good, when what I most dreaded occurred. The ammonia pipes were torn apart and the stifling fumes came out in dense volumes. The men went down as though shot by guns. I had them carried to No. 481 West Fourteenth street, where the doctors from St. Vincent's Hospital revived them. Dozens of the men were knocked out and I called for more apparatus. The fire seemed to feed on the fumes and spread to the Hammond warehouses and to the abattoirs on Tenth avenue. The fire got into the coal and the heat was about as bad as I ever experienced. The fireboats gave us plenty of water. Time after time I felt we had the blaze under control when it would come up again with a fury which the water could not abate.

Chiefs Shea and Kenon were knocked out, but I couldn't keep them away. They returned to their positions and kept up the fight.

I recall that Lieutenant Andrews and a couple of men from Engine 15 were on a low shed with their pipe near where I was standing. The smoke, and it was an overpowering mass laden with the ammonia fumes, suddenly settled around them. I saw Andrews stagger forward and I got there in time to catch him. He was out for a while. It wasn't long after this that I was passing through beneath the sheds when the fumes hit me. I stopped back and into a hole. I went down to my armpits and things were getting ting black when two of my men dragged me out.

The fire had got good headway in the Hammond plant and I sent Captain Riley and his men into the cellar to cut a hole in the partition wall. This would let us get at the center of the fire. These fellows were in water up to their waists. They got the hole through and we had the fire there under control.

The fire loss was about $300,000. It was a continuous fight for 16 hours under the most annoying conditions. The fire in the coal continued for many hours. We let it burn out. When you pour water on a burning mass of coal hydrogen gas is formed which is very inflammable gas. And this assisted in the conflagration. It was this chemical action combined with ammonia fumes which retarded effective effort.

ROMANCE BALKED, CHOKES SELF

GREENPORT, N. Y.—Miss Edith Torrey, of Orient, has committed suicide at her home by choking herself to death.

Her action is supposed to have been caused by the objection of her parents to her proposed marriage to Willis Latham, of Greenport. They were to have been married in the late summer or early fall. She was 32 years old and Latham is 25.

Miss Torrey was in Greenport yesterday and met Latham. They went about the village together, and then Miss Torrey left for home. Marcus B. Terry, her father, is a wealthy resident of the Orient section, living out near the point in a handsome house.

Whether there was any family discussion of the proposed marriage last evening is not known. But in the evening Miss Torrey went to her room and strangled her ears and nose with cotton batting. Then she took a little stocking and making a slip noose drew it tight about her throat, choking herself. Her sister, Miss Carrie Torrey, entered the room and found her lying on the bed choking and gave the alarm. A physician was called, but she was dead when he arrived.

WITH BELLS ON HER TOES—

MISS KITTY GORDON
ENGLAND'S CHAMPION OF THE ANKLET

AGES may come and ages may go. Empires, kingdoms and republics rise and fall, primitive man evolve from his lowest and most brutal state of savagery to his present condition of veneer known as modern civilization. All these great changes and many more have taken place in the world's history and the end is not yet, but with these various alterations the world of fashion, the lady's world, is not concerned except in one particular that when its leaders feel so inclined they may hark back without being considered degenerate or primitive for their ideas to any bygone period no matter how remote and borrow for the vogue of today or tomorrow some obsolete custom which for ages has apparently been forgotten in the dim and misty past.

The above remarks are germane to the very latest fad of woman, I feel, a custom still to an extent in vogue in the Orient but borrowed originally from our most primitive cave dwelling ancestors, namely the Anklet.

Among the ladies of the harems of the rulers of the East from time beyond record the wearing of anklets on dainty limbs just below the edge of silken trousers, has prevailed as an almost universal custom. Many of these gaudy adornments are of gold and thickly encrusted with diamonds and other precious stones and not a few of them are of great intrinsic value. For ages they have been handed down from one generation of harem beauties to another, thus many of these anklets are of great age.

GOOD LUCK CHARM.

Again, when a rich Turk desires to especially please one of his favorites a most popular present has been an anklet for a charm of good luck is supposed by the superstitious Orientals to go with a present of this nature.

The introduction of the harem skirt into the Occident this spring is undoubtedly to blame for the wearing of anklets by Occidental women. This harem dress, which was a lot of fuss and flurry in many different ways since it came, like a sandstorm from the desert to sweep over the East. The best sensation it has brought with it is the anklet.

The first glimpse which the men of the modern world had of this new fad took place a few weeks ago when a real sensation, second only to that created by the initial appearing of the harem skirt, was provided in the paddock at the polo grounds in Paris by a French society women wearing plain and bejeweled anklets easily

Bible for Chinese Emperor

The Chinese Christians about a dozen years ago presented the Dowager Empress with a magnificent copy of the Scriptures translated into Chinese. It was a fine example of modern penmanship, the writing being on silk and the covers of the Bible being of silver. The gift was graciously received and Her Majesty read the book. This excited the Emperor's curiosity, and he ordered one of his eunuchs to obtain for him a copy of the New Testament.

The books formed part of the loot of the Forbidden City in 1900. The Emperor was a close student of the Testament, which was freely annotated by him. The Bible was found in the Empress' chamber and the Testament in the Emperor's study. The future ruler has been presented with another copy, but this has cost $4000. The regent in accepting the gift at the hands of the American minister, promised His Excellency that as soon as the Emperor has mastered his rudiments he shall study the sacred writings.—London Globe.

NEW LIBRARY SCHEME

The following scheme is about to be set on foot in Brussels for the diffusion of enlightening literature. A central library consisting of the outset of 10,000 choice volumes is, the Telegraph says, to be created there, and any inhabitant of any part of Belgium owning a savings bankbook will be entitled to borrow from it and receive by post any book for a period of a fortnight on checking a penny off his savings bankbook at the postoffice, his money at the bank serving as a guarantee for payment for books not returned.

As there are about 1500 postoffices in Belgium this will amount to the creation of a circulating library with 1500 branches whose risks will be more than covered by the deposits in the savings banks.—London Evening Standard.

CHICAGOAN RESPONSIBLE.

It is said that Mrs. Harold S. McCormick of Chicago is responsible for the origination of the anklet fashion in this part of the world, and she is reported as being in the habit of wearing one or two of these charms at all society functions she attends.

All the week after the appearance of the fair ankletted dames at the polo grounds in Paris the subject was eagerly discussed in the gay French capital, both in the drawing rooms of the more conservative Parisians and the fitting rooms of the Place Vendôme. While a number of smart women were inclined to take kindly to the novelty a large section of society seemed strongly opposed, protesting both privately and in society papers against what was called the "Americanization of Paris fashions."

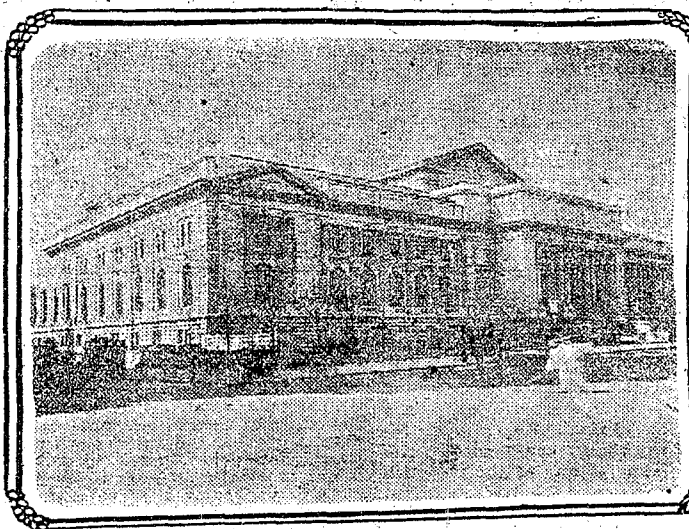

One of the best known jewelers of Paris, seeing the danger of loss of what promised to be a profitable trade, came forward at the proper moment with an interview in which he said: "That the controversy was bound to be settled in favor of the anklet as soon as it became known that the idea originated in Paris two years ago, and failed only because no women sufficiently prominent in society and sufficiently plucky would be the first to wear the anklet."

PREDICTION COMES TRUE.

"Mrs. McCormick has done it now," he concluded, "and I believe the fashion has come to stay." His prediction has since come true.

In England the anklet has found a very prominent champion in Miss Kitty Gordon, former wife of Lord Deedes' brother. Miss Gordon has been seen at many society functions of late

Gotham's Great Library

New York's New $9,000,000 Library.

NEW YORK. — In this age of steel frame buildings covered with stone facings one building will stand out from the rest. It is the new public library formally opened on May 23. It is built as the ancients built — for eternity.

The vault of the rotunda is a true vault, not a veneer hung from the ceiling, with a solid masonry. The roof is masonry, tiling, and metal. Steel has been used only where the architect would have used wood. This building has been often described and its external features have been noted, but the interior during the slow progress of its creation. Some of the things revealed for the first time when the public took possession are sketched as follows:

As a mechanism, and as a masterpiece of convenience, the library is believed to be without equal in the world. It has facilities, both ordinary and extraordinary, never before attempted.

CROWNING GLORY.

The crowning glory of the edifice, however, is the great reading room, the largest in the world, on the top floor at the rear, surmounting the stack room. It is 255 feet long, 77 feet wide and 50 feet high, with ceilings painted to simulate the cloud-drifted sky. Bisecting it is a double, round screen 34 feet wide and divided into arches, the purpose of which wearing a really wondrous anklet which perhaps surpasses anything of a similar nature in the harems of the Far East. It is made of gold and is set with twenty-five 2-carat diamonds, really quite a glittering display, and on a charming anklet calculated to turn almost any masculine head.

Speaking about the anklet Miss Gordon recently said: "I have had letters from a number of London friends in society and they told me that anklets of all sorts are being worn with evening gowns, which are made in harem skirt, or near harem skirt fashion. I thought I would be in fashion and have had these stones reset into the anklet."

"I think the idea splendid, and mark me, that Mrs. Lydig and all the ultra-fashionable women will be seen at the Casino in New Port and other places wearing anklets of some description this summer. They are tremendously fetching, and if one has a well-turned ankle there is no prettier or more delicate way of showing it, and why shouldn't it be shown?" she asked haltingly.

"I think the jeweled ones are far prettier and less cumbersome to wear than the heavy, all-gold ones," said Miss Gordon.

"Have you experienced any discomfort in wearing yours, that is, from

Some People Who Have Refused Checks

LONDON.—Although the late Mr. Gladstone, who was four times prime minister, wrote for the magazines and reviews, he did so only when he felt inclined or when he had something which he very specially wished to say, and no offer, however tempting, could persuade him to put pen to paper unless he felt some such necessity or call.

The editor of a certain Trans-Atlantic paper wrote to Gladstone for a contribution, offering him an unheard of sum at that time if he would accede his request. Gladstone refused, and the editor actually sent him a he wishes back to him. There are 63 miles of shelves in the stack room now, distributed each year for use to the citizens to special departments, making 90 miles in all.

Taft's Tribute.

President Taft, in his address at the opening of the library, dwelt on the marvelous facilities for distribution that this library possesses, saying: "It is not in the treasures of the various collections that go to make up this library that its chief value consists, wonderful as these are, and much as we are indebted to the Astors and James Lenox for the greater collection, but it is in the facility of circulation and in the immense number of books that are distributed each year for use to the citizens and residents of New York and vicinity, that this library easily takes the first rank."

The combination of the Astor, Lenox and Tilden foundations, supplemented by Mr. Carnegie's branch library, seems to Mr. Taft the great distinguishing fact to be recognized in this particular library system. By this consolidation the possible benefit for the individual contained in each is now distributed and brought within the reach and beneficial use of every New Yorker. He said: "A library which affords constant reference and reading room facilities to 1700 people and which circulates through 80 branches its books, at the rate of 5,000,000 a year, accomplishes so much more in the popular dissemination of knowledge than any other library in the world, that the men who conceived the plan and who had the energy, tact, patience, and knowledge with which to execute it, are those whom I would congratulate today. It is to the librarian and trustees of these various foundations that I would convey my profound congratulations."

blank check asking him to fill it up for himself and to name his own price. Even this failed to sway Gladstone, who returned the check as blank as it came.

BROWNING'S RESOLVE.

A somewhat similar incident happened to Robert Browning, the poet. Browning made a vow never to contribute to the magazines or reviews. The reason he gave was a curious one. He said that if his poetry appeared in a magazine or review which contained much other matter the people who bought it for the sake of that other matter would have his poetry thrust upon them whether they liked it or not, whereas, if they bought a book of poems by R. Browning, they bought it with their eyes open and because they wanted to read his work, and if they did not want it they could leave it alone. That was Browning's attitude towards the reading public, and it prevented him from contributing to periodicals except once, when he did it for charity. Nevertheless, this self-denying ordinance did not prevent editors worrying him for copy; but, though Browning was never a rich man, he constantly refused the most tempting offers. There is no doubt that an American magazine, as in Gladstone's case, tempted him with a blank check, but without success.

NOT FOR BINNS.

Jack Binns, who sent out from his watch-tower in mid-Atlantic wireless messages which brought help from hundreds of miles of ocean to the sinking vessel on which he was the electrician, and telegraphist, refused the most tempting offers from musical managers. Such wide-spread interest had his splendid devotion to duty aroused, together with his patience and his courage, not to mention the fact that he had saved hundreds of lives by that mysterious agent, wireless telegraphy, that there is no doubt that he would have been a great success, and could have made more in one week than he had ever previously made in a year. His answer, however, to the managers who tempted him was that he was not a musical-hall performer, but an electrician, so he refused their offers and went on with his work.

The trouble at Barcelona some

ALL STARE A BIT.

"Oh, they all stare a bit when I wear it, a waiter nearly spilled his tray of soup and things one night when I dined at the Ritz, but then they'd stare just the same if I wore it around my hair, so what's the odds? I think it a most attractive little fad, very feminine, even if it does hark back to its former use, the shackling of women slaves, for after all women are still slaves, this time to fashion. So, just to prove it I shall continue to wear my anklet, and just to prove that other women are ditto they will soon be wearing them. You watch and see," she concluded.

Apart from Mrs. McCormick that many American women have or are contemplating taking up with the fad is illustrated by the fact that all the fashionable jewelers now have anklets on display.

One of the new anklets which has recently been imported by a Fifth Avenue jeweler is made in serpent fashion with reversible jeweled eyes, emeralds on one side and rubies on the other, so that the wearer can wear the anklet to match the color of the gown she wears. The plain gold anklets, finely traced in Oriental designs, are also being shown.

So my lady fair, if you have traveled in the Far East, and have picked up a souvenir anklet, just take it out of your curio case and polish it up like the handle of the big front door, for you will need it if you will be in a mode.

Although it is doubtless true that so far as the Orient is concerned that the anklet has its origin as part of the shackling of women slaves it originated in the brain of primitive man as an ornament pure and simple. Among all the savage people it has been used for this purpose from the earliest times.

The first anklets were fashioned out of the bones or hide of animals, while grass and flowers were also used. Originally it was worn by both sexes and even today in the wilds of Africa and other spots where savage people still survive it is a favorite article of adornment among the masculine population.

Girl Will Take Novel Vacation

SPOKANE, Wash., June 1.—Fifteen hundred miles on horseback is the summer vacation trip, terminating at Phoenix, Arizona, upon which Miss Virginia Vance, a young school teacher, will start from Kennewick, Washington, on the morning of June 1. Her father and brothers will accompany her in a covered wagon and carry supplies and camp equipment, while Mrs. Vance and two younger children are to travel by water and rail to Fresno, California, to remain there until next fall, when they will join the rest of the family at Phoenix.

Miss Vance has decided upon a route to the Southwest through Oregon, Nevada and Arizona by way of Pendleton to Lakeview, thence to Crater Lake and into Nevada, keeping near the California line, and following the canyon of the Colorado river in Arizona. No effort will be made to establish a record, nor will Miss Vance offer souvenirs or photographs for sale to cover the expense of the trip, as is usually the case on similar tours. She has ample funds to carry her through, and, in addition, her father is a man of means.

Miss Vance has completed all preparations for the long ride and is looking forward with interest to the start. Traveling overland through picturesque scenery in almost the same style as the early settlers came into the western country will, she believes, be an interesting and valuable experience. The little party will sleep in the open, cooking the meals at campfires and stopping occasionally to hunt and fish. It is also planned to make detours into the surrounding country along the California border.

"I have been planning this trip for a long time," Miss Vance said, "but the opportunity to make it was not offered until my parents decided to make their future home in Arizona. Of course, I expect to return to eastern Washington next fall, probably traveling through California, where I may make numerous stops."

Denies That She Was Charmer :

CHICAGO.—Miss Lodahe Miller, accused of charming away $11,000 cash and two fine farms of "Sentimental Tommy" Foulkes, the Danbury, Ia., farmer, who declared he could not resist her smiles, calmly and coolly denied every charge Foulkes made when she took the stand in her own behalf today. She accompanied many of her denials with a rippling laughter, which approached scorn, when she declared she had never asked Foulkes to find out whether or not it would be all right for them to go to Salt Lake City to be married.

Foulkes sat smiling as she denied point blank assertion after assertion he had made. "She certainly can tell them," was the only remark he made as he left the courtroom at the noon adjournment.

Miss Miller took the stand after a mo-

George Frederick Watts was another painter who refused to sell his pictures. BRAVO, MRS. BROWN.

A typical Scotswoman was Mrs. Brown, wife of the custodian of the house in Dumfries where Robert Burns died. She was a descendant of the famous poet. When the great exhibition was held in Chicago some years ago she received tempting offers to go and sit in Burns' cottage which the enthusiastic American-Scots erected in the grounds. She refused, and told the writer that "she could not bear the idea of being stared at like a wild beast for a' the gowd in the world."

GENUS HOMO IN THE HOUSE

IN June when the sun is bright and warm outside and it is good, hat in hand, to walk slowly along the shady side of Pennsylvania avenue to keep cool and enjoy summer life out of doors in the national capital.

And when the National House of Representatives in the cool seclusion of its chamber grows more and more over some "musty" legislation which should have passed out of their hands several sessions ago, then the near idle correspondent in the press gallery takes the time for the first time during the session—that is if he is of a really inquiring turn of mind as all good newspaper men are supposed to be—to study carefully the separate and distinct types of the genus homo among the members of the House.

One correspondent who perhaps wanted to be ranked as a humorist among his fellows, recently remarked, when questioned about these self-same congressional types, that there were 291 of them in the harmless class, that is leaving out the uncomplimentary classifications. But this seemed a little too comprehensive a view of the matter and rather confusing to the majority of the correspondents, so one of them took the trouble to specialize and subdivide, with the result that twelve "real types" were found and these were again divided and reduced to five:

1. The baldest man—Nicholas Longworth of Ohio.
2. The man with the most hair—Edmund T. Stack of Illinois.
3. The biggest man—"Ollie" James of Kentucky.
4. The smallest man—S. W. Smith of Michigan.
5. Man with the biggest voice—Richmond P. Hobson of Alabama.
6. Man with the whispering voice—General Isaac Sherwood of Ohio.
7. The House Beau Brummel—"Jimmy" Burke of Pennsylvania.
8. The House satirist—Claude Kitchen of North Carolina.
9. The veteran member—"Father" Henry H. Bingham of Pennsylvania.
10. The youngest member of the House—Wm. F. Murry of Massachusetts.
11. The busiest member—James R. Mann of Illinois, minority member.
12. The richest man—William B. McKinley of Illinois.

Of the above list the five who were picked out for special distinction and mention were Representatives Burke, Bingham, James, McKinley and Kitchen.

RICHEST MAN IN HOUSE.

Undoubtedly it would never have come to have overlooked the "richest" man in the House list, for Representative William B. McKinley has had perhaps the most picturesque and phenomenally successful public career of any of the nearly 400 members of the popular branch of the national legislature.

He is a short man, but little over five feet in height, or as his private secretary would assure you, "just Napoleon" in size, you know.

The top of his head has that round contour and guilelessness of hirsute appendage which it shares in common with a billiard ball. There is a little fringe of mustache on his upper lip, and there is nothing about his regular features to arrest attention. If there is one thing above another that marks Mr. McKinley as a man of action, and one born to excel among his fellowmen, it is his alert gray eyes. Then, for many years, the direct, direct manner of his talk, which marks him as a man among his fellows, and such he has proved himself to be since coming to Washington a comparative stranger.

Out St. Louis way, and through Illinois, Mr. McKinley is best known as a traction magnate. His career in that direction has been a phenomenal one. He started in business with his uncle, who was a mortgage and loan broker in Champaign, when he was only 15 years old. By the time he was a little past 20 he conceived the idea of building an electric light plant for his home city and a little later a waterworks. Seeking new fields to conquer, he began the construction of similar plants in leading towns throughout Illinois. Then he turned his attention to the street railway business and bought over the old horse-car line which connected Champaign with Urbana, and substituted electricity for the mules of that road.

ALL WESTINGHOUSE.

That line became the first all-Westinghouse concern in the United States. This was in the early '80s, and previous to that time there had been some Westinghouse equipment, but the famous firm of electricians had never completely equipped a single line before. Mr. McKinley in spite of his great personal resources has been obliged to enlist outside capital, and indeed this has been the secret of his great business success. It has been said of him that the eastern and English investors who first became associated with him in his early enterprises have stuck to him up to this time and have never lost a dollar, and now have such implicit confidence in his judgment that they practically give him carte blanche to enlist their resources in any enterprise which, in his judgment, will prove successful. That is the reason why he was able to engage, almost offhand, in a $2,000,000-bridge enterprise in St. Louis, and why he today personally controls 800 miles of street and interurban railways in Illinois. Anyone who has seen Ollie M. James of Kentucky will freely acknowledge that he can safely lay claim to being a physical giant. He is the biggest man his state has ever sent to Congress, and some giant statesmen have come to Washington from the mountains of the commonwealth. Ollie is about six feet six inches. He weighs in the neighborhood of 350 pounds, and has a pair of abnormally long arms. His great bulk and huge dangling arms give an impression of overpowering strength.

LOYAL TO BRYAN.

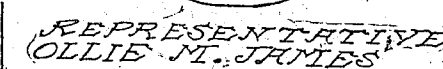

James is the most loyal Bryan supporter in Congress. He is a partisan through and through, and if he is named as a member of the investigating committee he may be counted on to ask some embarrassing questions.

Indeed there are a good many Congressmen who will tell you that James is a trouble-maker of the first class. General Henry Harrison Bingham, the "father" of the House, has had a brilliant career in Congress, a career indeed without precedent, save, perhaps, in the record of the late William D. Kelly, while his record in the volunteer army of the United States in the "war between the states," in which he arose from the shoulder straps of a lieutenant to the stars of a general, possessing the medal of honor by Congress for exceptional bravery, causes every Pennsylvanian to be proud of his distinguished son.

General Bingham was born in Philadelphia on Ninth street, between Market and Arch, on the 4th of December, 1841. He is the son of James Bingham, who back in the early 'forties" was the senior member of the firm of Bingham & Dock, which was engaged in the general freighting and railroad transportation business between Pittsburg and New York. His grandfather, Thomas, came from County Tyrone, Ireland, and his grandmother, Margaret Cameron, was a cousin of General Simon Cameron, so conspicuously identified with the political history of Pennsylvania.

Young Bingham entered Jefferson College, which is located in Washington county, Pennsylvania, in 1858, when he had attained the age of 16, and was graduated in 1862, receiving his degree of A. B. Some five years later that of A. M., and in 1902 that of LL. D., from the Washington and Jefferson College, all the degrees that it is possible for the college to bestow.

He was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg in 1863, at Spottsylvania, 1864, and at Farmville, in 1865, two days before the close of the war, and was graduated in 1864 at the battle of Boynton Plank Road, but escaped during the night. In every official report of the leading engagements in which he participated he was, without an exception, mentioned for distinguished services.

That Representative Kitchen's title of the "House Satirist" is well earned many of his associates against whom his shafts have been directed, can testify. His wit, however, they are equally willing to acknowledge, is without venom. Consequently he is most popular. He started out in life with the purpose of devoting himself to his chosen profession, the law, and had held no office until elected to Congress, some nine or ten years ago.

His district was formerly Republican, and was represented several terms by the lone negro Congressman, George White. The latter was not renominated and Mr. Kitchen was put in the contest against J. J. Martin, a Republican, and was elected by a large majority.

ATTRACTS ATTENTION.

He first attracted public attention in his district and state through his prominent connection with what was known as the "red-shirt" movement. That was a combination of white voters in North Carolina for the avowed purpose of eliminating the negro from office and politics if possible. Outside of its sensational and unique character its methods were peaceful, but many regarded it as a warning and threat that stern measures would be resorted to if necessary to sustain the dominancy of the white man.

And now we come to Beau Brummel of the House, "Jimmy" Burke of Pennsylvania. Although it might be incidentally remarked that about thirty members of Congress are addicted to the habit of wearing a carnation and that there are other members who consider themselves "classy" dressers, yet none of them attempt to shine in the splendid raiments of Burke. It is no exaggeration to say that dress with him has been carried to the point of a fine art and a son of his fellow-members not long ago remarked, "He is always a symphony in some shade or other."

Representative Burke comes from Pittsburg from which city he was elected to Congress. He received his education in public schools and from private tutors and while an office boy, by studious application, learned stenography which contributed largely to a successful start in life. When quite young he was appointed court stenographer and was graduated from the law department of the Michigan university in 1892, standing fourth in a class of 200. After his graduation he was admitted to practice in the courts of Michigan and December 16, 1893, was admitted to the bar of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania. In 1901 he was nominated for congress, but the political revolution in Allegheny county, which materialized in the Citizens' party, consigned him to defeat, although he led all other candidates on the ticket. In 1904 all the defeated congressional nominees, including Mr. Burke, were renominated and elected by immense majorities.

TIMBER AND GUM INDUSTRIES OF NEW ZEALAND

New Zealand has several large companies engaged in preparing the great kauri tree for utilization. The beautiful forests of the North Island, one of which is 70 miles long, are made up largely of this splendid and valuable hardwood, which is native to the country.

In outward appearance the tree is not unlike the California redwood, and grows to similar dimensions. It is an uncommon thing for the bushmen to find a tree of eight or nine feet in diameter and 150 feet high. For many years the lumber companies have been robbing the forest of their greatest asset, and by far their most majestic inhabitants.

But in spite of this the supply is as yet comparatively unlimited, as only the fully matured trees are felled, and the man behind the ax will carefully push the tree into the forest in search of the full grown trees, rather than take from the future its own.

Getting the trees from the heart of the bush to the mills involves many difficulties, and here the working bullock takes an important part. In many instances railway lines have to be built far into the bush to a spot where a large number of big trees have been located.

The fact that trees fit for cutting are generally found in goodly numbers, with in a comparatively small area, counts well in the eyes of the bushman. After the trees are felled and branches trimmed off they are placed onto trucks and secured with great iron chains. Sometimes three or four logs can be put into one load, and sometimes it takes a team of fourteen bullocks, yoked together in couples, to drag a single log to its destination.

In places where a road runs near the growing trees the railway is, of course, unnecessary. In such cases the logs are drawn by the bullocks on a kind of long low truck built especially for the purpose.

The numerous navigable rivers in New Zealand form an important part in transporting the logs to the mills when such is necessary.

Recent discoveries have proved beyond question the wonderful durability of kauri timber. At Manurewa, the Pa-pakura Valley Sawmilling company is engaged in a most unique industry. All round the district there have been found many hundreds of kauri trees, or logs, the remains of an ancient forest. These logs are buried underground, and the company is digging them up and converting them into timber. The logs must be hundreds of years old, for never in the history of man has a kauri tree been seen growing in the district.

Most of the finished lumber is, of course, used for ordinary purposes, but there is one rare species which ranks high in value, and is known as mottled kauri. The timber taken from this special tree is surprisingly beautiful when dressed and polished.

The wood is full of little knots and twists, somewhat after the style of a good piece of birdseye maple. It grows in several different shades, varying from a deep golden to a rich mahogany color. It is utilized as a material for pianos, fine furniture and for ornamental purposes.

The manufacturers sometimes effect a combination of the differently-shaded kauri inlaid in the one article, and the result is very rich and beautiful. Tourists to the country carry away many thousands of small fancy boxes and objects made from a number of pieces of different shaded kauri inlaid and value them very highly. Articles made from mottled kauri is, of course, very expensive.

Hand in hand with kauri timber goes the twin industry of kauri gum digging. The gum is a kind of resin product of the tree, and is dug out of the ground in great lumps. Gum diggers occupy their time locating the buried lumps with long iron spears and then digging it up with pick and shovel.

For the pure gum, cleaned and scraped, there is always a very ready market. This gum is of a deep golden color and very beautifully grained. The inferior qualities are neither so pretty nor so hard. There is also a black kauri gum which is rated as second-class.

Very artistic are the ornaments, and jewelry made from kauri gum of the first quality. Some of the very large lumps pictures and statuettes, etc., are carved by hand, the gum lending itself to this sort of thing very readily. — Los Angeles Times.

Car Rowdies Try to Disrobe Girl

NEW YORK.—As a trolley car from the Newtown section of Long Island neared Woodside about 11 o'clock last night, a dozen young rowdies who had been annoying the passengers, suddenly seized a young girl standing in the middle of the car and rushed her to one end of it.

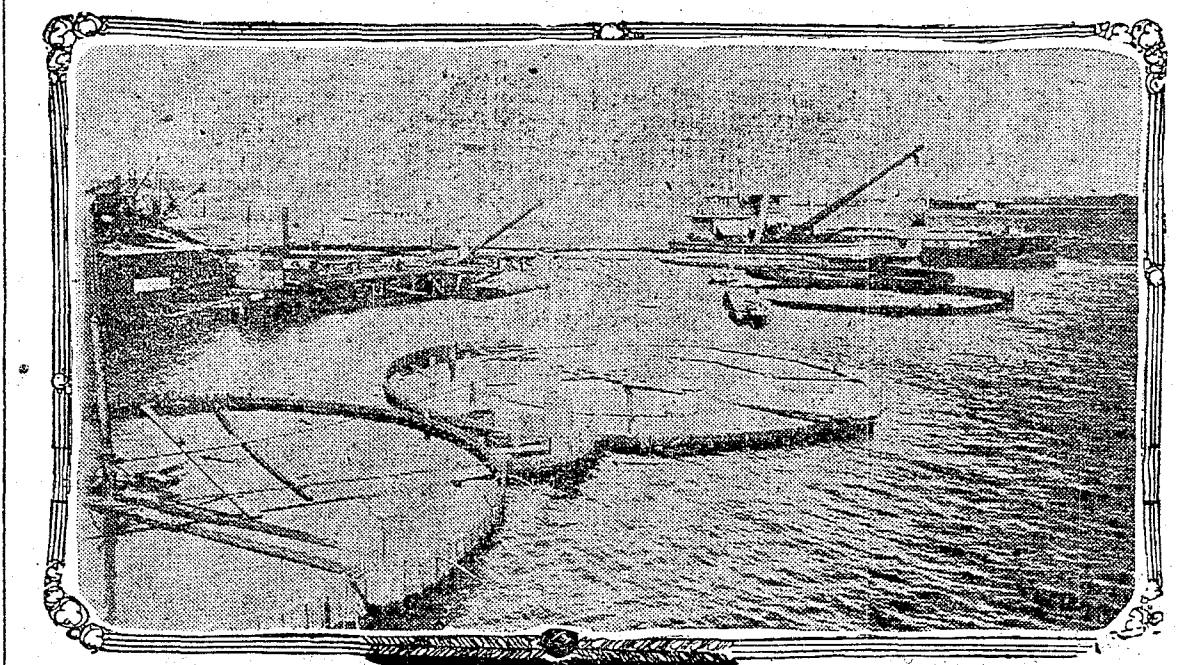

There they began to disrobe her and had torn her shirtwaist partly off when the other passengers attacked the rowdies and drove them away from the girl, who was shrieking hysterically. The car was sent speedily to Woodside, where it was known a special detail of police had been stationed to deal with rowdies.

The police arrested seven young men, who were locked up charged with disorderly conduct. The girl who had been attacked was so agitated she could not be prevailed upon to make a complaint of assault.

UNCLE SAM FOOLS CUPID.

HAMMOND, Ind. — When United States marshals tried to arrest Bill Senchi at his wedding at Indiana Harbor he flashed a marriage license in their faces and told them that Cupid was a bigger man than Uncle Sam. Senchi is a saloonkeeper who forgot to pay government tax. Senchi had invited 400 friends and a brass band to be present at his marriage to Mary Sekar. United States Marshals Boyd and Martin nearly started a riot by arresting the bridegroom, who finally concluded that the marshals were even huskier than Cupid. The wedding was delayed two hours.

Wreck of Maine Exposed to View by Engineers at Work on Big Cofferdam

THE WRECK OF THE BATTLESHIP MAINE BEING RAISED IN HAVANA HARBOR.

HAVANA, June 18. — The engineers in charge of raising the wreck of the battleship Maine from the harbor of Havana have completed the construction of the cofferdam and have begun the work of pumping out the water. Part of the wreck has been exposed to view. It will take six weeks longer to complete this. It has not yet been determined what will be done with the wreck when the pumping is concluded. It has been proposed that it be towed out to sea and there sunk in deep water.

Raising Fish on a Kansas Farm

KANSAS CITY.—Eugene Catta of Langdon, Reno county Kansas, is the most successful fish culturist in America, yet he probably could not tell the scientific name of any of the varieties of fish he grows. He has mastered secrets of nature that still are puzzling all the experts in the employ of the States and the national government, yet he would have difficulty in propagating down on paper a list of the insect and vegetable foods on which his fish subsist.

While there are half a dozen government and State fish hatcheries in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, Catta seldom sells fish from his hatchery that are less than six months old. From the time they are hatched in the spring until they are shipped in the fall he watches over them and feeds them. Each year he plants in the breeding ponds moss and other vegetable growth and the insects on which the young fish subsist. He may not be able to tell the names of the vegetable growths or the insects, but he knows from experience that they are necessary to the welfare of the baby bass.

"A bass of six months old that has been properly fed is of a size to take care of itself in strange waters," he says, "and there is no reason why such a bass should not grow to maturity."

In spite of his success as a breeder Catta is not growing rich on his fish farm. Probably one reason he sticks to the old industry is that he gets a lot of enjoyment along with the hard work. He grows about eighty thousand young fish annually, of which by far the greater number are black bass. Other varieties in his chain of ten breeding ponds are strawberry bass or giant crappie, yellow perch, rock bass and goldfish.

TOOK BRIDE TO PAY BILL

NEW YORK.—While Charles H. Roth, a Yonkers grocer, and the crippled girl whom he married, are detained in New Haven, Mrs. William Risk, the girl's mother, gave the Yonkers police some further particulars of the runaway marriage. Roth served the Risks with groceries and Mrs. Risk found herself unable to pay the bill a few weeks ago.

"Never mind about the bill," she quotes Roth as saying, "Let it run as long as you please, I may take your daughter in payment."

Mrs. Risk told the police that she is now sure that Roth, who is a married man and has a son twelve years old, was making love to her daughter Clara even then.

The elopement took place on Monday from Peekskill, where Clara Risk had gone to visit friends. Mrs. Risk sent her son-in-law to Peekskill, who was told by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Gilles, with whom Clara stopped, that the Gilles, Clara and Roth had motored to New Haven, where Mr. and Mrs. Gilles had seen them married. The Gilles said that Roth told them he had been divorced.

The hearing on bigamy charge of Mrs. Roth against her husband in New Haven was adjourned until Friday. A dispatch from New Haven said that when Roth and Miss Risk were married there by the Rev. Frederick M. Burgess he procured a license as Carl H. Bornedorf.

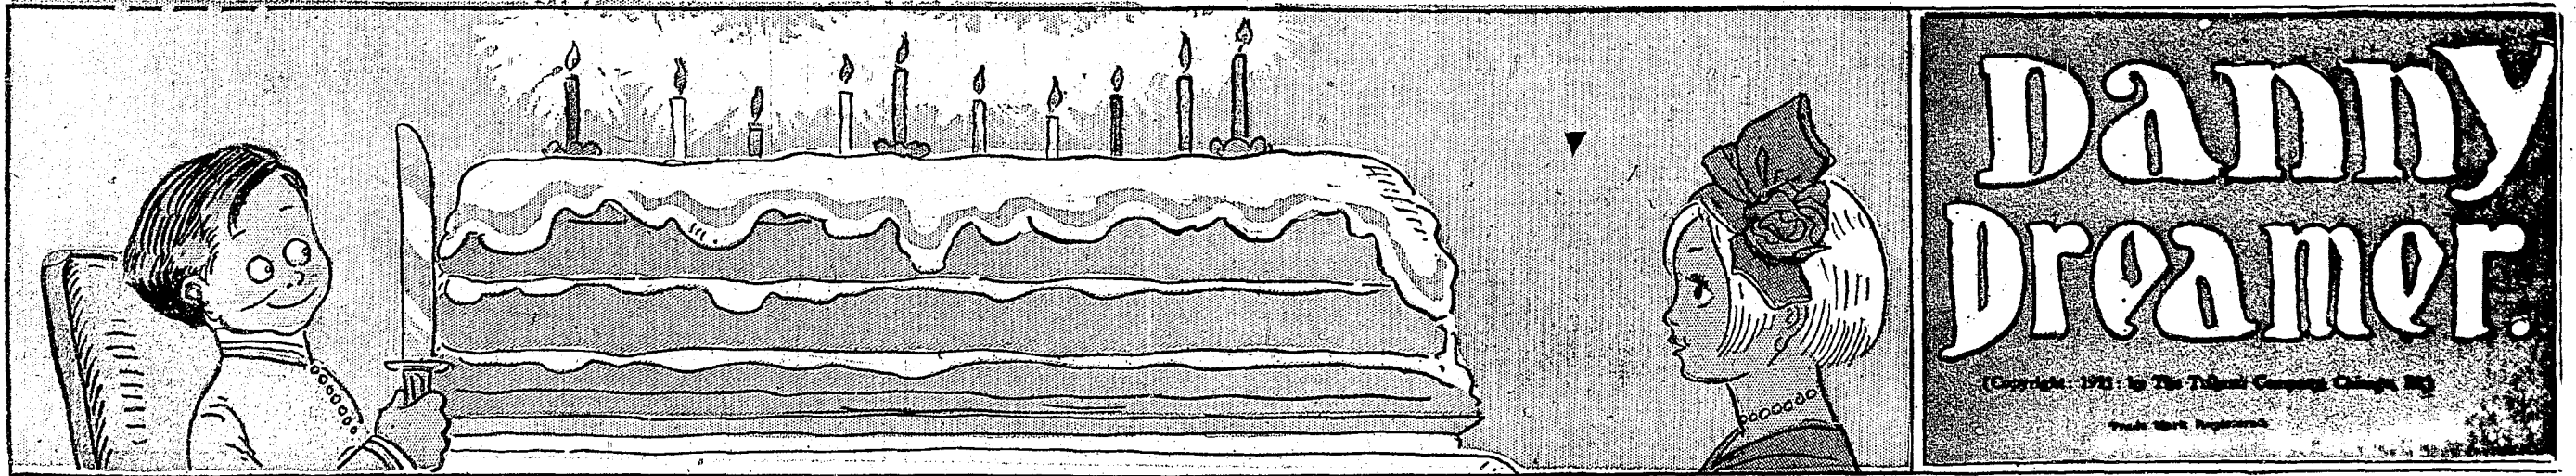

Miss Risk is held as a material witness against Roth.

SO SUDDEN.

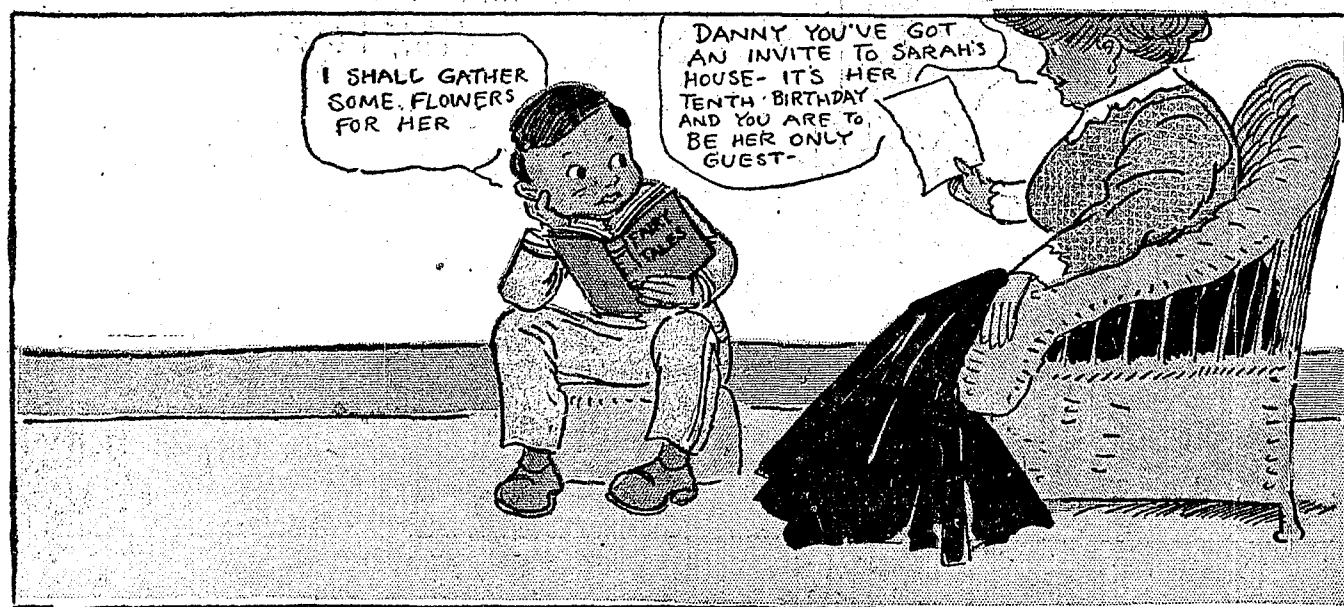

She had not dreamed he would propose. And this is her confession: She bore up bravely to the close. Then lost her self-possession. —Woman's Home Companion.

DANNY HAS BEEN READING FAIRY TALES AGAIN. HE IMAGINES THIS WHEN INVITED TO SARAH'S HOUSE

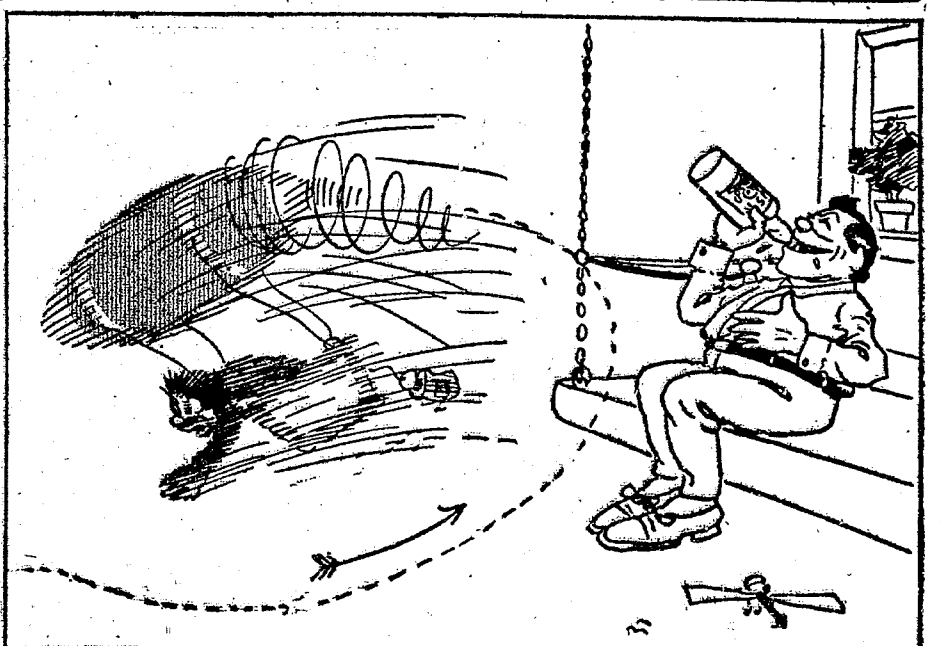

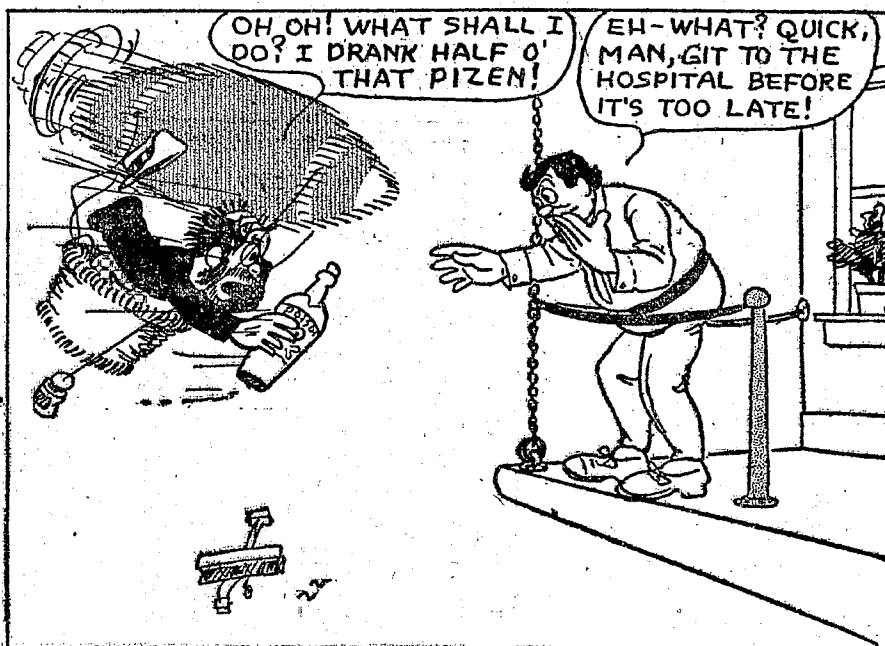

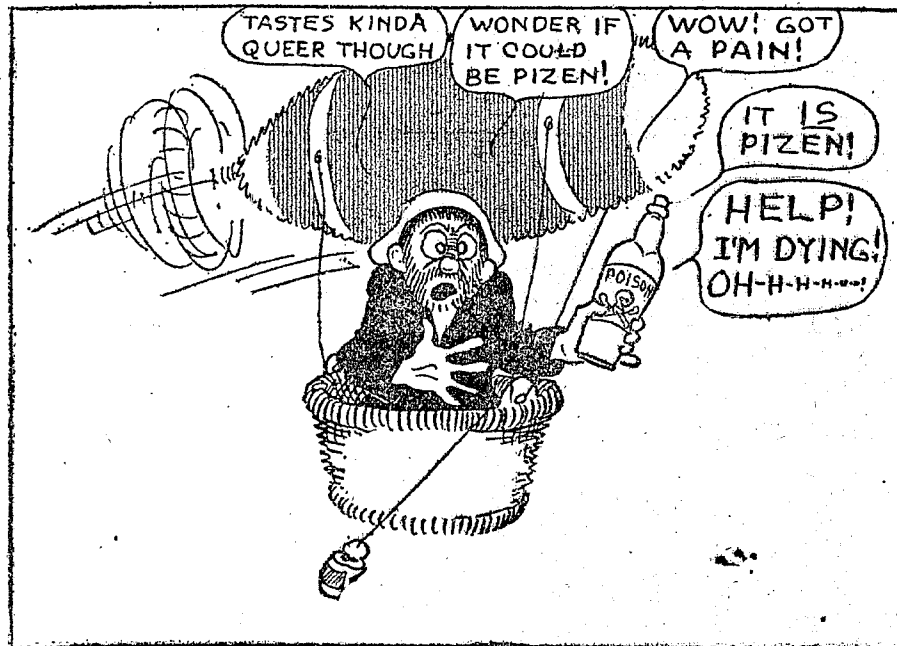

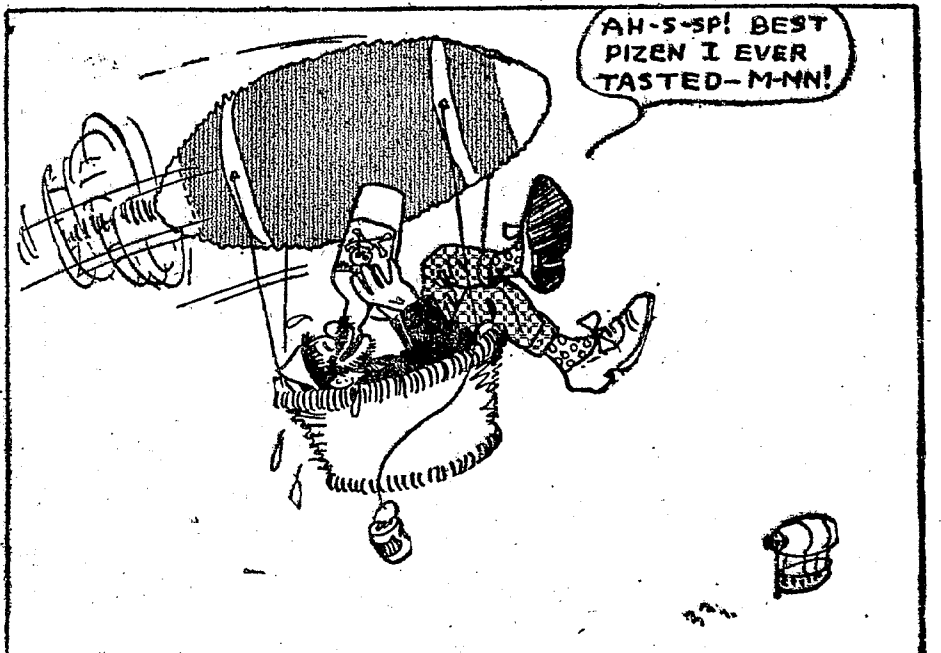

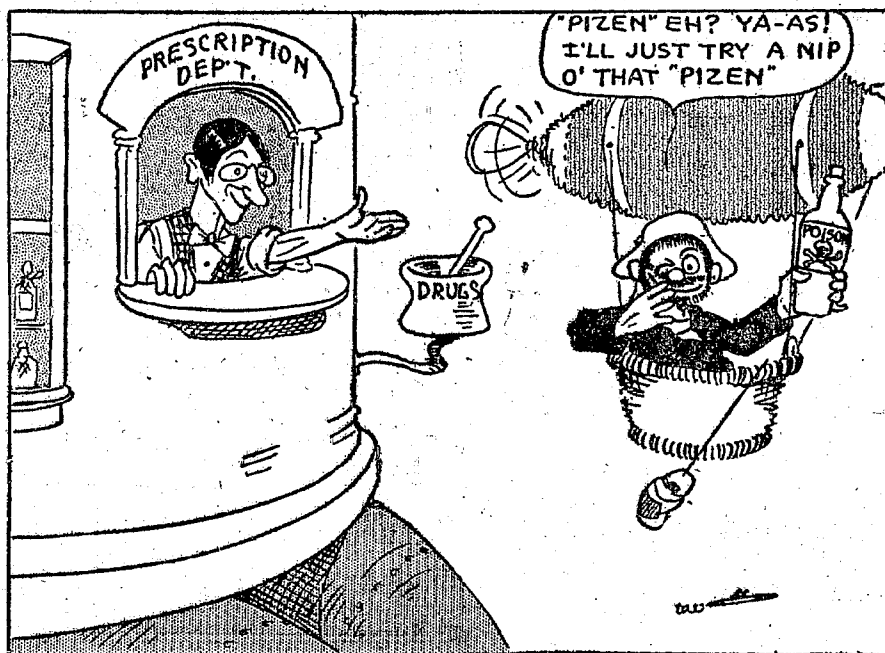

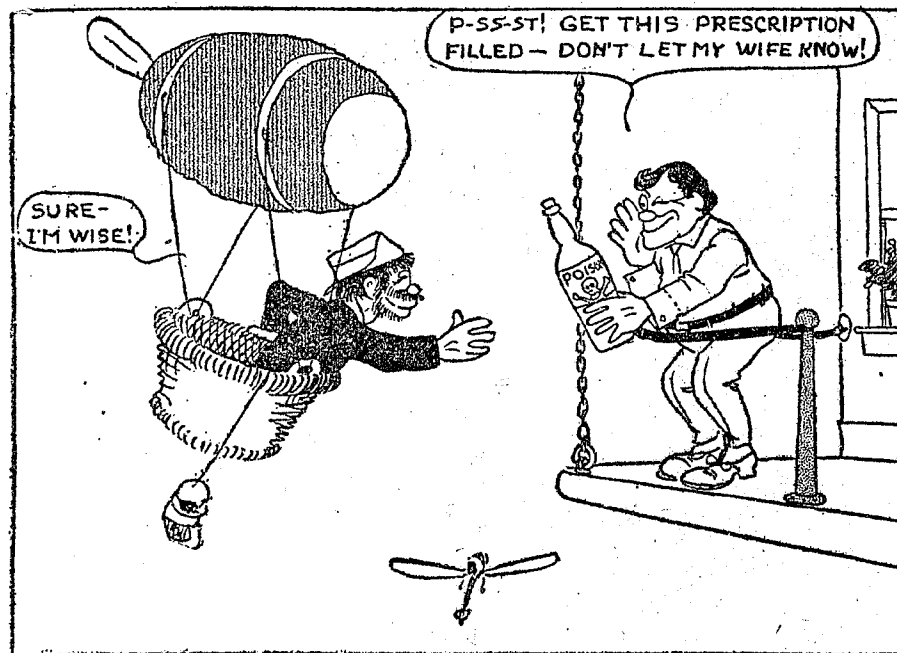

BUT! WHAT HAPPENED TO DANNY WASN'T ONE BIT LIKE A FAIRY TALE. IT WAS LIKE THIS-

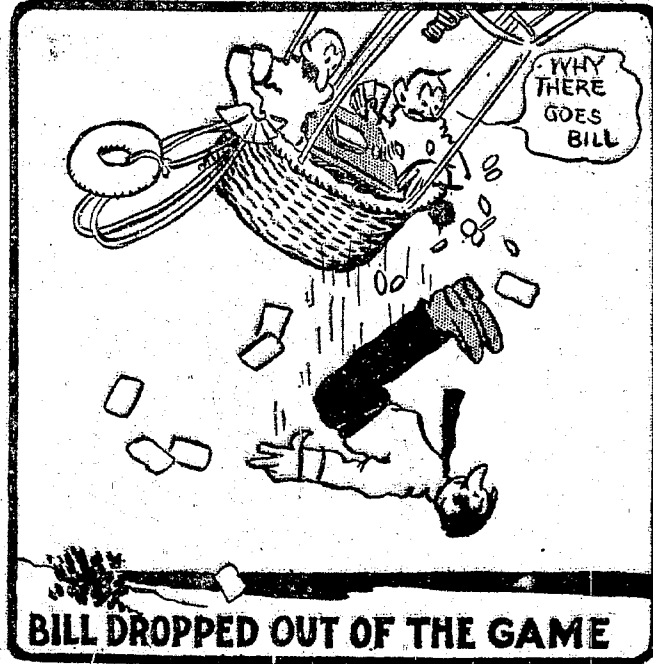

AUGUSTUS, THAT WAS THE BASEST HIT YOU EVER MADE

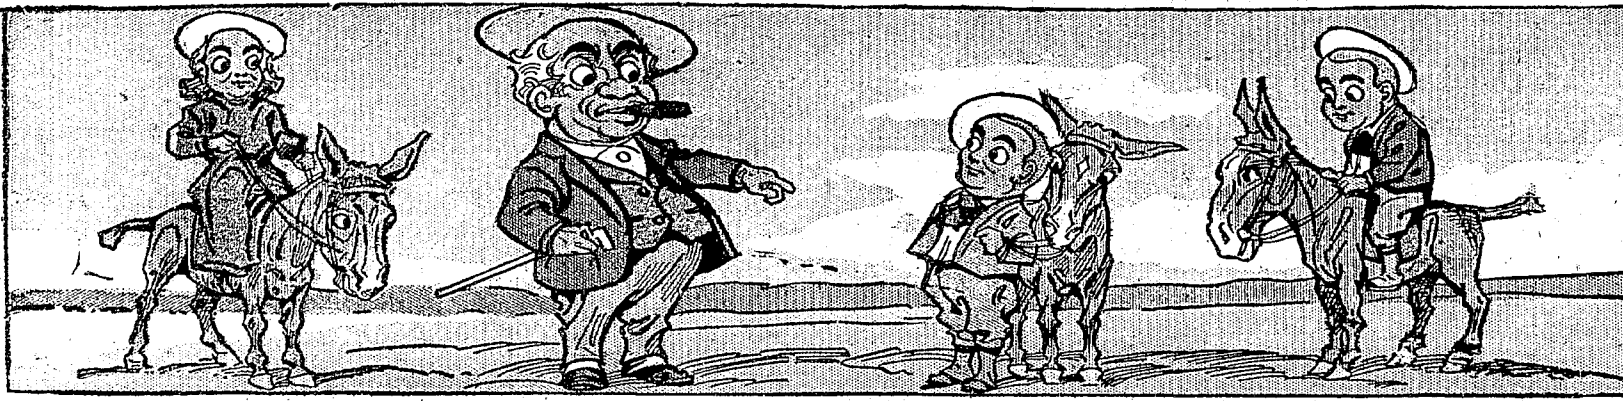

UP IN THE AIR WITH HUNGRY HALLEY

HONEST, HAROLD, DO YOU MEAN WHAT YOU SAY?

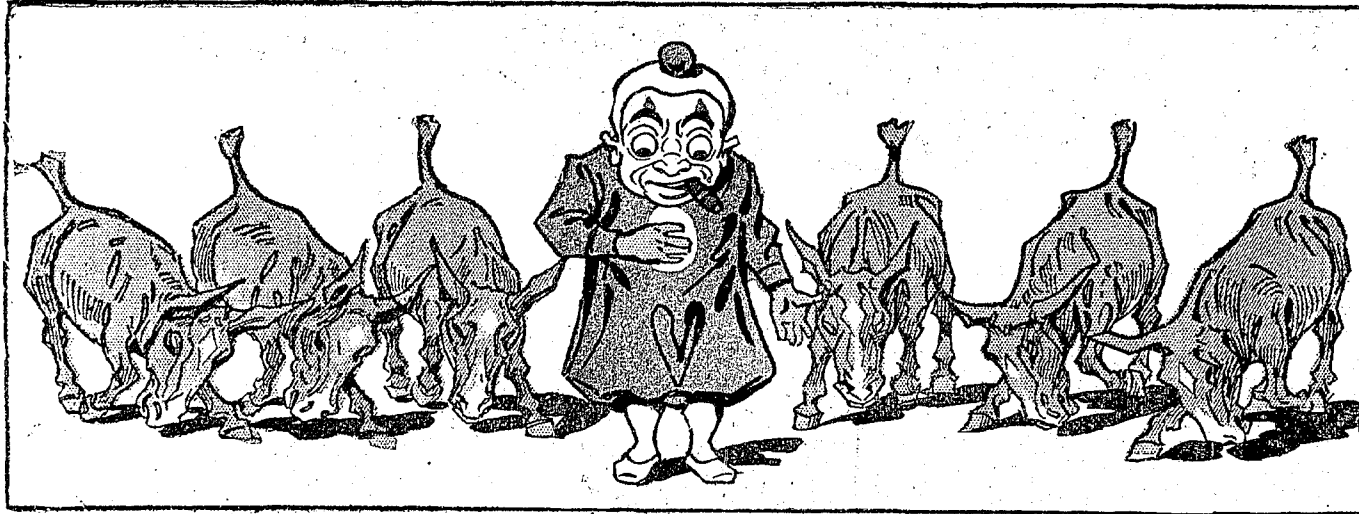

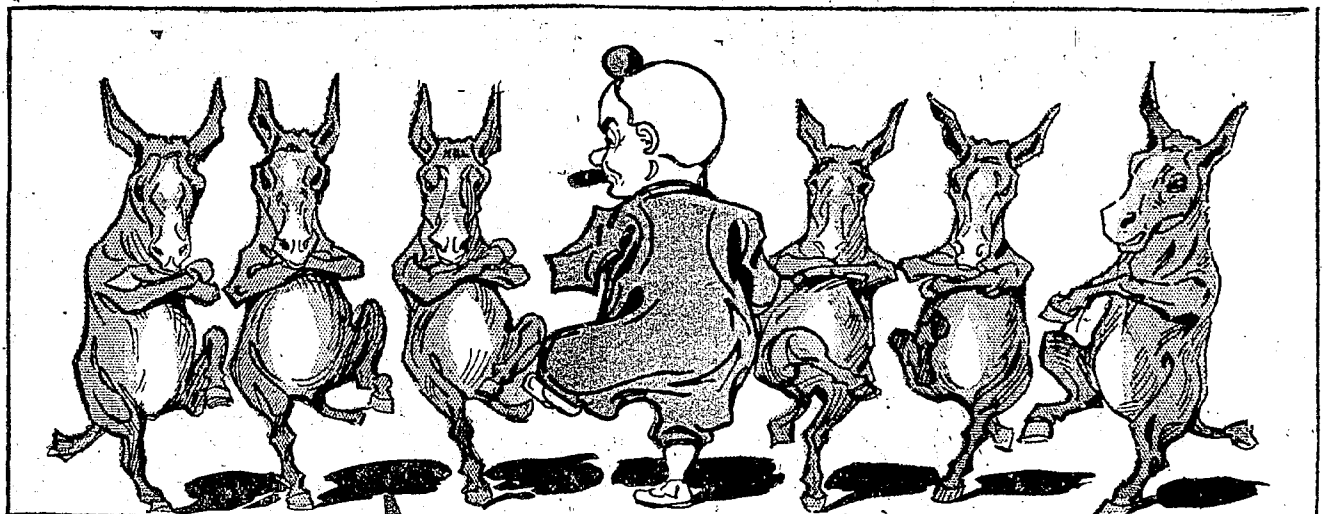

New donkeys upon which to ride this summer, eh? Well, I only wish I had the time and patience to teach them some of the tricks I once taught six of the brainiest donkeys that ever walked on shoes. Those donkeys loved me like a brother—that is, er—they loved me as their master, and I don't think there was anything in the world they wouldn't do for me. I hated to part with those animals, but they died and I just had to. They were all the same color and exactly the same size, and I want to tell you made a pretty picture standing side by side.

OLD OPIE DILLDOCK'S STORIES

(Copyright: 1911: by The Tribune Company, Chicago, Ill.)

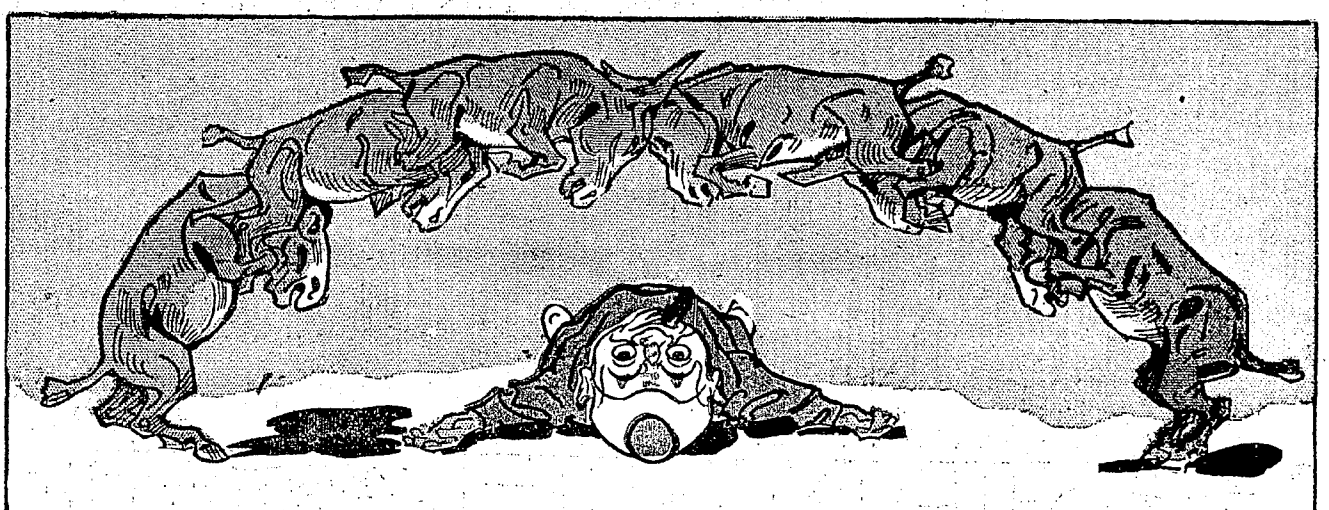

These six donkeys that I had were absolutely intelligent. I trained them long and arduously, for at that time I was a poor man and expected to make my living with these donkeys in the world's greatest circus. Simultaneously with me, they would make their bow to an imaginative audience.

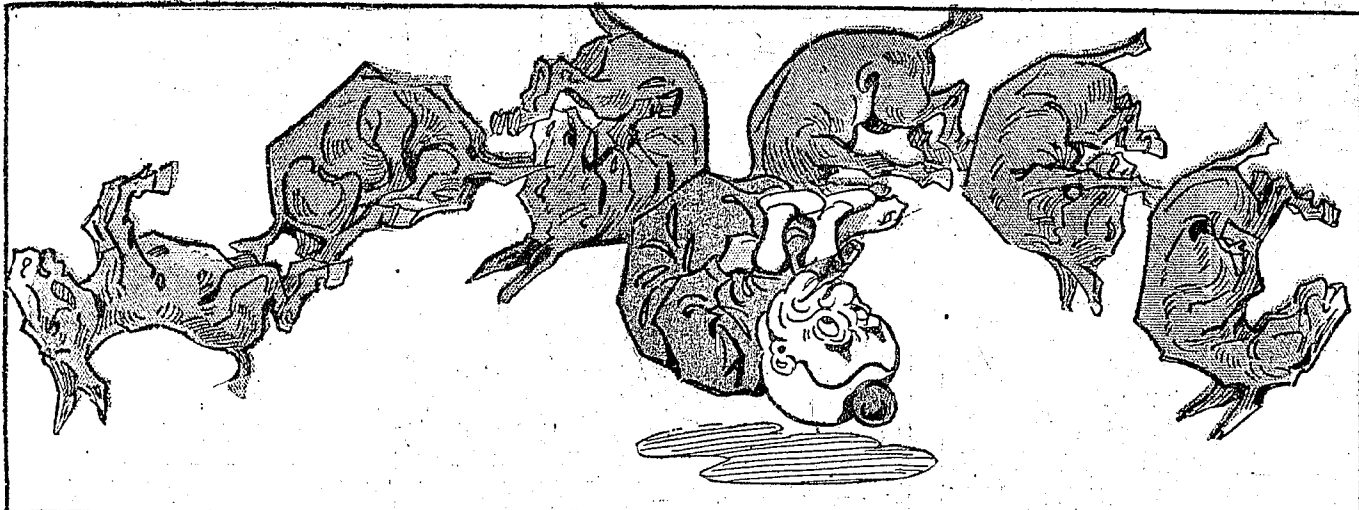

They followed my motions carefully. One of our first tricks was a dance, prancing first on one foot and then on the other. Standing on their hind legs, they would lift the left foot or right foot and dance in unison with me. Their hoofs sounded on the boards with the sound of one foot.

Honestly, you wouldn't believe donkeys possessed such almost human intelligence. But they followed my every movement with the precision of clockwork, and when I gave a spring and stood on my hands, promptly their hind legs would go in the air and they also would stand on their "hands."

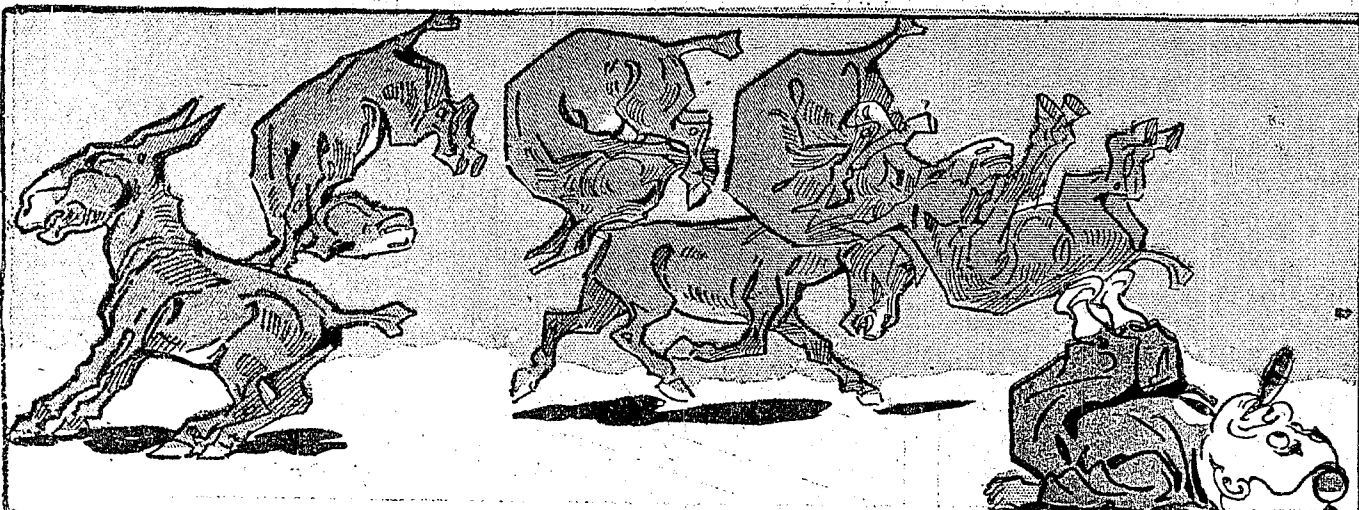

I next would sprawl on the floor flat on my back. This was a hazardous trick for me, for should one donkey lose his balance they would crash down upon me; for in this trick they formed what is known as the "span of life" over my body, the donkeys forming a high arch over me for several minutes.

Next we would turn innumerable handsprings. This was a trick in which the donkeys took keen delight. One of the hardest things I had to do while teaching them was to make them stop turning when once they started on this trick. They would have handsprung themselves to death had I permitted them to do so.

The mules at either end of the line then would bounce me back and forth like a rubber ball. This they did by standing on their forefeet and gently kicking me back and forth. You've seen Japanese jugglers perform this feat with large rubber balls. Never once, however, did those two donkeys hurt me.

Then we did the human whirling. Balancing the donkeys one by one on my feet I would somersault them forward about twenty feet. Spinning thus, they "heehawed" merrily, landing squarely on all four feet, turning quickly and coming back for more. And they never tried to steal each other's turn.

Leading the line, I would stand on one hand. This was too simple for the donkeys, whom I taught to stand steadily side by side and waltz upon their ears to the strains of a delectable waltz which the band would strike up. They enjoyed this trick, too, and none of them ever tired of it.

Never saw a donkey toe dancer, did you? Well, I had six of 'em. With one foreleg and both hind legs held high in air, they would balance themselves steadily upon the tips of their right shoes. Not a muscle did they move as they did this trick, and only quit when I gave the signal.

Our last trick, of course, was the hardest. Taking a long pole, I motioned for three donkeys to balance themselves on my right, their shoulders to the pole, the other three doing the same thing on the left hand side. Then I held them all in the air as they "heehawed" and I bowed to the audience.

Mayor Mott About Ready to Undertake Reorganization of Government

Commission System Paves Way for Radical Changes in Public Affairs

Mayor Frank K. Mott left for Humboldt county yesterday, and will be gone for two or three days on business. On his return the mayor will immediately set to work preparing for the organization of the municipal government under the new charter, and at that time announcement will be made of the assignments of the commissioners to the various departments. The latter part of next week will be taken up by several conferences of the new council to prepare the routine of the first days under the charter providing a commission form of government. Complete reorganization of most of the departments is entailed by the transition to the new form of government.

SOME RADICAL CHANGES.

The department of public works, which will be under the control of public works, must undergo the most radical transformation. This department in the past has been a fee office—almost an advisory department. It will be placed on a definite salary basis under the new charter, and ordinances are necessary to effect the essential changes that will be made. At present City Engineer Fred

LONDON IS TAKEN BY WOMEN

Suffragettes, 50,000 Strong, March Between Five Miles of Human Walls

All Nations and Grades of Society Are Represented in Pageant

LONDON, June 17.—The greatest procession of women of modern times, in which it is estimated 50,000 marched, was that which passed through seven miles of London streets today. The pageant, which was witnessed by more than 2,000,000 persons, was three hours passing a given point. Through packed every inch of the pavement along the entire line of march.

FAMOUS WOMEN IN LINE.

Scores of famous women marched. Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, and her daughter, Sybil Pankhurst; Mrs. Pethick Lawrence and Mrs. Cobden Sanderson headed 7000 in the phalanx of marchers, including Mrs. C. M. C. of Delaware, and her daughters, Ladies Idina and Alice Sackville; Lady Robert Cecil and Lady Macmillan, formerly of Louisville.

Gertrude Elliott and Mrs. Kendall led the actresses, who included Xvetta Gulberg, Lena Ashwell, Julia Opp and Olive Terry. Beatrice Harradan, Sarah Le Grand, Cicely Hamilton, Elizabeth Robins and Israel Zangwill paraded with the authoresses.

SOCIETY MEETS ON LEVEL.

All walks of life, from the nobility to factory girls, and all nations were represented. Women who have figured in politics paraded as "Queen Elizabeth and other notables." Miss Annand Bryce, niece of the British ambassador to the United States, led the procession as Joan of Arc. She was roundly cheered owing to her great beauty. Then followed personations of the peeresses, summoned to parliament by Edward III; then the abbesses, called to parliament; then the great nineteenth century women, such as Jenny Lind and Florence Nightingale.

Mrs. Browning in hoop skirts amused the crowd, which was at first derisive but became interested and attentive. The paraders got their greatest ovation when passing Knights' Bright barracks. The guardsmen applauded the marching skill of the women. The women from the United States led the foreign countries and then came associations, groups of graduates, artists, musicians, nurses, teachers, and finally the male sympathizers of the women's suffrage.

Justice Fly Raps Busy Fly That Carries Death to Girl

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 17.—The fly—the common, busy, disease-carrying housefly—got a rap in the appellate court of Texas today. The fly got in the appellate court grew out of a suit for damages in which Louis Rittman had sued A. Cohen & Co. for damages, alleging that flies from the defendant's place carried disease germs that caused the death of Miss Belle Rittman, daughter of the plaintiff. A jury in the lower court had given the plaintiff judgment for $1000. The peculiar thing about it is that the defendant's place is supposed to be a flycatcher.

BIG STRIKE THREATENS SHIPPING

Unless Steamship Companies Make Terms, 200,000 Seamen Will Quit Work

Atlantic Line of the Southern Pacific Already Feels Influence of Controversy

NEW YORK, June 17.—Unless the steamship companies running boats on the Atlantic seaboard comply within the next three days with the demands of the International Seamen's Union of America, 20,000 seamen, stewards, firemen, coal passers and longshoremen will strike and the general tie-up of shipping between Eastport, Me., to New Orleans will ensue. All the companies were notified last week that the men wanted better treatment and better wages and they were told at that time that a strike would result if they did not answer the union's secretary by today.

Every company with the exception of the Southern Pacific asked for an extension of time, and their boats sailed at the scheduled hour. Through the failure of the Southern Pacific to notice the demands, five of its boats were held up until late this evening, when it was able to send two boats to sea. The boats that sailed were the Elyo and the El Norte. The Monius, which had a cabin list of 75, the Antilles and the El Cla, did not get crews. The company hopes to be able to get enough men to man them tomorrow.

The strikers include coal passers, firemen, stewards, waiters, sailors—

5000 Guests Invited to Reception to Be Given on White House Lawn

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Aunt Delia Torrey, escorted by her great-nephew, Robert Taft, son of the President, arrived in Washington this morning to attend the silver wedding festivities at the White House on Monday night.

Despite her eighty-three years, Aunt Delia did not appear to be tired out by the journey from Milburn, Mass. She seemed to enjoy the novel modern experience of being snatched as she stepped from the train. She told the reporters that the President had been "quite nervous" on the wedding morning twenty-five years ago. She solemnly expressed the belief that her nephew could be re-nominated and re-elected.

AFFECTIONATE GREETING.

On arriving at the White House Aunt Delia was greeted affectionately by the President. Among others of the Taft family who reached Washington today were Henry W. and Horace Taft, the President's brothers, and Master Charles P. Taft, the youngest son of the President.

If the weather be favorable the receiving stand will be on the White House lawn under a canopy.

LIVES DAILY IN DANGER AT FERRY

Concrete Supports of Aprons at Steamer Slips Also Found Defective

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The work of safeguarding the lives of the 30,000 persons who daily use the north annex to the ferry building was begun this morning when every carpenter in the employ of the Harbor Commission was set to work tearing away the superstructure to permit pile-drivers to work.

The crew worked during the usual afternoon off today and will work right through tomorrow, that the annex be made safe at the earliest possible moment, and with as little interference with ferry traffic as possible.

Today activity on the bay side of the ferry building was the greatest seen in that vicinity in many years.

Divers were at work laying bare the defects of supposedly solid concrete structures designed to support the aprons of the ferry slips.

WAGON TRAFFIC IN CHAOS.

Inspectors were at work under the and the ferry slips, and also at work on the supports of the upper deck aprons of the ferries.

Engineers of the commission were rushing repairs in several parts of the ferry district. The baggage and express traffic at the north end of the ferry station was thrown into a chaotic condition when the harbor commission began the work of tearing out the unsafe portions of the annex.

Teamsters found it necessary to carry trunks and other baggage from the Northwestern Pacific baggage-room to their wagons outside the ferry building.

All automobile traffic was sent around by the east entrance to the ferry runway.

Further investigation of out-of-sight conditions in the structures outside the line of the ferry building showed huge weights miraculously supported on spindling piles that have been the food for a generation of every parasite that infests the bay.

STEAMER LOWERS MUD LINE.

Accurate reports of exact places needing repair are being made to and by Engineer Saph of the harbor commission, who has personally superintended the work of his men. Arrangements are being made to save the heavy concrete inner supports of the apron of ferry slip 5, which is used by the broad gauge Southern Pacific ferries.

The suction of the propellers of the Berkeley has lowered the mud line in Many consider that she will lose no time in reaching her destination at San Diego. However, close watch will be kept here for the treasure ship all day Sunday.

B. B. WILCOX, who has accepted the position of Secretary of the Oakland Y. M. C. A.

B. B. Wilcox has accepted the call extended him by the Board of Trustees of the Young Men's Christian Association and will arrive Wednesday to assume the office of general secretary. The association considers itself fortunate in securing a man of Wilcox's experience and ability to supervise its work.

For the past eight years Wilcox has been the State secretary of the California associations. During this period the organization has made exceptional progress. New associations have been formed, new buildings erected and the membership more than doubled.

The present building and equipment of the Oakland association was erected as a result of Wilcox's efforts as leader of the building campaign two years ago. He is therefore well known to many business men of the city, who will be glad to again co-operate with him in making Oakland's Young Men's Christian Association one of the best in the country.

BARON PRAISES STATE'S GROWTH

D'Estournelles de Constant Wonders at Richness of California.

PARIS, June 17.—Baron d'Estournelles de Constant is contributing an interesting series of letters to the Temps dealing with his recent travels in the United States. He speaks repeatedly of his amazement at what he terms the marvelous progress attained in America since his visit four years ago. Especially impressive was the advance noted in the State of Texas and in a general way, the agricultural accomplishments west of the Mississippi.

This week Baron d'Estournelles writes of California and its natural beauty and agricultural richness, but he stops on the way to wonder at the ease with which Americans travel great distances. "I meet people in San Francisco," he writes, "who go to France every year. They find it very easy and are more astonished at my astonishment than at the voyage itself."

Taking up the Japanese question in California, Baron d'Estournelles concludes that much of the agitation in San Francisco is due to an anti-Japanese political organization led by a group of enthusiasts and thriving to some extent because of a lack of knowledge of the question at issue. Also there is the opposition of the workmen who naturally fear a strong competition on the part of a foreign element which labors for small wages. But the Japanese are viewed better viewed in the State of Washington than in San Francisco, where the writer even finds a sense of regret that Japan is trying to make her nationals stay at home.

Baron d'Estournelles does not see any danger of a disastrous economic invasion by the Japanese. "It is infiltration, not inundation," he says, and adds that this infiltration is altogether too slight to assure to California laborers sufficient permit of an economic development as great as that of various other states in the West.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—Ho In and The Sheung, millionaire Chinese merchants of Hong Kong, who represent practically all the commercial organizations of the Chinese Empire, are in San Francisco to investigate and report on the Panama-Pacific Exposition. They arrived yesterday on the liner Persia. The commercial organizations of China are said to be united in their desire to make a big showing at the 1915 exposition.

"We believe San Francisco will hold the biggest exposition ever witnessed," they said, "and are here simply to look over the situation. We represent the commercial organizations of China, which are practically united in their determination to show their power at this exposition, what we are doing in the way of business expansion."

CUT CONTRACT MELON IN SAN FRANCISCO TOMORROW

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The board of supervisors at Monday's meeting will award nearly 100 contracts for supplies of various kinds needed by the various city departments during the coming fiscal year, something like 200 bidders having submitted proposals for furnishing the same. Among the articles covered by the contracts in question are blankets, clothing, hardware, meats, groceries, forage and the like, also some of the city stationery and printed matter. Proposals for certain blank books, however, are to be re-advertised for, as the bids thus far received are considered too high, an increase of from 30 to 80 per cent over last year's bids being noted in some instances. New bids are to be invited also for paints and oils, some classes of drugs and certain street materials.

ORDERED TO NORTH.

VALLERJO, June 17.—Lieutenant Silvester H. Lawton Jr., who was recently detached from the cruiser Colorado, and who, with Mrs. Lawton, has been visiting the latter's parents, Commodore and Mrs. Stacy Potts, in the navy yard town, has been ordered to the branch hydraulic office at Port Townsend and will assume his new duties at an early date.

RIPARIAN RIGHTS HAVE PRIOR CLAIM

The City of San Francisco So Informed in McCloud River Matter.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—City Attorney Long has advised City Engineer Manson, in response to an inquiry from the latter, that if the city should endeavor to divert 600 "second feet" of the low water discharge of the McCloud river, such diversion would be subject to the prior claims of riparian rights below the diversion. The stream is tapped, and also to the chance of restraining action by the United States authorities should it be held that the diversion of the amount of water in question tended to interfere with navigation, the latter charge, in this instance, growing out of the fact that the McCloud river empties into the Sacramento, a navigable stream. The city attorney says, in part:

"You are advised that the appropriation of water under the laws of this state is always subject to the rights of prior riparian owners, and that no appropriation is safe, from a business standpoint, in diverting appropriated waters without either acquiring the riparian rights upon the same stream below the point of diversion or making satisfactory arrangements with such riparian owners for the use of the appropriated waters."

RIGHTS OF NAVIGATION.

"All appropriations upon the headwaters of navigable streams are subject, however, to the right of navigation, and the diversion of such waters will be restrained to such extent as it may interfere with such navigation. Therefore, if the diversion of 600 second feet of the waters of the McCloud river would interfere with the navigation of the Sacramento river the diversion would be restrained to the extent of such interference."

FLANDERS

TWENTY

Three Speed, Fore-Door Five-Passenger Touring Car

$800 f. o. b. Factory

HERE IS the car which finally and completely solves the problem of the highest grade car at a price within the reach of every man. For $800 we offer an automobile with full fore-door body, ample room for five passengers, and with three-speed transmission.

Examine it, scrutinize it to the last detail, and you will be convinced that this, the latest achievement of the E-M-F factories, offers extraordinary automobile value.

The business man of moderate circumstances who desires for himself and family the health, the enjoyment of auto-billing, can now secure a touring car of certain reliability at a purchase price within his means. For $800 he will buy in the Flanders "20" a car to carry five passengers far across the country and back again, surely, swiftly, in the life-giving out-of-doors.

You can rely on this car. It has the power to climb any hills you may encounter and travel through sand, mud, and over the roughest roads. Moreover, in ease of operation, in economy of fuel and upkeep, the car will be a constant and pleasant revelation. You will be delighted to discover for what small expense you can drive a Flanders "20."

Add to utility, the gratifying beauty of line which this car embodies. The body is a full fore-door type, with wide full fenders which confirm the impression of speed and strength — Side by side with any car on the road the owner of the Flanders "20" will be assured that his car in unmistakable automobile value has no superior.

In mechanical principle the new Flanders "20" advances far beyond previous cars at a comparable price. The three-speed feature has been introduced and offers the same advantages as a higher priced car. In addition the chassis has been lightened, the motor more deftly built and adjustable push rods provided.

In a certain sense this car is not a new car. It is the product of the E-M-F factories, whose eight plants furnish an unequalled equipment for building motor cars at a minimum cost and with economical attention to detail. E-M-F quality is literally famous as the standard in automobiles. Other machines will cost more, but every automobile built by the E-M-F factories provides a dollar for dollar value which has long been the despair of other manufacturers.

Into the new car the E-M-F designers have put all their experience. The design is studied to the last degree of simplicity and refinement, and on these lines is built a car from high-grade materials whose quality we absolutely know, and which we construct with the most careful and intelligent workmanship.

Other models, same chassis:

4-Passenger Suburban $750
Roadster $750
Runabout $725

'HERE TO STAY' IS CHIEF WHITE'S DEFINITION

"Twenty Years May Roll by Before I Leave the Place."

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—Chief of Police A. D. White, who recently succeeded John Seymour in that office, says that he is going to hold the job, perhaps for twenty years. He denied that the board of police commissioners placed him in power for only a few weeks, in order that they might take their time in selecting someone else.

"I don't believe any such thing," said White today. "I believe I am here to stay. I gave up a good job with the gas company. Would I be likely to do that just to spend a few days as chief of police? Not on your life. I am here to stay. Twenty years may roll around before I leave this place."

The new chief's responsibilities seemed to sit lightly upon his shoulders today. He gave only a few orders. He was free to admit that he did not know a great deal about the police governing business, but that he expected to learn more and more about it all the time. He was free in stating that he expected to cultivate it up to its greatest degree of efficiency, something that has probably never been done before.

SUBJECTS LIE DORMANT.

Gambling and Chinatown affairs are two subjects that the new chief has kept away from as much as possible during the two days he has been in office. His exact attitude on these affairs was not become public up to the present. Both of them, however, are subjects which in the past have not waited for a chief of police to come to them, but have usually come out to meet him more than half way.

According to rumor the gambling element is doing a good deal of speculating as to just how far they can expect to go under the new chief. There is a similar amount of gossip in Chinatown. Rumor has it that before White has been in office many days longer that he will have to cope with both subjects.

SULLIVAN MENTIONED.

Although White says that he has been placed in office permanently by the board of police commissioners, most of the people who take an interest in the police affairs are of the opinion that before many weeks roll around he will have been supplanted by someone else.

Former Police Commissioner Joseph Sullivan's name is mentioned most persistently in connection with the place. That of Captain Harry O'Day is also spoken of.

Friends of White, however, say that if the commissioners had expected to remove White soon that they would not have made him chief of police after the resignation of Seymour up to which time he had only been acting chief of police. Again it is pointed out that the appointment of White states that he is made chief of police for a term of four years.

COUNT ABDUCTS BEAUTIFUL GIRL

Couple in Hiding Until Money Is Exhausted; Arrested On Making Appearance.

VIENNA, June 17.—Count Otto Von Wickenburg, a member of one of the most distinguished noble families in Austria and cousin to the minister of the interior, has been arrested on the charge of abducting a beautiful girl who is a minor.

Accompanied by the girl he appeared outside Count Wickenburg's country mansion in Polish Ostrow, Silesia. Leaving the girl outside Count Wickenburg entered and asked to see Count Wickenburg and on learning of his absence begged the steward to advance him money. The steward complied, but being doubtful about Count Wickenburg's statements telephoned the police, who awaited him at the park gates.

The police, who detained the couple, state that both appeared tired and tired. Count Wickenburg established his identity only to learn there was a warrant out against him for the alleged abduction of Fraulein Rosa Grass from her parents' home at Eger, Bohemia.

The couple are said to have eloped some days ago and remained in hiding until their money was exhausted. The police have restored the girl to her parents and released Count Wickenburg on parole.

H. WINKLEMAN, YOU'RE WANTED

Postal Inspectors Seek Man Who Tried to Buy Two-Cent Money Order.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—"Horace Winkelman," the stenographer said to the office boy as a group of United States postoffice inspectors came in from luncheon.

The stenographer had sprung a Daffydil the effect could not have been more electric.

The inspectors stopped their pleasant conversation and fixed baleful eyes on the stenographer.

"Let me never hear that name again or someone dies," said the inspector with the gray mustache.

Horace Winkelman, business and antecedents unknown, has become a name to conjure phantoms with in the postoffice department.

A man giving this name walked into a downtown substation a few days ago and asked for a 2-cent money order. He was not overburdened with knowledge of the regulations, but this struck him as being an unusual request. He passed out a 2-cent stamp.

"Halt!" he said.

"No," said Horace Winkelman firmly. "I promised him I would send him a money order. Fellow named Kearns."

Winkelman consulted a notebook.

"Kearns, that's the chap," he said. "Met him in a saloon and borrowed a stamp and promised to send him an order. Must have it."

The boy still demurred. Winkelman insisted. Finally they compromised by Winkelman purchasing a 25-cent money order, and addressing it to "James Kearns."

But Uncle Sam's money orders must be delivered. Since that time the inspectors have been searching for Jas. Kearns or Horace Winkelman. They have interviewed all the Kearns in San Francisco, but no one of them admits having lent a stranger a 2-cent stamp in a saloon.

Her spouse were irretrievable.

From the courthouse the touring car was driven to the parochial residence of St. Rose's Church, where the Rev. Father J. M. Cassin, rector of St. Rose's, performed the marriage ceremony.

After dinner the newly weds and their friends continued their drive to the Geysers. It is stated that today's wedding will come as a great surprise to relatives and friends of the couple in San Francisco.

CADETS BACK FROM HIKE IN HIGH SIERRAS

Fifty Sturdy Youths Tramp for 150 Miles, Viewing Great Yosemite Valley.

EXPLOSION OF CAN OF BEANS ONLY ACCIDENT

Capt. L. N. Cobblecluck Guides Staunch Band Through the Mountain Fastnesses.

Fifty members of the First Congressional Cadets Corps returned yesterday afternoon from the High Sierras in their special car, after "hiking" a distance of 150 miles, during which time they visited the Yosemite Valley, Wawona big trees, Tuolumne big trees and the mining camp, try in the vicinity of Chinese camp. The cadets were under the direct command of Captain L. N. Cobblecluck, assisted by Rev. Loyd L. Wirt, and left Oakland two weeks ago for Raymond, the starting point for the valley, from where they started their ninety-mile hike Sunday morning.

During this part of their journey the cadets made camp at Grub Gulch, Folsom Switch and Fish Camp, and Wednesday, upon reaching the Yosemite Valley, established "Camp Oakland," near Camp Curry.

A very successful minstrel show was given at Camp Curry by the cadets the evening before they left the Yosemite on their sixty-mile "hike" to Chinese Camp.

On the trip to Chinese Camp the boys had to face many difficulties. Crossing Glin Flat, at an elevation of 9000 feet, the freight stage of the cadets stuck in the feet in the snow which lay upon the summit and had to be dug out, causing a delay of several hours.

Last Wednesday evening camp was made at Crocker's, and the cadets spent the following evenings at Grovel and Chinese Camp, from which place they took the train for Oakland on Saturday morning.

Only one accident occurred during the entire trip, which was when a large tin of beans exploded while being heated, severely burning the face and hands of Newton H. Bell, one of the cadets, during the encampment at Fish Gulch. Bell was immediately treated by Surgeon Milton A. Hunt of the party and was able to continue the march the following day.

The cadets will probably visit Lake Tahoe or Kings River canyon next year. Last year Lake Eleanor and the Hetch-Hetchy and Yosemite Valleys were visited.

PRIZE WHIST IS GAMBLING, LADIES

Hush, Speak Easy, if You Play for Trophies, Police May Raid Your Club.

SANTA ROSA, June 17.—Imagine the excitement that would be occasioned at any gathering of a fashionable women's card club if, just as the delicate prize for the best score of the afternoon is being awarded, a big burly policeman should step into the drawing-room, with a warrant for the arrest of the club.

Yes, this can occur, according to the construction of an amendment to the law by the recent legislature involving any games of chance, furnished by District Attorney Lea to a local club women's card club, that clubs whose members commit a crime contribute for the purchase of prizes to be played for at their parties are liable under the provisions of the new law.

There are many such women's clubs here and all over the state. Hardly any city or town but what has a large list of such organizations. They are under the ban, the Sonoma county prosecutor says. He does not indicate, however, that he will be the one to enforce the law in its strictest interpretation. He was asked for an opinion, and has given one.

Of course, the ruling does not include the host or hostess who bestows prizes at a card party, just so long as the players have not contributed to the prizes financially, and have not by their willingness to play indicate the desire to take a chance of winning trophies to which they have contributed.

The words "offers or accepts in game of skill a wager or wagers" are interpreted by Lea.

MRS. WHITE ASKS HEAVY DAMAGES

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—A suit for $25,000 damages was brought against the United Railroads today by Mrs. Frances J. White, mother of the late Senator Stephen M. White, her claim being made because of serious injuries which she recently received in a fall from a street car.

Mrs. White alleges in the complaint, which was drawn by Attorney Robert P. Troy, that a car from which she was alighting was started while she was alighting.

The accident occurred almost before her own door, several days ago, and Mrs. White suffered a partial paralysis of her limbs. It was believed for a time that the injuries would prove fatal, but her condition has mended and there is now hope that she will live.

LONDON, June 17.—After a year spent in making elaborate preparations, England is at last ready for the official crowning of King George V. and his consort, Queen Mary. This great event, which has been looked forward to with such eager expectancy by British subjects all over the world, will undoubtedly be recorded as one of the most magnificent spectacles in the history of the British Empire. No detail has been left unattended, and while precedent has been strictly adhered to, it is safe to say that but few coronations, in the nine hundred years of history of the British Empire, could in any measure approach the coming one.

FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES.

Although festivities incident to the coronation have been under way for several weeks past, the official ceremonies will not begin until Monday, when the representatives of the various European countries will arrive. The great spectacle will come Thursday, when the King and Queen will be crowned in Westminster Abbey, and from then until the 29th it will be one continuous round of social functions, pageants, reviews, processions, exhibitions, contests, etc., such as have never before been witnessed.

In honor of this great event, London is a riot of color. It is estimated that at least $10,000,000 have been spent in decorating the city. Magnificent archways span the routes along which royalty will travel during the two weeks, and every building and memorial of importance is outlined with electric lights.

THE VIEWING STANDS.

Immense stands from which to view the processions on Thursday and Friday line every street along the route, and completely hide the churches, public buildings and private residences. There is not a foot of available space along the entire route that is not occupied by stands of some kind. While the architectural beauty of the ancient city has suffered some as a result of the disposition of generosity to visiting sight-seers, the vastness of the stands has a feeling of pride which might manifest itself.

It would be difficult to form an idea of the enormous horde of visitors that has invaded this great metropolis, and the number of people from the globe and number at least a million. Of this amount, one quarter, at least, are Americans, and it is this class that occupies the most expensive suites at the hotels, and have engaged the best seats along the Coronation route.

A FAIRY CITY.

London tonight resembles a fairy city. The millions of electric lights that have been strung in every conceivable place, with an eye to the artistic, have converted darkness into light, and the main thoroughfares are choked with a struggling mass of humanity. No similar spectacle has been witnessed since the crowning of King Edward in 1902.

As had been expected, every hotel and boarding house every corner of the city limits is overrun with guests. The proprietors have been forced to come down a little on their rates, owing to the protests on the part of many of the visitors, but they are still getting between two and three times as much as they ordinarily do. A number of the invaders have taken up their abode in the numerous "tent cities," which have been erected in a number of the parks. This is an innovation for London, and has proved very successful. By sleeping beneath the canvas is about the only way that the visitor can get his bed and board for a reasonable sum.

PRICES GO SOARING.

Prices on the ordinary commodities of life are way beyond their ordinary level, while luxuries can only be reached by an aviator. The seats along the Coronation route range from $5 in the rear row to $100 in the front row, while the prices for windows in the various hotels and houses along this route are ranging from $200 to $300 for Coronation Day. For an entire flat, the price runs from $1000 to $5000 for Coronation Day. The immense army of police is having its hands full in looking after this invasion of humanity. Naturally, all the clocks and "confidence" men that have been able to secure passage are in London, and Scotland Yard is having a busy time. The work of keeping the crowds back in the streets, however, will be done largely by the soldiers. There are in the neighborhood of 30,000 visiting soldiers from all parts of the British Empire, and at least 100,000 home troops. These are all under the command of Lord Kitchener. These troops are camped in the parks and on the outskirts of the city, and while the majority will be used in the various processions, there will be several thousand assigned to police duty.

POLICE PRECAUTIONS.

In addition to the police precautions, the authorities have issued pamphlets, printed in every known tongue, containing a list of "don'ts" to be observed during the festivities. It is rather amusing to those from America, the home of the "come-on" man to note some of the provisions made by Scotland Yard for the protection of the unwary foreigner. One facetious remark that most of the visitors were from the rural districts, had been cradled with virtue and raised with innocence. Among other "don'ts"; the guardians of the peace, in all seriousness, advise their visitors, "not to let a stranger take your watch," "never, on any account let your purse out of your hand," "don't carry your money in your hand; some one may steal it," "don't accept jewelry of any description on the street," "Keep your diamonds on your fingers," and many others that savor of the obvious.

BEGINNING OF CEREMONIES.

The arrival of the various foreign delegates on Monday will mark the beginning of the Coronation ceremonies. Each of the distinguished guests will be met by gentlemen attached to their suites for the time being, and charged with the responsibility of seeing that they are supplied with suitable carriages and servants and are properly housed at the various residences or other domiciles set aside for their use. The representatives of the great continental powers will be entertained at Buckingham Palace, the residence of the King and Queen, the Marlborough House, the residence of Queen Alexandra. Those who are to be given rooms at the palace are the German Crown Prince and Crown Princess, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Denmark, the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

At Marlborough House, the guests will include the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, the Duke and Duchess of Sparta and Prince and Princess of Greece, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden will be the guests of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, at Clarence House, the Princesses of the Grand-Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

York House is to be reserved for the Grand Duke Francis Ferdinand and the Grand Duke Charles Francis Joseph, the representatives of the Emperor Francis Joseph.

SPECIAL AMBASSADOR.

Other representatives, who are already in the city, are the Honorable John Hays Hammond, the ambassador from the United States, who is lodged in the old Piccadilly home of the late Baroness Burdett-Coutts at No. 1 Stratton street; Prince Yussup Izzet-Din, heir to the Sultanate of Turkey; Prince Tsai-Chen, eldest son of Prince Chun, the Regent of China; the Crown Prince of Serbia, and the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Rumania.

On Monday evening, the Duke of Connaught will entertain the foreign princes at dinner at St. James Palace.

Foremost among the events on the program for Tuesday will be the State Banquet at Buckingham Palace, when the King and Queen will formally welcome the foreign envoys.

SOCIETY PAGEANTS.

One of the great society pageants incident to the Coronation will take place on that evening, when the great Shakespearean Fancy Dress Ball will be held in Albert Hall. Under the immediate patronage of King George and Queen Mary themselves, it bids fair to be as dazzling in its beauty and in its distinction. Over seventy titled ladies are on the committee of arrangements, and it is believed that nearly every one of the 2000 characters occurring in Shakespeare's plays will find representatives. Fabulous prices are being charged for the tickets.

On the following day their Majesties will receive the Colonial Premiers, and a banquet tendered the foreign representatives by the Duke

CORONATION DAY.

Thursday, June 22, will be Coronation Day. The streets along the Coronation route will be closed to all traffic at 5 a. m., so as to allow the free movement of the troops. When the royal procession starts from Buckingham Palace at 10 a. m., the entire route to Westminster Abbey will be lined on both sides by troops from all parts of the Empire. The procession itself will present a magnificent spectacle, which will be viewed by the thousands that fill the stands on either side. The foreign representatives resplendent in their uniforms of lace and gold, will follow the royal carriages, according to their rank. The Horse and Foot Guards and a detachment of all the regiments of which the King is Colonel will march in the procession. The Guard of Honor outside Westminster Abbey will be provided by the navy, and the blue-jackets will also take a prominent part in the procession.

Westminster Abbey, the scene of the great edifice for Queen Alexandra, and the order of seating the royal family will be: first, Queen Mary, on the right, then King George, and on his left, Dowager Queen Alexandra, health permitting.

WITHIN THE ABBEY.

Within the Abbey, the thousands of fixed seats have been removed, and in their place, are rows of chairs of exquisite design. Here will be seated the peers and peeresses of the realm, and they will have the opportunity of purchasing the chairs after the ceremonies, as mementoes of the occasion.

A third throne has been erected in the great edifice for Queen Alexandra, and the order of seating the royal family will be: first, Queen Mary, on the right, then King George, and on his left, Dowager Queen Alexandra, health permitting.

The number of those who will witness the actual Coronation ceremonies totals about 7000. This number includes members of the royal family, members of foreign royalty, peers and peeresses, ambassadors, members of Parliament and their wives, spiritual peers, clergy, privy councillors, representatives of the various British colonies, representatives of the army and navy civil service countries and municipalities and "other guests." Among the notable "other guests" who have received invitations is Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, the financier.

CROWNED BY PRELATE.

The coronation ceremony will begin about 12 o'clock, or shortly after, and will last until 1:30. Both the king and the queen will be crowned by the Archbishop of Canterbury, while the Archbishop of York will preach the sermon.

that evening their majesties will dine alone with their family.

The largest and most spectacular procession of the coronation will take place on Friday, June 23, when the royal couple will make their progress through the city of London. As this procession was inaugurated solely for the purpose of giving the people a better opportunity to get a view of their majesties, the route will be much longer than that traversed by the coronation procession the day before, and, although lacking the significance attached to its predecessor, it will furnish a more striking appeal to the eye.

The spectacle is to be as brilliant as anything London has ever seen and will include the king, queen and their court, the princes from foreign courts, the troops and military detachments from India and the dominions. Within a single break or stop, the procession will cover seven miles of central and southern London. The progress will occupy at least three hours. It is estimated that 50,000 troops will be in line on this occasion.

GREAT NAVAL REVIEW.

The great naval review at Spithead is scheduled for Saturday, the 24th. Their majesties will embark on the royal yacht, from which they will review the great gathering of battleships, cruisers, torpedo boats, and other vessels of all descriptions. It will be the most powerful fleet that has ever been assembled at one time. For tonnage and strength of armament, the United States battleship Delaware occupies the premier position among the entire assemblage.

The king and queen will remain on the royal yacht for the week-end, returning to London on Monday in time to attend the gala performance at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden. After Tuesday, June 27, interest in the festivities will begin to wane, for it is on this day that all the royal guests from other courts will be tendered a farewell party in the garden at Buckingham Palace. A gala performance at Covent Garden will occupy the evening. The following day all the members of the foreign courts will take their departure.

On the 29th, the king and queen will again appear in a public procession through south London, but this procession will by no means approach the other two, from a spectacular point of view.

CHAUFFEURS FACING CHARGES OF FELONY.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The absence of Ruby Carl, 14 years of age, and Alice Painter, 18 years of age, from their places of employment, led tonight to the arrest and booking on felony charges of Walter Krachey and Joseph Griffen, two chauffeurs who reside at 571 Birch avenue. The two girls were reported to the police as missing and Detectives Bailey and Maloney went to Griffen's room. They found the girls there with the two men. Griffen and Krachey were placed under arrest and the girls were taken to the detention home.

Ruby Carl is a domestic at 2255 Fulton street and Alice Painter is employed as a domestic at 40 Cole street. Griffen's wife is now suing for divorce.

MEXICANS LIBERATE AMERICAN.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—William L. Dunn, a former San Antonio, Tex., newspaper man, who had been held prisoner at Monterey, Mex., was liberated by the Mexican federal courts today, according to State Department dispatches. Dunn was charged with investigating a plot against the leadership of Francisco I. Madero, Jr.

True Beauty Without Powders or Cosmetics.

(From Art in Dress.) "Much harm is often done with the too free use of powders and cosmetics," says Mme. Ferri, authority on beauty, "and when women learn to know the true value of a good lotion much of this will be prevented. "Nothing equals a simple, inexpensive lotion made by dissolving a small original package of mayatone in eight ounces of witch-hazel. This should be freely rubbed into the skin every day. "After a short time using the mayatone lotion the skin grows clear and velvety and blackheads, pimples and other blemishes are permanently removed, and the complexion takes on that rich, embellishment which is the hallmark of true beauty. Many women use this lotion to prevent tan, sunburn or freckles."

3 INDICTMENTS IN SHASTA BANK SCANDAL

President Bush Arrested On a Bench Warrant and Bail Fixed at $5000.

REDDING, June 17.—After three weeks' careful investigation of the failure of the Bank of Shasta County, the Grand Jury today returned three indictments to the Superior Court, Judge Charles M. Head presiding, and all of the indictments deal with some phase of the failure and those causing it.

Judge Head, from the bench, warned the Grand Jury and others that there must be no revelation of the secrets of the Grand Jury room and that the names of those indicted must not be made known until the arrests were made, to be followed by arraignment.

In less than an hour thereafter C. C. Bush, president of the defunct bank, was arrested on a bench warrant. Bush expected the arrest and was prepared to give bonds as soon as the amount required was made known. Bail was fixed at $5000. Bush gave R. M. Seale, a William Menzel, one of the wealthiest men of Redding, as his bondsman. The bond was accepted and Bush was at liberty after having been in the custody of the sheriff for less than one hour.

ACCEPTS BLAME.

President Bush has never sought to shun any responsibility. He has repeatedly insisted that he alone is to blame for the failure. That he has erred grossly in judgment he admits. That he has been dishonest in intent he stoutly denies.

The specific charge in the indictment is that of knowingly and wilfully making a false statement as to the condition of the bank. The alleged misrepresentation is said to be in the fact that $90,000 borrowed from the Anglo-California Bank was accounted for as a certificate of deposit rather than as a certificate of deposit to secure a loan.

Bush's friends insist that it was a mere matter of bookkeeping and unfamiliarity with the new forms given by the superintendent of banks. Bush will be arraigned some day next week and then for the first time the exact allegations of the indictment will be made known.

ANDERSON'S NAME MENTIONED.

Against whom the other two indictments are directed is not known officially, but it is talked on every street corner that both of them make charges against former State Superintendent of Banks Anderson. Where the tip comes from one seems to know yet that it is well founded everyone seems to believe.

The Grand Jury has not finished its labors. Other indictments are to come. The Grand Jury cannot find J. K. Wendling with a subpoena, though the subpoena was issued two weeks ago. Wendling cannot be found anywhere. At his San Francisco office the only information is that Wendling has gone somewhere to look at some timber on the first floor of the building of the Terry Lumber under the Terry deal with the bank. The Grand Jury wants his testimony and accounting.

SUGGESTS GOLDEN JUBILEE FOR 1915.

Seattle Man Thinks Alaska Purchase Should Be Celebrated.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—In the following letter Kenneth C. Kerr, writing from Seattle, suggests the celebration of the Alaska purchase of the purchase of Alaska with the San Francisco exposition four years hence.

"The year 1915 will witness the fiftieth anniversary of the purchase of Alaska. On the 30th of March, 1867, a treaty was consummated whereby Alaska, for the sum of $7,200,000, was transferred to the United States. The treaty was ratified in America and on June 20 was proclaimed in both America and Russia. On October 15, 1867, the American flag was raised at Sitka and the United States took formal possession of the territory.

"Inasmuch as the industrial awakening of Alaska is at hand, and the Panama-Pacific exposition is to be held in San Francisco in 1915, it is suggested that the Alaska purchase be celebrated as a 'Golden Jubilee' either as a feature of the Panama-Pacific Exposition or with some form of celebration of its own. "For many reasons it would be more wise to celebrate the Alaska purchase than to celebrate the Alaska exhibit at that great exposition, for the Alaska purchase is a more important event than the Alaska exhibit. "Let us all get together from the Arctic Circle to Queen Charlotte Sound and work for this 'Golden Jubilee'."

EAGLES TO GIVE BALL FOR CONVENTION FUND

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—A complimentary ball will be given by Golden Gate Aerie No. 61 of the Fraternal Order of Eagles at the Auditorium, Fillmore and Fage streets, next Wednesday night. Several thousand invitations have been issued and the affair has been arranged as a preliminary event to the Eagles picnic next Sunday. It is hoped that a large sum will be raised by the picnic to add to the Grand Aerie convention fund.

The Auditorium is being decorated with blossoms and evergreens and a special orchestra has been engaged. Judge C. E. A. Croighton, president of Golden Gate Aerie, will lead the grand march with Mrs. Croighton.

When Your Hair Is Dry and Dusty

(From New York Herald.) Mme. Theo doesn't believe in washing the head too often. Said she: "Too much wetting makes the hair coarse and brittle and in time it loses its color and becomes thin from use of too much soap and water. "There is nothing so good as brushing the head with therox when the hair is dry and dusty. Try this if you want abundant, glossy hair: Mix four ounces of powdered orris root with four ounces of therox; keep this mixture in a sifter-top can and sprinkle a little of the powder evenly upon the head; then brush thoroughly through the hair two or three times a week. Therox keeps the hair beautifully lustrous, light and fluffy, and encourages its growth. "This is an excellent cleansing shampoo in the summer time, particularly grateful and satisfying after automobile driving, tennis or other outdoor pastime."

MRS. HAMMOND'S GOWNS TO DAZZLE EVEN ROYALTY

Wife of United States Envoy to Outdress Peeresses at Coronation; Many Americans at Windsor

(By CHESTER OVERTON.)

LONDON, June 17.—Every one has remarked the special favors shown to two of the most prominent American peeresses, the Duchess of Roxburghe and the Countess Granard, who are included in the house party at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races. Lady Granard's invitation is natural, owing to her husband's position at court, but frequently on past occasions the court officials and their wives have not been included in the Ascot house party at Windsor.

Queen Mary has shown a marked liking for both the Duchess and Countess. The Queen cannot, for obvious reasons, entertain the Duchess of Marlborough, but court officers declare there is much sympathy in high quarters for the young Duchess, who is the chief guest this week-end at Taplow, where Lord and Lady Desborough are entertaining a house party.

The Hon. Mrs. Henry Coventry, the American who divorced her husband, Richard McCreery, is entertaining the Prince and Princess Victor Duple Singh at Stenor Park.

RENTS DOWN PLACE.

Lady Sarah Wilson, aunt of the Duke of Marlborough, has rented Down Place, a famous riverside residence, for the Ascot week, and there entertained Mrs. William E. Leeds, Mrs. H. Wafa Williams, Lord and Lady Dalmeny and Lord Allington.

Mrs. Williams and Lady Sarah both have a perfect genius for finding rich Americans and have taken Mrs. Leeds under their joint wings. Mrs. Leeds therefore received an invitation for the royal enclosure at the races, where the gowns created a sensation. Walter Burns, a nephew of J. Pierpont Morgan, and his wife, among those in the enclosure, entertaining Mrs. George Cornwallis West and others.

Another favorite American was Mrs. Adair, who had a large party at Adair Place, near Windsor. Among her guests were Lord and Lady Yarrowburgh and her compatriot, Lady Monson, formerly Mrs. Tarunire of New York.

DAZZLING COSTUMES.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, wife of the special American envoy to the coronation, has a series of costumes that should dazzle London. The number of trunks that she is stated to have brought over has been exaggerated by enthusiastic reporters, who now place the number at forty and place the insurance on the gowns at an impossible figure. The court gown Mrs. Hammond will wear at the royal banquet and reception at Buckingham Palace next week for all distinguished foreigner personages now known in London, has been described as a dream by the few friends privileged to see it. It is made of gorgeous brocade, changing in the light from peacock blue to various shades of green. The fabric is the costliest ever turned out by a loom. The front of the gown is almost covered with a network of pearls. The train is seven yards long. Mrs. Hammond will wear at the coronation itself a gown of white satin embroidered in diamonds and peacock feathers. In the eyes of the feathers, which are embroidered in natural hues, are emeralds and sapphires. That Mrs. Hammond will create a sensation with the gown is a foregone conclusion, for with it she will wear a massive tiara of emeralds and diamonds and long emerald earrings, which traditionally belonged to Catherine the Great of Russia.

TRIMMED WITH GEMS.

On the gala night of the opera Mrs. Hammond will wear a gown of cloth of gold with pearls and diamonds, while at the state ball she will appear in pale blue satin, gorgeously embroidered in seed pearls.

Mrs. Hammond has been studying in Paris the past few days while her husband is being feted on all sides in London.

The cares of kingship seem to result in the loss of hair. The past few months the courtiers have noticed that King George is becoming bald as his father was. The King has tried many remedies and has a passion for reading the advertisements of restorers. It was Home Secretary Winston Churchill whose bald spots are now covered with baby down, who persuaded King George to try his own remedy. This is a most drastic process and a sore subject at court in more ways than one. A hairdresser now attends King George twice a week. The treatment begins with a thorough shampoo of almost boiling water. Then a preparation consisting largely of petrol is rubbed in without mercy, and the scalp massaged for a quarter of an hour. This, on top of the shampoo, is extremely painful, but the King keeps smiling, although there are no perceptible results yet.

The King, who neither drinks nor smokes as much as his father did, likes a good cigar and is delighted with 10,000 cigars presented him by the Cuban republic from a famous tobacco. They are probably the finest brand ever presented to the King.

MISS ELKINS' COMING.

An interesting visitor to London will be Catherine Elkins, whose romance with the Duke of the Abruzzi still breaks out in a fresh place from time to time. Miss Elkins and her mother are to be in Paris for a time before coming here. Later they will visit Rome, where Miss Elkins is regarded as a heroine by the Roman aristocracy.

Another visitor who will come to London later from Paris is Margaret Shonta, daughter of Theodore Shonta, and sister of the young widowed Duchess de Chaulnes. Unlike her sister, who has become a real Parisienne, Miss Margaret is not exactly crazy about the customs of the French nobility. She usually prefers a more unconventional good time in London. She will be the guest here of the Duchess of Manchester, who is one of her greatest friends.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will not make a long stay in London this season. She will shortly visit her daughter, the Countess Szechenyi, in Hungary.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont will divide their time between London, Scotland and Paris, and also wind up in Hungary, where they have rented a shooting place from Prince Paul Esterhazy.

MRS. NEWHOUSE WELL.

Mrs. Sam Newhouse, the pretty American who met a rather serious motor accident the other day, has entirely recovered and was as lively as ever at Mrs. Whitelaw Reid's ball. Amid all the gossamer members of the American colonies had time to express their sympathy for her. Mrs. Marshall Roberts in the loss of their little girl, who was killed in an automobile elevator, in their house in Grosvenor Square, Mrs. Roberts is prostrated with grief. Marshall Roberts, whose mother married Colonel Ralph Vivian, was born an American, but was naturalized here and joined the Guards, where he was nicknamed Field Marshall Roberts. He left the Guards on his marriage to the daughter of Lady Murray.

While a number of British peeresses are not attending the coronation, the Marchioness of Dufferin is the only American so far who has announced her intention of being absent. She will spend the time quietly in her new home in Putney. When the actual day arrives others probably will be found unwilling to incur the trouble and fatigue of rising at dawn and being tightly packed in a gallery, where only in the front row is it possible to obtain a good view.

MAYOR IS ALLEGED ARSON GANG HEAD

Minnesota Official and Physician Arrested as Suspected Incendiary.

ST. PAUL, June 17.—In a warrant sworn out by the sheriff, Dr. S. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, Minn., was charged today with being the leader of a gang of incendiaries.

The issuance of the warrant followed the wounding of two robbers and the capture of one of them as the two were preparing to blow a safe at Papezky, 18 miles from Bemidji.

The charges of incendiarism against Mayor Dumas grew out of a number of fires which have occurred in and about Cass Lake, Black Duck and other places. Dr. Dumas was arrested at Hibbing, Minn., as he stepped from a train at the head of the Cass Lake baseball nine, of which he is also manager. He declared he was the innocent victim of a conspiracy to ruin him.

The present was given after the association had brought to their attention that Chief Murphy's efforts had saved downtown merchants many hundreds of thousands of dollars from threatened fires.

FEW CHANGES IN TRADING OF WEEK

Alternate Periods of Strength and Weakness On 'Change.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Alternate periods of strength and weakness, none of which was sufficiently pronounced to lend decided impulse to trading or tend material changes in price levels, marked the week on the Stock Exchange. The market fell into a waiting attitude, pending the receipt of more definite information regarding the conditions and crop prospects. Liquidation of stock which has been accumulated during the recent rise tended to prevent a further substantial advance.

Reports of damage to crops by drought caused uneasiness, although this was relieved somewhat toward the end of the week by rain in several sections. Suspension of dividends on Denver & Rio Grande preferred depressed the stock, but was without effect elsewhere, since it was regarded as in line with the present conservative policy of the Gould syndicate and its new banking associates. Indications of better conditions in both the steel and copper trades exerted a favorable influence upon speculative sentiment, as did the May statistics of foreign trade, revealing the largest exports for that month on record, and a balance of trade in favor of this country for eleven months of more than $500,000,000.

DIAZ SAYS HE

COULD HAVE WON

UNIFORMED ELKS' BRANCH DOOMED

Believes as President of Mexico He Could Have Placated Rebels.

PARIS, June 17.—A dispatch to the Temps from Saint Sebastian says that General Diaz has declared at Vigo that his resignation of the Presidency of Mexico was his final service to his fatherland, as he had been convinced by his friends that only through his withdrawal could peace be restored. Nevertheless he believed that he could have remained and won over the revolutionists.

When he left Mexico the treasury reserve totaled about $31,000,000, which, he believed, would not be squandered by the revolutionists. In conclusion General Diaz insisted that the United States government was in way responsible for his resignation.

DEAL IS CLOSED FOR NEW THEATER

Magnificent Playhouse Costing $1,500,000 Will Be Built in San Francisco.

LAKE TAHOE, Cal., June 17.—Election of officers, discussion of reports and several addresses kept the members of the California Bankers' Association busy today. The officers elected are:

President—Stoddard Jess, Los Angeles.

Vice-President—E. A. Edwards, Pasadena.

Secretary—F. H. Colburn, San Francisco.

Treasurer—George O'Brien, San Francisco.

The report of the protective committee shows that the seventy-five cases investigated in the year were for petty offenses. The report adds that the slogan, "No compromise with criminals," has convinced the criminal element that other lines of business than banking offer less danger of punishment.

W. R. Williams, newly appointed superintendent of banks; State Treasurer E. D. Roberts, George E. Allen of New York, and J. D. Spangler, president of the Arizona Bankers' Association, made addresses on pertinent topics.

A resolution approves the Aldrich currency plan. The numerical transit system, proposed by the American Bankers' Association, also was approved by formal action.

While the visitors told of many big fish catches as the result of their expeditions on the lake, it was officially decided that C. A. Smith of the Security Bank of Oakland had really captured the largest fish. To him was awarded the bankers' trophy for this honor.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—A large detachment of California Boy Scouts will sail for Camp O'Connor, near San Rafael, on the 9:15 Sausalito boat on Monday morning. This is a camp arranged for scouts who had no other camping arrangement for the summer and for those who did not wish to go into camp at a greater distance from the city.

The camp is named in honor of Sheriff O'Connor of Marin county, who has invited the scouts to camp upon his ranch, one-half mile from San Rafael.

Sergeant Harold Hauser will be in charge of the camp and Major O. Nott will spend much of his time in camp with the boys, most of whom are from his scout district.

HAVING GOOD TIME.

The twenty-five scouts who left for a two weeks' camp on the San Francisco Bay Outing Farm, in the beautiful rolling country back of Saratoga, Santa Clara county, have reported a fine time for the first few days of their camp. They are in charge of Captain Frank Cliff of California Boy Scout headquarters. Several other parties of scouts are to go to this fine camping place and those who have not yet arranged their summer outings are ordered to at once communicate with scout headquarters for assignment to camping parties.

Camp O'Connor will be open to all California Boy Scouts who wish to visit it. Each will bring his own blankets, cooking kit and radios, or several boys of a patrol may club together to buy a common supply of groceries to be cooked in the camp. The scouts will help out their harder by fishing, clam digging and finding mussels.

Scouts who can only get away for one or two days will be welcome during the next two weeks at Camp O'Connor. They will go to San Rafael by way of Sausalito, and there inquire for Sheriff O'Connor's ranch. Boys under 12 years old should ask for half-price tickets to the camp. The full round-trip fare is fifty cents.

ACCORDING TO "REGULATIONS."

"Camp O'Connor will be conducted with all of the regulations of a scout camp," said Major O. Nott yesterday. "Every precaution will be taken to maintain strict sanitary regulations, as the value of sanitation is one of the things all scouts should know. The scouts will do their own cooking, as the scouts like to cook and the knowledge is valuable. The boys will have plenty of opportunity for swimming, and many a scout who does not know how to swim will be a pretty good swimmer after his sojourn at Camp O'Connor. Scouts who cannot afford the time or cost of one of the more distant camps will find a good time waiting for them at Camp O'Connor. Let them bring their own provisions and remain in camp as long as the grub lasts."

VALLEJO, June 17.—Midshipman L. Townsend has been detached from the Saratoga and ordered to report for duty aboard the receiving ship Independence at the Mare Island navy yard.

PORT AU PRINCE, June 17.—The authorities here have ordered the steamer Consul Grosbeck to be searched in order to determine positively whether Ciprano Castro, former president of Venezuela, is on board. The American scout cruiser Birmingham arrived here today.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS DANCE.

ADMIRAL BADGER HOLDS OFFICIAL LEEVEE

CRONSTADT, June 17.—Rear Admiral Badger gave a reception today on the battleship Kansas. The guests included officers of the Russian navy, the German ambassador to Russia, and gave approval to the arrangements entered into in connection with the parade which is to take place on the afternoon of the fourth day of reunion week. Many merchants have already contracted for an elaborate display of bunting and electrical effects that will make the resort more than ever beautiful. Atlantic avenue, upon which 25,000 Elks will march, is 100 feet wide, as straight as the proverbial line for thirty blocks and has paved the way for the erection of a large grand stand from which the Grand Lodge officers will review the spectacular procession, has been awarded to P. A. McCue of Cleveland, the "grand stand king."

COOKE ACQUITTAL

AUDUBON SOCIETY REFUSES $25,000

Mrs. Jeanette Ford Wants the Former Amour to Return to Wife.

CINCINNATI, June 17.—According to her statement after learning the news this afternoon, Mrs. Jeanette Ford, the "woman in the Warren case," was the happiest person connected with the trial of Edgar Street Cooke of Chicago when the jury returned its verdict acquitting him of the theft of $24,000 from the Big Four Railroad. "You don't know how glad I am to hear that," said Mrs. Ford at Scarlet Oaks, a branch of the Bethesda Hospital, when told Cooke was free.

Asked if she was going to go back to Cooke, Mrs. Ford said:

"Oh, no. It's all over between us now. I want him to go back to his wife and try to repay her for the affection that he has bestowed upon me. If I were only young again I could live over my life as I had been taught to live. When I am able to walk again I am going out in the country and live and try to make my life as long as I possibly can."

The jury in the case of Cooke took but four votes and acquitted him on the last one. Following his acquittal Cooke announced that he would return to Chicago and go into business there.

ARE YOU PROUD OF

YOUR BUNGALOW

Grand Amateur Photographic Competition for Owners or Admirers of Bungalows.

The present tendency of the home-builders toward the cozy and always artistic bungalow is an indication of the desire of the frugal people to get away from the confinement of flats, hotels and apartments.

More ingenuity of the home-builder and architect is demonstrated in the modern bungalow than any other style of building. Here must be combined the artistic with the economic. Here will be found the practical with the beautiful. When Mr. and Mrs. Newbred plan the new bungalow the financial exchequer does not warrant any reckless expenditure.

Oakland is the typical place for the bungalow. Every natural condition obtains to render its construction possible and easy. Flowers and shrubbery, so essential to the proper finishing touches of bungalows, thrive luxuriantly. Thousands of artistic and comfortable are hidden away in Greater Oakland. The eyes of the world are gladdened by the sight of these.

Since it is impossible to transport all the many thousands of TREBUCE readers to these pretty places, it has been thought advisable to conduct a photographic competition, open only to amateur and bungalow owners.

Beginning Sunday, June 24, a page devoted to the promotion of bungalow building and sites will be conducted in THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE. A reward of merit will be given by this department for the best photograph of a bungalow. The best photo each week will compensate for any expenses. Watch closely this page, where plans and specifications will also be given each week. The best results of architects both local and foreign will also be shown.

TO INVESTORS and SPECULATORS

The Greatest Colonization Proposition in the State—A Rare Opportunity.

I offer for quick sale, at an extremely low price, the nearest and finest large ranch to San Francisco, being but 58 miles distant. The property comprises 4633 acres of the richest kind of soil free from alkali, and is situated in "Sunny Stanislaus country," adjacent to the new and thriving town of Patterson. It has a water frontage of three miles on the banks of the San Joaquin river with perpetual water rights, and is within a mile of two different towns. The main line of the Southern Pacific railroad passes through the property. The land is so situated that the possibilities for irrigation and colonization are perfect, and it is now ripe for quick subdivision. Enormous profits for investors are guaranteed, as it is safe to say that during the next four years this property will unquestionably triple in value as a ranch proposition. At the present time the land is almost entirely under grain and is paying over 10 per cent per annum on $200,000.

HARRY R. FEE.
Redwood City, Cal.

I EXPECT TO LIVE TO BE A HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS OF AGE,' SAYS DR. MUNYON, FOUNDER OF THE NEW GOSPEL OF HOPE

PROFESSOR JAMES M. MUNYON.

Noted Philadelphia Health Expert Says California Is Land of Sunshine and Hope, and That He Will Meet Greater Success Here With His Modern Theories Than in East.

Professor James M. Munyon, the famous Philadelphia health authority, now in San Francisco, with characteristic energy is waging a campaign here for healthism, loveism and hopeism. Talking to a group of newspaper reporters who met him at the Oakland pier, he said:

"It is good to be in California, the land of cheerfulness and sunshine. Sunshine radiates hope, and it is hope that has been my life work to preach. I am sure that in a land like this my efforts will be met with encouragement and support, and I feel that I am going to outdo in San Francisco the great success which I have met in the larger cities of the East with my new health theories."

Professor Munyon is a living embodiment of the cheerful creed he preaches. Virile, well-poised, active and energetic, his handclasp is as strong as that of a youth, and his steady, earnest eyes are eloquent with the fire and vim of a man in his prime in perfect health. He confesses to 65 years, but many men of 40 would envy his strength and enthusiasm and joy in living. Continuing, Professor Munyon said:

"I expect to live to be 150 years of age. At my present age I am younger, physically, than most men of 40, and I believe that I shall retain my youthful strength indefinitely. I consider that the normal human age should be not less than 100 years, and I will even go so far as to say that death before 100 years of age has been reached is nothing more than slow suicide. A man—or woman—who dies at an earlier age is simply ignorant of the laws of health.

"I am here to shake hands with every man, woman and child in San Francisco. I have thousands of friends here among people who have used my remedies as practically their only family doctor for years. I want to meet these people personally."

"I am here to tell the people of this city about my opinions on the subject of health, which are the fruit of a lifetime devoted to healing the sick people of America. I shall send my messages through the newspapers day by day, but more than that I want to meet the people of San Francisco and tell them, face to face, some of the hopeful truths that I have learned."

"I want, most of all, to meet the sick people—the invalids, the discouraged ones, the victims of nerve-wearing, body-racking diseases and ailments—for these are the ones to whom the message of hope which I bear will bring the greatest blessing."

"I want to meet the rheumatists, the sufferers from stomach trouble, the ones afflicted with that noxious disease, catarrh. I want to meet the women who have become chronic invalids as a result of nervous troubles. I want to talk to the men who are 'all run down,' whose health has been broken by overwork, improper diet, late hours, or other causes, and who feel the creeping clutch of serious, chronic illness."

"To these people I bring a story of hope; I can give them a promise of better things. I want to astonish them by showing them the record of cures performed through my new system of treatment."

"There isn't a building in San Francisco big enough to house the people in this State alone who have been cured by my remedies. Before I leave San Francisco I expect to be able to say that there isn't a building in San Francisco big enough to house the people who have been cured by my remedies in San Francisco alone."

"This morning, myself and my expert associate physicians will be at the main store of the Owl Drug Company, in the Phelan building, from 10 o'clock in the morning to 6:30 at night, and until 10 o'clock Saturday night, and I cordially invite all persons who are afflicted with any ailment, who are depressed and without hope, to call and have a chat with me. My physicians are not allowed to accept a penny for consultation."

"I have taken the best of the ideas from all schools and embodied them in a new system of treatments, individually adapted to each particular case. I have no 'cure-alls,' but my present method of attacking disease is new. The success which has attended this treatment all over America proves its efficacy. Old methods must give way to new. Medical science moves. I know what my remedies are doing for humanity. I know what they will do for the people of San Francisco. Let me prove my statements—that's all I ask."

PACIFIC HIGHWAY CONVENTION DATE IS SET

Portland Automobile Club to Be Host to Hundreds of Delegates.

PACIFIC COAST CITIES TO SEND REPRESENTATIVES

New Officers Will Be Elected and Much Business Transacted.

PORTLAND, June 17.—August 4 and 5 are the dates that have been selected by President W. J. Clemens of the Portland Automobile Club for the annual Pacific highway convention which will be held in Portland this year under the auspices of the Portland club.

Representatives from every prominent city on the Pacific coast are expected to attend this meeting. Already assurances have come in from Vancouver, Victoria and all the principal cities on Puget Sound and the northern delegation will be well represented by members who will drive in their machines to the convention.

Officials of the Pacific Highway Association will attempt to induce the automobile club of Seattle to make this event one of their club runs, so that at least fifty cars can be expected from Seattle.

A widespread interest in the Pacific Highway Association will present a good representation from all towns along the route, and California is expected to send a delegation from these towns included in the Pacific highway plans.

OFFICERS TO BE ELECTED.

New officers will be elected at this meeting and plans outlined for the coming year's work. A complete report will be made by the old officers as to what has been done since the organization was formed last fall.

The convention will be held in the Portland Commercial Club convention hall and will extend over two days. A complete program will be worked up in the next few weeks which will include for speakers some of the most prominent good roads workers on the Pacific coast. The time of the convention will be about equally divided between business sessions and meetings where set speeches will prevail.

According to the representatives of the Pacific Highway Association who have been over the international route throughout the states of Oregon and Washington, roads are fifty per cent better than last year, so there will be no difficulty for those who wish to drive from the north or south to the Rose City for this gathering.

CHICAGO JUDGE FINES PREACHER

Policeman Accused of Calling Mayor Name at Street Meeting.

CHICAGO, June 17.—The Rev. N. P. Clarkson, superintendent of the White Cross Midnight Missionary Association, was fined $5 and costs by Municipal Court Judge Heap at the Harrison street station today because Officer James Coley charged the minister with calling Mayor Harrison a name.

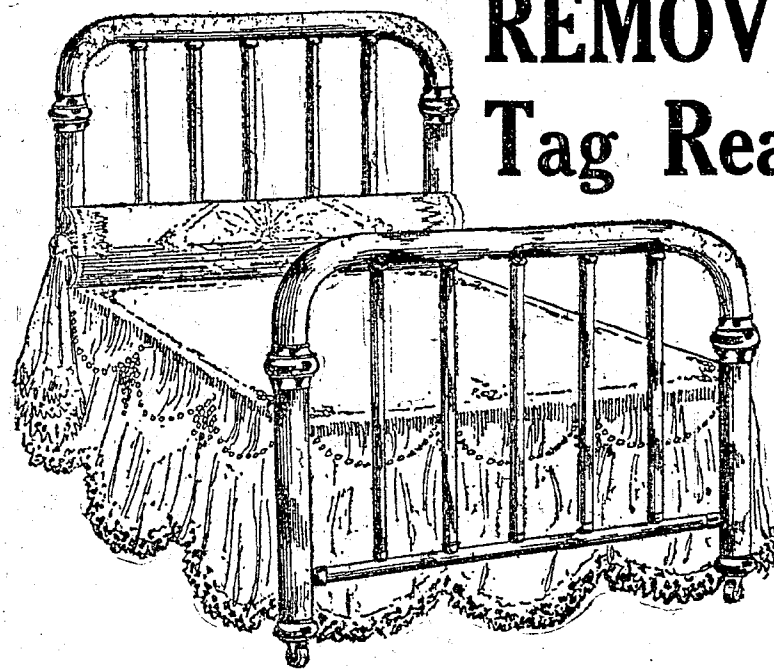

In court the minister produced 12 workers of the White Cross Missionary Association who were with him at the meeting and each witness testified that Mr. Clarkson did not speak disrespectfully of the mayor or anybody else. The word of the police officer was unsupported by witnesses.

Officer Coley arrested the preacher while he was holding a gospel meeting in front of the California saloon, which is in the center of the "red light" district.

BARTENDER ABANDONED HER, SHE SAYS; SHOOT

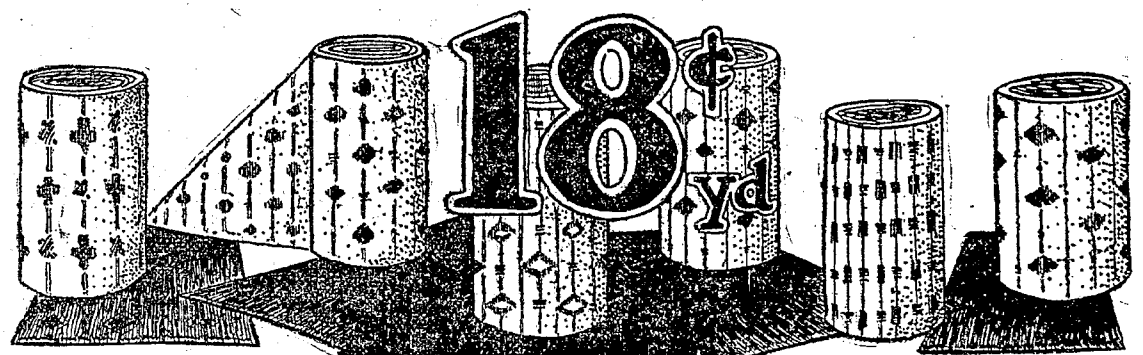

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—Peter Gomez, 435 Pacific street, a bartender, was shot and probably fatally wounded this afternoon in his room by Dolores Hughes, a half-breed Indian woman, who had been engaged as a dance hall girl in the All-Nation saloon, 487 Pacific street. The woman was placed in a cell at the city prison. She said that Gomez had abandoned her and that she shot him for that reason. Both the woman and the man are 25 years of age. The shooting took place in the room at 485 Pacific street, where they lived.

GATES' STORY TRUE SAYS SCHWAB

Testimony as to Formation of Steel Trust Confirmed by Magnate.

LONDON, June 17.—Charles M. Schwab today confirmed the story of the meeting between J. P. Morgan and Andrew Carnegie that resulted in the formation of the steel trust, as related by John W. Gates before the Stanley committee in Washington.

Schwab says he called on Morgan at the request of Gates and prevailed on Morgan to take the first step toward a meeting, he being younger than Carnegie. Judge Gary, he said, knew nothing of this meeting.

Schwab was asked if he had been subpoenaed or requested to appear before the committee of Congress that is conducting the steel inquiry at Washington.

"No, I have not been asked to testify," was the reply, "but I will gladly appear before the committee if I am wanted."

Schwab was asked if he could throw any light on the issues of veracity raised between Gates and Chairman Gary of the steel trust in their testimony.

"Well," said Schwab, "I only know Gates' story concerning the formation of the trust from the newspaper reports, but I can say that, as reported in the press, it is substantially true."

COLD STORAGE BILL PROTESTED

Tacoma Merchants Declare the Law Would Kill Trade in the North.

TACOMA, June 17.—Resolutions protesting against the enactment of Senate bill 156 which proposes to prevent the sale or transportation by interstate of foreign commerce of articles of food held in cold storage longer than three, four or seven months, depending on the articles, were adopted by the board of trustees of the Commercial Club and Chamber of Commerce.

It is declared that this bill will be a blow to Washington and to Alaska, as the Puget Sound imports eggs and other dairy products from the east in cold storage, and Alaska depends largely on the cold storage shipments from Puget Sound for its winter food supply.

OLD-TIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Color, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair; Dandruff Quickly Removed.

From time immemorial, sage and sulphur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost everyone knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair, for curing dandruff and falling hair, and for making the hair grow. In older times the only way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this sort, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at 50 cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

POSSE LOSES TRAIL OF FLEEING SAFE CRACKER

TOWN MARSHAL FIRES ON DARING BANDITS

Thieves Interrupted at Work Leave Money Scattered About On Floor.

LOS GATOS, June 17.—In the mountainous region back of this town deputy sheriffs are searching for two armed bandits who blew up the safe of the Southern Pacific depot at this place at 2 o'clock this morning and escaped with $72. They were caught in the act by the town marshal, who fired at the men, but it was not known whether any of the bullets took effect.

Leaving several hundred dollars on the floor in front of the safe the two men escaped through a rear window of the office and ran at top speed up the canyon and disappeared in the wooded country back of the town.

Town Marshal Richard Shores notified the sheriff's office in San Jose and then started in pursuit, but was unable to track the men.

Ten deputies, headed by Sheriff Langford, set out from San Jose for Los Gatos and followed the trail of the men for nearly a mile when it was lost. Only a meager description has been obtained of the two men from the marshal. All of the officers between Los Gatos and Santa Cruz have been notified to look out for strangers.

HUSBAND DISGUSTED BRIDE OF TWO WEEKS

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—After fourteen days of married life, John De Hella, wealthy cooper, 2440 street, charges that his bride Della tired of the bonds and ran away.

De Hella's plaint is set forth in papers filed yesterday in a suit for divorce.

He is still living in the home he provided for his spouse, but he does not know of her whereabouts.

The couple were married at San Francisco on May 28. On June 1 the bride received the wedding ring from her father and gave it to her surprised husband, remarking, according to the complaint: "Whenever I look at you I get disgusted with myself."

Then Mrs. De Hella left the house not to return.

De Hella says he is a refined and cultured man and that he has experienced great mental suffering and humiliation on account of the unexpected conduct of his wife.

Suit was also commenced by Germaine against Augusto Mallard on the ground of failure to provide.

Special invitation to you. See H. Schellhaus, Oakland's furniture dealer, 408 Eleventh street.

WEDS LOYAL AMERICAN TO OBEY WISH OF GRANDFATHER

MRS. CYNTHIA ROCHE BURDEN, prominent in the Long Island and Newport set.

NEW YORK, June 17.—No small degree of interest is centered in Mrs. Cynthia Burden, not only on her own account, but largely because she is the daughter of the New York society woman, known for many years as Mrs. Burke-Roche, and later as Mrs. Batonyi.

Mrs. Batonyi is a daughter of the late Frank Work and was married to Hon. J. D. Burke Roche in 1880. They had two sons and one daughter, Cynthia. Eventually they separated, and Mrs. Roche went back to live with her father. After the divorce she continued to be known as Mrs. Burke-Roche until she married Batonyi, a horseman from Hungary. After a rather stormy time they separated and Mrs. Batonyi resumed the name of Roche.

In the meantime Cynthia had married Arthur Scott Burden. When her grandfather died recently it was found that one provision of his will required her to marry an American.

Oh, yes! Visit our city, give us a call. Register at our office. H. Schellhaus, Oakland's furniture dealer, 408 Eleventh street.

CONGRESS WOULD HAVE STEEL CARS

Numerous Bills of Interest Are Introduced; Army Is Criticized.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—What Congress did today: The Senate was not in session. In the House debate was resumed on the Underwood wool bill. Stephenson of Mississippi spoke in favor of the bill. Payne took the floor against it. He said the bill would ruin the sheep industry by removing the necessary protection. Payne spoke for four hours. Kahn introduced concurrent resolution providing for an investigation of the army by a committee of ten. He expressed the belief that the recent mobilization of troops on the Mexican border was a failure owing to the lack of organization. The resolution provides $50,000 for carrying on the investigation.

NOTHING NEW IS FOUND ON MAINE

Work of Ascertaining Cause of Explosion Is Progressing Slowly.

HAVANA, June 17.—The board of engineers in charge of the work on the wreck of the battleship Maine has discovered that what was supposed to be mud covering the recently exposed after-deck superstructure was really a composite of mud and a coralline marine growth.

The entire day was devoted to cleaning the deck. The cofferdam was at the level of ten feet below the water outside. No more will be attempted until the work of cleaning the after part has been completed.

Careful measurements were made today to see if the cofferdam was in any way giving. There was scarcely a perceptible movement inward, but not more than was to be expected in consequence of the increased water pressure from the outside. No new developments are expected for some days when five feet more of water will be pumped out.

STRIKERS WIN FIGHT FOR WAGES

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night; You Can Prepare it at Your Own Home.

"It's my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," answers Miss Grace Benson, when her friends ask her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you will take my advice," she says. "I tell every woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it, it did all this in a night. It affords me a world of pleasure to tell anyone else just how such remarkable results were brought about. I give you, absolutely free, the identical prescription which has removed every defect from my hands and arms. You can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which can be prepared at your own home, follows: Go to any drug store and buy an empty two-ounce bottle and also a one-ounce bottle of Kulus Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulus into the two-ounce bottle, add a quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Mix this at home, then you know that it is the genuine article. Apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin transparent, removes all discolorations such as tan, freckles and coarse pores, roughness and wrinkles, and, in fact, every blemish the hands and arms are liable to. It also produces a marvelous effect on the neck and shoulders. If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or from wearing high collars, the prescription will immediately relieve that condition. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in 12 hours at the most. Thousands of women are using this prescription with just the same results that I have had."

Lucius L. Solomon Advises Immediate Action to Call Russia to Time.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The wholesale discrimination which prevails in Russia against Jews and more especially against the American Jew was the subject of an address delivered by Lucius L. Solomon before the Commonwealth Club at its weekly luncheon this afternoon.

"American Jews were first prohibited from entering Russia in 1879," said Solomon. "From that time on, for more than thirty years, various serarles of state and prominent Jews of the United States have protested against this unjust discrimination but without avail."

"The matter was first taken up by the legislature of the United States in 1879. Much discussion ensued but nothing was done."

"The following year the then Secretary of State, William M. Evers, entered into a lengthy correspondence about the matter with the Russian state department. He declared that this discrimination against American Jews was unjust and could not be acquiesced in by this government. He said the Jews must be given the proper treatment, not because they were Jews but because they were American citizens. His efforts were also fruitless."

FORCED TO EAT WORDS.

"In 1881, when James G. Blaine became Secretary of State, he laid down the ultimatum to the Russian government that unless they stopped discriminating against Americans of the Jewish persuasion no further business could be entered into with that country. Until the time of his death Blaine was forced to eat his words, as were all the secretaries that have followed him."

Among the many cases cited by Solomon of prominent Jews who have been refused rights to enter Russia, because of their religion was that of Oscar S. Strauss, former ambassador from this country to Turkey.

"In 1903," he declared, "Strauss had occasion to visit St. Petersburg on official business. He could not get his passport issued by the Russian minister at Constantinople because he was of the Jewish religion. After many diplomatic exchanges Russia finally agreed to issue him a special permit to make the visit. He refused to accept such special permit and resigned his post."

BILLS NOW PENDING.

"The reason Strauss resigned," continued the speaker, "was because he felt that if this country was unable to protect its accredited ambassador against a foreign country with which we were on friendly terms, it could not expect to have honor upheld by a dismembered and surely humiliated minister."

Solomon said there were now three bills pending before Congress asking for the termination of the treaty with Russia unless that country stopped discriminating against American citizens.

"Roosevelt," once declared that if he were given a large enough fleet he would make Russia respect this country. With a much smaller fleet than we now have we taught Spain a lesson in 1906. We did not hesitate to attack it. Why, then, do we not call Russia to account? Are we awed by her armed strength or is it because of our hereditary friendship?"

RUSSIAN CONTEMPT.

Russian contempt for the United States, avowed Solomon, is shown by the fact that Jewish citizens of Germany, France, Austria and England are permitted to travel freely in that country and have been for the last quarter of a century because those countries did not ask for such a right but demanded it.

"Perhaps as a Jew," said Solomon in concluding, "I ought to pray and hope that the pending legislation will be defeated lest it call down upon my unhappy brethren in Russia the vengeance of a semi-savage despotism, but as an American citizen I can only pray that such legislation will be passed so that my country can properly uphold its dignity and honor."

WHITE SLAVE ACT SCORED BY JUDGE

Holt Declares the Federal Law Would Exercise Police Power.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The federal "white slave" statute has come in for strong criticism from Judge Holt in a written opinion handed down today. The United States circuit court here, composed of a chamber to an indictment brought under the statute, Judge Holt says:

"If this were an original question, my opinion would be that the act is unconstitutional. This statute in effect attempts to exercise a purely police power of the state under the guise of regulating commerce."

"If the statute is constitutional it is in the power of the federal government to make it a criminal act for any person to go from one state to another while engaged in any crime, fraud or object which may be deemed objectionable by congress."

FAMOUS CASINO CHANGES HANDS

The Exiled Monsieur Marquet to Resume Gambling Operations.

MONTE CARLO, June 17.—The control of the famous Casino has passed into the hands of Monsieur Marquet, who has been excluded from France and Belgium because of his gambling operations in those countries.

Marquet, who has made an enormous fortune running gambling houses, is now fairly entitled to the sobriquet of the world's gambling king. Besides the Monte Carlo casino, he owns the famous casino at San Sebastian, Spain; also another impressive hotel near Cairo where enormous sums change hands, and another hotel at Brussels. Recently he has acquired an interest in the Hotel De Paris here. His recent difficulties with the Belgian authorities resulted in the closing of his gambling house at Ostend, are still fresh in the public mind.

Camillo, the present manager of the Monte Carlo casino, expects to resign shortly. Marquet is to be elected president before the next season opens.

Hospitality Was Much Appreciated by Guests

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—I shall not be at all surprised to learn at almost any day that Samuel M. Shortridge, most eloquent of our pleaders at the bar, has been taken into the employ of the legal department of the Southern Pacific, there to hold a position similar to that recently vacated by Peter F. Dunne.

At the time Dunne resigned there was a statement that his place would not be filled. He continued and continues to handle some of the railroad's heaviest litigation. It has been thought that this would be all the extra help necessary to carry things along.

But I suspect that President Lovett was a bit shocked over that Frank Shay letter about the Supreme Court, and I shouldn't be at all surprised if he insisted on having some one in Dunne's place to watch such matters when W. F. Herin is away. Lovett is very punctilious in such matters, and is a stickler for the higher principles in the relation of attorneys and courts.

In any event, I think you'll soon find that Shortridge is in Dunne's place—and probably on Dunne's recommendation. The two men are great friends, and when the Southern Pacific cases forced Dunne to lay aside the rich fees of the De Laveaga litigation it was to his friend, Shortridge, that he turned them over. Certainly the tall man eloquent will be a decided addition to any legal staff.

What Sort of Game Is the Government Playing?

Sometimes our Federal government seems to play strange pranks with the laws and regulations. Here we have all sorts of prosecutions of those engaged in "combinations in restraint of trade," which means combinations to keep up rates and prices. The laws are made and interpreted in stricter and stricter fashion in such matters.

But what has the government been doing for us on this coast? It looks very much as if it had forced a combination in restraint of trade by using all its power to insist on a combination.

I refer to the pact about water freight rates between this city and eastern and gulf ports. Bates & Chesebrough came into the game in competition with the Pacific Mail and the American Hawaiian Steamship Company. Soon they began to cut rates. The cuts were met by the older companies and a freight-rate war was on that aided the California shipper. What did the government do?

By reason of its ownership of the Panama canal the government can exercise a sort of control over the rates of the Pacific Mail and Bates & Chesebrough, who tranship over that line. Was the government's power used to keep down the freight rates and benefit the California shipper? Not a bit like it.

The government got the three companies together and forced or persuaded them into a pact to maintain higher rates than they were charging, thus clinching the shipper by just that much. Doesn't that look like forcing a combination in restraint of trade for which prosecutions might be in order?

I'm told that the representative of the American-Hawaiian Company, which company was entirely independent in the matter, said to the government agent before he would sign the pact:

"See here! You must first bring me a written opinion from the office of the Attorney General of the United States that this is all right. I want to be sure we can't be prosecuted for it."

Some Excellent Lessons in Hospitality

Your Claremont Country Club is very much talked about on this side of the bay, and the talk is of a most flattering description. The comments and commendations are caused by recent entertainments given visiting club men at the Claremont Club and grounds. Often you hear one club man say to another:

"That Claremont Club can give us all lessons in how to entertain."

From what I hear, your club has systematized its hospitality so that when a company of visitors from another club is to be taken care of there is nothing left to hap-hazard. Certain men are detailed to attend to certain things, and in that way there is no chance for anybody to be overlooked.

The children of "The Family" are particularly loud in their praises of the way they were entertained during the recent bluerock shoot. "The Family" has quite a reputation for hospitality itself, so its praises are worth the while.

But the Stork is bothered about one thing. When the Claremonters invited the members of "The Family," the wives and sweethearts were included. Now "The Family" want the Claremonters to visit their "Farm," but there is a rule that no woman is permitted there. What are they going to do about it? No man can yet say.

More Ways Than One to Beat Charter

In the recent police imbroglio it came out that the reason for the removal of Commissioners Cutler and Sanborn was that they voted to increase the salary of the secretary of the commission when that salary is fixed by the charter. Sanborn showed that he wasn't on the board when the salary was raised—but that is outside the story.

Now it was an illegal act to increase that salary. The commissioners should have had more sense. They should have gone about the matter in a foxier way. Then they couldn't have been removed in such summary fashion.

We have a secretary of the board of works as well as a secretary of the police commission. The salaries of both are fixed by the charter. But our secretary of the board of works gets $100 a month more than the charter allows him. How? Of course the board can't increase his salary—that's illegal.

Well, I'll tell you how it's done. All through the month that secretary is a secretary, signing documents as such. But on pay day he suddenly becomes an "office deputy" at $250 per. Then he becomes secretary again—and the charter salary of the secretary is only $150 per.

Now the board can name an office deputy and fix his salary at what it pleases—and be inside the law—though it can't raise the secretary's salary by so much as a dollar. The secretary is the secretary for all the purposes of his office, but he becomes an office deputy when it is time to draw down his pay.

And it seems that our recent budget does not provide anything for the salary of a secretary—just for the salary of an office deputy. Which shows that there is more than one way to beat a charter as well as to skin a cat.

Just One of Mizner's Jokes

Though Wilson Mizner may be the most famous of the wits of the Mizner family, all of whom have quick minds, it is Lansing Mizner, the eldest brother, who holds the top place as a humorist in the local clubs. His most recent mot is being told up and down, and it is at the expense of E. Duplessis Beylard of San Mateo and the Pacific Union Club.

Beylard and Mizner are both club exponents of the game of bridge whist and Mizner hasn't any very high opinion of the other's attainments. The other evening Beylard was relating an experience with a robber—a footpad—who held him up, saying:

"Hold up your hands or I'll blow out your brains!"

"Did you declare a chicane?" asked Mizner, softly.

What Will the Changes and Charges Be

In the matter of wireless telegraphy we are promised a regular service to Hawaii in a few days. The promise extends out over the ocean to New Zealand, Hong Kong, the Orient. Melonta tauta, as Poe used to quote—these things are of the future.

Of course, this is a new scheme that can work by day as well as by night, and all that. We have heard much boasting, but the thing is coming, and coming soon. Then what of the charges? How can the ocean cables and land wires compete? The air lanes are free. The charges for maintenance will be at a minimum.

When the Atlantic cable was an announced success the word was flashed to the toilers in Alaska and Siberia, "Come home." The only question now seems to be, how long can the wireless be kept from entering the field. But how much will they charge per word?

Is Our Governor Truly Democratic?

Governor Johnson gets much popularity and commendation in Sacramento because he goes about the streets smoking his peace-pipe and putting on no lugs and airs. Consequently many people say as he passes: "At last we have a governor of the people—a truly democratic executive."

But as against this appearance of "aisy ways" I am told that in his gubernatorial mansion on H street Governor Johnson has installed a butler.

It has been many and many a year since a governor of California arose to the aristocratic dignity of a butler—a really and truly "Joimes, me man." Back in the days when governors were apt to be rich and haughty they may have had—and probably did have—butlers white or butlers black. But Budd and Markham, Gage and Pardee, Gillett, Bartlett, Waterman—not one would have known what to do with a butler if he had had one. He wouldn't have dared install or order one.

So, if Governor Johnson has a butler he has more nerve than his predecessors—more nerve and more trouble.

Why Don't You Let Wide World Know

Why doesn't your Chamber of Commerce—or an association of your Chamber of Commerce—make a move toward letting the country know of the beauties in the landscape surrounding Oakland? You have all too long been hiding your light under a bushel.

Every tourist hears of, and probably sees, Smiley Heights, Roubidoux Heights, Point Loma and the other show trips of the southland. In the hill country between North Berkeley and San Leandro there is far more to show and to see. Yet even the people of San Francisco know almost nothing of this beauty land.

My idea would be to arrange for a "chump chariot," as the rubberneck wagon is called, to start from the San Francisco hotels every day—or on stated days of the week—to make the trip over the shoulders of your splendid hills. It would be the greatest advertisement your vicinage could have, and before long the glory of your surroundings would be famous wherever traveling men and women get together.

Roos Bros. Prosperous

The statement made by me to the effect that Roos Bros. were asking for a reduction of their rent seems to be a mistake. I am told on the best authority that they are doing a splendid business and are prosperous in every way. This information is pleasing because they are progressive people and have worked hard in upbuilding the city. They deserve success. The following letter is not only interesting but self-explanatory:

San Francisco, June 17, 1911.

EDITOR TRIBUNE. Dear Sir: In that part of your Sunday morning's paper entitled "The Knave" we are much astonished to find an article on page 26 under the caption "Rents Are Tumbling," where-in you discuss our firm.

We have read the article with much interest and will thank you very much if you will give us the source of your information, as the news is foreign to us. Being liberal users of your space we do not hesitate in asking you to lend us your material and valued assistance in making the facts conform to the story.

We now take this occasion to advise you that in spite of the purport of your article we have been enjoying so satisfactory a trade that we have been negotiating with our landlord for additional space and beg to assure you, and further ask you to advise your informant that we fail to find him in a philanthropic mood.

Very truly yours,

ROOS BROS. Inc.

For Her Children's Sake

The wife's side of the Albert Sutton divorce case is coming to light for the first time since the filing of a motion in the superior court to modify the decree of divorce granted two years ago. Little has been heard about the case, except from the husband and his friends, but now comes the side of the woman who suffered all sorts of unjust accusations, slanders and misstatements for the sake of her two children, rather than give to the world the true story of their father's derelictions at home. Mrs. Sutton has never made public the real reason she abandoned her husband. She kept the awful secret for her children's sake.

Also comes the story that the former Mrs. Sutton, who was one of the heirs of the late William Meek, was induced to permit Sutton's suit for divorce to go by default by her brother, the late Horry Meek, who in turn, it is claimed, was threatened by Sutton with exposure to his creditors. Meek, it is said, was heavily in debt and trying to float through a period of financial stress. At the time of Horry Meek's death his estate showed an indebtedness of over $400,000.

The former Mrs. Sutton, some months after her divorce, was married to Alfred E. Montgomery, a wealthy Harvard graduate and son of a New York millionaire. Sutton claimed that Montgomery was formerly a saloon proprietor, because he bought a piece of property for income purposes upon which a well patronized saloon had stood for many years. Sutton's marriage to beautiful Ethel Meek was a society event of far-reaching importance. He was at that time a comparatively unknown architect, but through the wealth and influence of the Meek family he became quite prominent in the business world and was made a director of the Bank of San Francisco. After the divorce he was unable to keep up his elegant office and establishment made possible by his wife's income. He was forced to resign as director of the bank and with an ever diminishing clientele left California for Oregon, where he married another wealthy woman, a Miss Hewett of Tacoma, Washington. It is claimed that his attitude toward his wife had much to do with his leaving San Francisco, where, after the severing of the nuptial knot, he found himself again poorer and with little influence.

Political Struggle Across the Bay

The local politicians are busy making up tickets for the municipal campaign, the primary of which will be held in September and the general election in November. The first in the field was the Municipal Conference of 1911, composed of men of affairs in both professional and commercial circles. They have indorsed James Rolph Jr., commission merchant and banker, for mayor, and are now about completing a ticket of eighteen supervisors, at which they will stop, having decided not to meddle with the municipal offices and thus avoid the troubles that come with political patronage.

Rolph has also been indorsed by the Democratic and the Republican county committees, as well as a number of minor organizations. His only opponent is P. H. McCarthy, the incumbent mayor, and the latter is not only the candidate of the Union Labor Party but is being indorsed almost nightly by newly formed district and precinct organizations of great political variety.

The scramble for mayor and other municipal offices is especially keen in this canvass, as the term of the chief executive as well as that of many other offices have been extended from two to four years. Then too the great honor of being the exposition mayor has its allurements.

There is some talk of a fusion ticket, but the difficulties of effecting a combination is indicated in the fact that the Democrats already have indorsed nearly a full ticket and are not inclined to withdraw any of the men they have named. The skirling of the McNab bagpipes was heard early in the fray and all the choice patronage offices were soon claimed by the Democratic County Committee. Two city offices of minor job-producing capacity alone were left by the thrifty Bourbons. These are auditor and district attorney, which it is said Chief McNab is willing to present to the other parties and organizations in consideration of their indorsing his slate in full. The Republican County Committee has not risen with any marked rapidity to this lean bait.

There are some conferences of political leaders and near leaders on the tapis, but what will come of them is enigmatical. The Municipal Conference is inclined to go it alone, having a keen recollection of the disaster that followed fusion in the Patridge campaign, that candidate having been beaten to a frazzle by Schmitz, notwithstanding the man with the game bird name had the nominations of all the old line party machines.

The outlook is for the most fiercely and stubbornly contested campaign San Francisco ever has witnessed, and that is going some. The leaders of the McCarthy forces appear to have taken up the cry, "Lay on McDuff, and damned be he who first shall cry 'enough.'" They are making a most aggressive campaign, fighting for advantage at every point and at every opportunity.

The Rolph managers, on the contrary, are making a conservative but quietly persistent fight with little demonstration to date, but with the purpose of concentrating their efforts, as much as possible, for a whirlwind finish. Politics will just hum in this city in the weeks immediately preceding the primary of September 26th.

The greatest efforts are being concentrated on the mayoralty contest, candidates for other offices being left, in great measure, to shift for themselves and make their fights independently. The percentage of advantage appears to be with a majority of those incumbent officials who are seeking to succeed themselves, as against newly introduced, and heretofore unknown aspirants for political preferment.

Gnats Among Directors

The directors of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition Company, with whom now rests the decision in respect to the site for the big fair of 1915, devoted last week to inspecting the various points at which it has been suggested the exposition be held.

This week the directors will proceed to a discussion of the various sites they have visited and at the end of the debate, ballots will be had with a view to making a choice. The contest appears to have narrowed down to the Golden Gate Park and Harbor View sites. It is said that the fight is a very close one and that the partisanship is very bitter.

Hope is expressed among the citizens that when the site shall have been selected by a majority of the board of directors the petty bickerings that have marked the long-delay will cease and all unite in carrying forward the enterprise to success.

One feature of the course pursued by the directors, and which has been a subject of much adverse comment, is the effort of some of the members to hog everything for San Francisco. The mere suggestion that Oakland, or any of the other transbay cities might be advantaged in the slightest degree by the selection of a certain site has been sufficient to excite these pismires to a frenzy of opposition to it. Certain local journals have sought to make capital for themselves and the interests they represent by "displaying," in large type, expressions that indicated Oakland might secure some of the traffic should a bay-shore site be chosen. An attitude has been assumed by a fortunately small minority of the directors that the exposition is a private affair of San Francisco and to be conducted for the sole benefit of this city.

These men of contracted craniums forget that the exposition is not a provincial affair but one that belongs to the State, Coast and country, and at which the nations of the earth are to be guests of the United States and participate with the latter in celebrating the greatest engineering accomplishment of history.

Of course these gnats are but a meager minority of the board of directors and the majority of that body may be relied upon to select a site that will best subserve the interests of the exposition itself, which of course means the interests of the whole State and Nation, and not the private purposes of a few selfish speculators. The suggestion of the insects who would put a barbed wire fence around San Francisco and the exposition are not given attention other than to be brushed aside as any other small, contemptible and irritating thing.

The quality of the strife over the selection of an exposition is indicated in the fact that the choice will be made by secret ballot.

The Police Chief Farce

If San Francisco survives unscathed its recent ridiculous attitude relative to Chief of Police it will have established that it is possessed of a vitality and recuperative powers unprecedented in a municipality. This city has withstood earthquake, fire and internal strife galore during the past six years and if it can endure the derision of the outside world to which it has been subjected in this ridiculous controversy it will have shown itself invincible.

The game of see-saw was only brought to a conclusion by Chief Seymour resigning. At one time Seymour was Chief of Police and at another White, the new appointee of the commission, took command, while on occasion both divided the dubious honor.

At one time last week it looked as though the number of Chiefs of Police was to be further augmented. Postmaster Arthur Fisk, refusing to recognize either of the combatants, forwarded the police mail to Clerk Skelly of the department, the latter distributing it in his best judgment, each chief being given his share. It was suggested that Postmaster-General Hitchcock might yet be called from Washington, D. C., to participate in the controversy and not improbable that a Federal angle might be given it that would necessitate the intervention of President Taft.

While the burlesque was on the local boards a mockery of municipal management was presented to the electors daily. The state of public mind that permitted its continuance was even more remarkable than the farce itself.

The Riding Bohemian

Here is the latest Pacific Union Club story, and it is said to be a true one about one of its members, who, when the lure of the drink emporiums is strong with him, has a penchant for riding many hours in a taxi. Last Sunday this particular clubman engaged a taxicab and instructed the chauffeur to drive him all over the city, stopping now and then at saloons where he was positive there was good whiskey for sale. The clubman just as the trip began gave the driver of the machine the names of six refreshment places to stop at as a starter. The clubman is wise in his day and generation. All the drinking was done by himself and the chauffeur was kept strictly sober, as a good taxi pilot should always be. Machine and the two men were out a good many hours and the taxi driver became hungry and tired. He had a Sunday dinner engagement and his inhospitable customer was no inducement for him to break it. Finally when it got to be about 7 p. m. and they were at Golden Gate avenue and Polk street on their second return from the Cliff House, the driver stopped and impatiently asked the clubman:

"What street do you want to go to now?"

"What streets (hic) have you got?" was the mumbling reply that jolted the chauffeur.

Girl Who Could Say No

Miss Mary Keeney, the charming society girl and daughter of Dr. James W. Keeney, who is to become the wife of Talbot Walker next week, can, when she wants to, say no with as much determination and finality as did her father once with John W. Mackay, the late Comstock and telegraph and cable multimillionaire. About two years ago Norman Hapgood of Collier's Weekly and Charles Dana Gibson, the artist famous for his sketches of the American woman, were at the Fairmont Hotel. They met, among other local society women, Miss Keeney and Miss Anna Peters. Gibson was so taken with the style of beauty of both young women that he begged the privilege of sittings in order to sketch them, he to use the sketches for his own purposes. They were willing to be the subjects of so able an artist, but wanted the sketches for themselves and not for publication by him. Neither of the young women would recede from this position in spite of the artist's blandishments and pleadings. This brings me to the time when Papa Keeney said no to Croesus Mackay. Some twenty years ago the latter was shot in this city by a mentally unsound old miner and for several weeks was in a dangerous condition at the Palace Hotel. Keeney was one of the surgeons called to attend the distinguished patient almost immediately after the shooting. After Mackay got well, Keeney sent in a bill for $5000 for his services. The bill was promptly returned with a note to the effect that it was so excessive as to be tantamount to an attempted hold-up. In anger the doctor promptly sent back the bill receipted in full, and no amount of persuasion thereafter could induce him to send a modified charge for his services or in any way to accept any kind of a payment from Mackay and his friends.

Carrie Knew How to Make Money

Carrie Nation, the famous Kansas saloon smasher, whose death is announced, paid one visit to San Francisco. This was in the fall of 1901. A press agent was with this odd personality and they had not been in town half a day before a well-known saloonkeeper, who is always on the hunt for both personal and business advertising, waited on them at the Russ House and effected a deal to his own and their satisfaction. It showed that Carrie Nation was not one whit behind the saloonman in appreciating an advertisement and in grasping all the coin she could wherever she went. It was agreed that at 6 p. m., a busy hour at the saloon, she should rush in, yell a few words to the proprietor to the effect that he ought to be in some other line of business and then, with a small tack hammer concealed under her coat, break one of the small panes of glass in the swinging doors of the place. She was to get $50 for carrying out this little advertising conspiracy. The affair took place as per programme. All the customers in the place were fooled; so were the daily papers, which wrote the incident up. The saloonman got what he wanted and the next night Carrie Nation had a crowded hall to hear her talk, many having been drawn there because of the window-smashing episode and the publicity given it.

The next day in a Pullman car southbound for Los Angeles the Kansas woman invaded the smoking compartment where several men were enjoying a social drink. She upbraided them and quick as a flash knocked the bottle to the floor from the hands of the man who was holding it. The conductor of the train, who was passing at the time, threatened to put her off if she did not behave herself and she quickly retired from the scene and subsided.

Blackmailing a Business Man

The shooting affair in New York between W. E. D. Stokes and Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, over, it is alleged, a demand by one of the women for $25,000 for the return of letters said to have been written by him to one of the young women, reminds me of how not long ago there was a stormy scene between a prominent San Francisco business man and citizen of affairs and a certain married woman because of some letters of his in her possession. There was no attempt at shooting in this case, although the woman announced in his presence and that of his attorney, one of the leaders at the bar, that she was armed. She produced all the letters for their inspection and was paid on the spot $10,000 in greenbacks. It was a most pronounced case of blackmail. The man was innocent of any wrongdoing with the woman. The letters were a business and not a love correspondence. For reasons best known to the man he wanted them returned and destroyed. The woman's husband had at one time worked for this prominent and wealthy citizen in a confidential capacity and had stolen the letters. He had been discharged a year before because of a questionable transaction. I do not know of anything worse in the blackmail line than this action on the part of the woman and her husband. The business man has to keep mum and therein lies their safety from prosecution. Strange to say, this couple appear to have many excellent friends. The husband, who is a poor excuse for a man, went East while his wife shrewdly and boldly pressed the nasty affair to a successful conclusion for him and herself.

Christened Jack London

John W. Kendrick, who resigned as vice-president in charge of operation of the Santa Fe Railroad the other day and was succeeded by William B. Storey, a former San Francisco boy, has a most winsome personality and is always considerate, dignified and a great reader. When Jack London's "Call of the Wild" made its first appearance, Kendrick, like many another, enthused over it. On one of his frequent visits to San Francisco, he expressed a desire to meet the author. He also said with some show of feeling:

"Why is he not treated with more dignity, and called John London? I see all the newspapers and magazines in their formal book reviews are calling him Jack London. In fact, everybody seems to be saying Jack London. This is not right."

The next day the able railroad official was introduced to the author and in the course of conversation asked him if he didn't rebel at seeing himself in print always as Jack London.

"Not at all," was the reply of the author and Red Socialist. "My parents christened me as Jack London and as that name was good enough for them it is good enough for me. So it is never the formal 'John in my case'."

That ended Mr. Kendrick's solicitude about the lack of dignified treatment of London by the press and public.

Passing of Nob Hill Properties

Stanford University trustees in the loaning of the surplus funds of the institution are pursuing a liberal policy for the development of this city. They have already loaned on first mortgage security $2,000,000 for new buildings. The University Club on Powell street, just opposite from the Fairmont Hotel, represents one of these loans. Another just completed affects the old Stanford mansion lot at the southwest corner of Powell and California streets and the eight-story apartment house to be erected on it by L. H. Sly. The trustees have loaned on the property $550,000. They give $300,000 towards the building, Sly contributing the remainder of its cost, $400,000. They also take a mortgage for the purchase price of the lot by Sly, which is $250,000. This Stanford lot sale to Sly is part of the story of the passing into other hands of the Nob Hill properties of the rich railroad and mining magnates of twenty and odd years ago. Only one is left. That is the old Colton lot now in the possession of the widow of C. P. Huntington. There is no doubt that in the near future it will pass into other hands. It is known that Mrs. Huntington has about decided to present it for some public use, probably a museum. The Hopkins-Searles lot, adjoining the Stanford property on the west, is now the property of the University of California. The Crocker's have given their block to the Episcopal Church for cathedral purposes. The old Flood mansion is today the new home of the Pacific Union Club. James G. Fair's block is the site of the Fairmont Hotel, which is leased to the Palace Hotel Company, and is owned by his daughter, Mrs. Teresa Oelrichs of New York.

A Woman's Novel

Mrs. Frona Wait Colburn, the writer, lecturer and well-known club woman, has returned from New York, where she arranged for the republication of her book, "Yermah, the Dorado," which represents twenty years' work. The scene of the story is laid on the peninsula of San Francisco. The original manuscript, notes and plates were destroyed in the big fire of 1906. The romance deals with El Dorado, which, for the purposes of the author, is a man and not a country. The hero is a fair-haired prince of a vanished white race which flourished in America in the remote past. He becomes the Redman's Messiah. Mrs. Marah Ellis, the Eastern author and playwright, is to dramatize the story, which is said to abound in splendid pageant possibilities. The revised edition of "Yermah, the Dorado," will appear among the early fall publications. When William R. Hearst took possession of the Examiner of this city in the middle eighties, the author, then Mrs. Frona Wait, was the only woman member of its editorial staff and the first active woman writer on the daily press of San Francisco. Always competent and appreciated by her superiors, she finally resigned to enter the lecture field and engage in literary work. F. H. Colburn, her husband, is a well-known official of the California Bankers' Association.

Santa Clara Graduates

Santa Clara College, the oldest institution of learning in California, is going to weld its graduates, students and all who have ever been scholars within its portals into one big association, which is to meet once a year in this city for a banquet and a discussion of pertinent topics. The first dinner is to be held next Wednesday night at the St. Francis Hotel and an attendance of 500 is being arranged for. Thomas I. Bergin, the retired lawyer of this city and for years the law partner of the late Hall McAllister, is the first and oldest graduate of the institution. On that account he is to have the honor of presiding at the first dinner. Many men in professional and business life in the bay cities claim Santa Clara College as their alma mater and they are all taking great interest in the new association and its annual gatherings. One of the institution's most brilliant graduates is D. M. Delmas, who is now practicing at the New York bar. It is said of him that the college never had a student who was more proficient than he in the ancient languages. The institution is preparing to erect a number of modern buildings and the new association is expected to be a source of great strength in helping along these improvements.

Mecca for Divorcees

I have had a trip to Reno and saw some of the sights of that Mecca for divorcees.

About 600 men and women, mostly from the East and mostly females, are in the Sagebrush metropolis securing a legal residence of six months in order to untie the nuptial knot. One authority figures that these hundreds of domestically embroiled people mean financially to the city $700,000. Since Nat Goodwin, Corey and Gayley of the Steel Trust, Mrs. McKim, Virginia Harned, the actress, and other prominent people advertised by their mismatched troubles Reno as a get-quick divorce rendezvous, this authority says over $2,500,000 has been spent in the town by this class of people. Since the last Nevada legislature made the securing of a divorce easier than ever more of this class are coming and will continue to come until the better sentiment in the State makes the securing of divorces more stringent. Both rich and poor are there with their troubles. Wealthy women predominate and lots of affinities arrive just at the proper time to wed those fresh from the divorce court. Justice Lee Davis seems to have the call in officiating at these weddings. He gets generous fees. The participants in these weddings take the first trains out. The wealth and tastes of most of the six-months sojourners is such that Thomas', the leading restaurant, is a veritable Sherry's, and a dozen stores carry expensive lines of goods to cater to them. A good many make frequent trips to the St. Francis and Palace hotels in this city, and thus make the six months pass with a minimum of ennui.

One Eastern man when asked by one of the divorce trial judges why he had come to Nevada told the truth and had his case thrown out.

"I am here because of the leniency of your divorce law," he said.

"There is such a thing as being too frank and truthful," said his lawyer to him afterwards. "Now we will have to begin your case all over again and for goodness sake the next time a judge questions you say that owing to the good climate and the development possibilities of Nevada you came here with the idea of making a new home for yourself."

Bibles and Sunday school scholars and workers are to be much in evidence here during the coming week. The interested parties have hopes that the result will be a great spiritual uplift in San Francisco. One of the officers of the International Sunday School Association already on the ground stated last night that during the last three years Sunday schools have increased in the United States at the rate of 200 a week and additions in church membership from them have grown to as high as 755 a day. There are, he says, 3,000,000 men in Sunday school work, or more than in all the men's guilds, brotherhoods and Christian associations combined. The lessons now in use each Sunday are studied by 26,000,000 people. At next week's convention in this city the lesson committee is to present plans for a new graded course. The committee, on account of these plans, will ask for an increase of its annual allowance from $50,000 to $100,000. Hereafter more attention is to be given to the study of the Bible in homes and various institutions so as to reach grown-ups and shut-ins, to the cultivation of worship on the part of children and Bible classes in colleges. Frank L. Brown of Brooklyn, who is at the head of the largest Sunday school in the world, will be one of the convention's interesting characters.

Society People in London

Several letters received this week by friends tell something of interest about prominent Californians and others who are in London for the coronation. According to one of them, Special Ambassador John Hays Hammond is to have at his London residence some of the women relatives of his wife and himself. One of them is a niece, Miss Ella McMullin of this city. Miss Mary Hoyle, a society belle of St. Louis, is another niece who will be there. Still a third niece, Miss McRay of Detroit, has not been overlooked. Miss Elizabeth Hammond, a sister of Mr. Hammond, is also of the ambassadorial party. Special Ambassador Hammond, during his stay in the British metropolis, is to have at dinner his old friend and South African chum, H. Rider Haggard, the author of "She" and other thrilling African stories. It has long been the firm conviction of the two men that they discovered in Africa the mines from which King Solomon obtained the gold and silver for the temple, and they dearly love to talk about the subject.

Another letter mentions that the William H. Crocker's of this city and their relatives, the C. B. Alexanders of New York, are to give a joint dinner at Claridges, the most fashionable London restaurant. The Reids are to be there; also Prince and Princess Poniatowski, Count and Countess Grannard, the John Wards, Miss Jennie Crocker, Templeton Crocker and his wife and Mrs. W. B. Bourn, the wife of the local capitalist. There are to be sixty at the dinner, so it is presumed other San Franciscans in London and members of that city's society will be on the invitation list, especially those of the latter who are friends of the Reids, the Wards and Count and Countess Grannard. Whether the latter (nee Mills of New York) and the Duchess of Roxburghe, who was May Goelet of New York, are to have the Crocker's at the Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe's party next week is not mentioned. It is said the William Miller Grams of this city and Santa Barbara will be on that party's invitation list and also on that of Lady Paget's Henry VI quadrille party on June 20th, Mrs. Miller having been received by both of those families during her former seasons in the British capital.

Muir's Notable Students

It may not be generally known that John Muir, naturalist and author, who has just announced his intention of exploring the Amazon river clear to its headwaters in the Andes, gave the late Edward H. Harriman and William F. Herrin, the lawyer of this city, a private course of instruction in the study of trees several years before the fire. In spite of the many business activities of the two men, they found time to make a study of that branch of botany and became as interested in it as though they were college students. Harriman began reading on the subject at the time he headed an expedition of scientists to study the flora and fauna of Alaska. John Muir was one of the scientists and largely contributed to the success of the expedition. Several published volumes were the result of it and they are today the best authority on that subject. It was Harriman who interested Herrin in the study of trees. Muir selected the books for them to read and just before the railroad wizard died he complimented both him and Herrin on the proficiency they showed. Muir was with them in Europe in the summer of 1904 and took them on a long tramp in the German forests and also in the Alps to give them some practical lessons. Later on both men, at Muir's request, wrote him a 4000-word essay on what they had studied and learned on the general subject during the previous two or three years. Herrin still maintains great interest in the matter and has acquired a small library about the trees of this and other lands.

Another Prospective Divorce

Gossip has it that a certain local business man and his wife, who are childless, have, after twenty years of married life, come to the parting of the ways. It is said the wife is consulting an attorney about getting a divorce on the ground of cruelty. As the story runs, she does not charge her better-half with ever having beaten her or throwing things at her. It is mental cruelty she complains of. During the past five years, for reasons beyond her understanding, she says the husband has become morose and taciturn to an extent hardly believable. Morning after morning for months at a time his response to her cheery "Good morning" has been the laconic exclamation, "Huh." Did she at times vary her salutation by remarking, "Good-morning. This is going to be a fine day," he would slightly unfold the drapery of his studied taciturnity and permit a few words to drop out after this fashion:

"Huh! What the di— do I care."

PORTO RICAN SHIPMENTS

Hawaii Ranks First Among Noncontiguous States of America.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Trade of the United States with its noncontiguous territories in the fiscal year which ends with the current month will exceed two hundred million dollars, against less than one hundred million in 1904. During the ten months ending with April, for which details have been received by the Bureau of Statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor, the trade in question has proceeded at the rate of $202,000,000 per annum, compared with one hundred and ninety-one million in 1904, one hundred and eighteen million in 1905, and ninety-six million in 1906. In this trade merchandise received in the United States slightly exceeds in value that sent to the territories in question, though shipments from the United States show the larger and more rapid growth.

In 1903, the earliest year for which complete records are available, the shipments from the United States to the territories under discussion—Alaska, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines—aggregated thirty-six million dollars; in 1910, eighty-three million; and in 1911, seem likely to be ninety-six million—a gain of sixty million dollars, or nearly one hundred and seventy per cent. Inward shipments from the territories were fifty-nine million dollars in 1903, one hundred and eight million in 1910, and at the rate of one hundred and seven million in the ten months of 1911, a gain of forty-eight million dollars or eighty per cent over 1903.

The largest gain in outward trade with the noncontiguous territories was in shipments to Porto Rico, those in 1911 during the ten months for which figures are at hand, having been at the rate of thirty-five million dollars per annum, against twenty-seven million in 1910, twelve million in 1903, and seven million in 1901, the year following its organization as a customs district of the United States.

HAWAIIAN LARGE.

To Hawaii the shipments during 1911 to date have been at the rate of twenty-two million dollars per annum, against twenty and one-half million last year, eleven million in 1903, and eight and three-quarter millions in 1900. To Alaska the domestic shipments during the fiscal year 1911 have been at the rate of twenty million dollars per annum, compared with eighteen and two-third millions last year and nine and one-half millions in 1903, the year in which the official record began. To the Philippine Islands the year's shipments of domestic merchandise will aggregate about nineteen million dollars, against sixteen and three-quarter millions last year, four million in 1903 and one and two-third millions in 1900.

Hawaii ranks first among the noncontiguous territories in the value of shipments to the United States, though this year's figures are considerably below those for 1910. During 1911 the shipments have thus far been at the rate of forty million dollars per annum, against forty-six million last year, twenty-six million in 1903 and four million in 1900. From Alaska the value of the shipments of merchandise in 1911 will be about thirteen and one-half million dollars, against twelve and one-half million last year and ten and one-quarter million in 1903. The receipts of domestic gold from Alaska, against eighteen and one-half million last year.

COTTON ON INCREASE.

The principal articles showing increased shipments to Porto Rico during the ten months of 1911 as compared with those of last year: cotton manufactures, four and one-half million dollars, against less than three million in the same months of 1910; iron and steel, four and one-half million, against less than three million last year; rice, three and one-fourth million, against a little over three million last year; meat and dairy products, three million, against two and one-fourth million last year; wheat flour, one and two-thirds million; cars and carriages, one million; boards and other wood manufactures; one and three-fourth million; leather and manufactures thereof, one million; and vegetables, two-thirds of a million dollars. The gain in shipments to Hawaii are distributed among numerous items of a miscellaneous character, chiefly cotton manufactures, iron and steel, lumber, and meats. The decreased shipments to Alaska, against principally in iron and steel, breadstuffs, explosives, meat and dairy products, and lumber. Gains occurred in cotton manufactures, mineral oils, tin manufactures, malt liquors, and paper manufactures. The largest gain in shipments to the Philippines occurred in cotton manufactures, from two and one-third million dollars in ten months of 1910 to three and three-fourth million in 1911. Substantial improvement was also made in automobiles, iron and steel manufactures, illuminating oil, and paper manufactures.

Alaska's gain in shipments to the United States during 1911 occurred in canned salmon, an increase of one million dollars; dried, smoked, and cured fish, a gain of one-quarter of a million; and copper in ore, matte and regulus, an increase of $177,000. Losses occurred in furs and fur skins and whalebone; also in domestic gold, as already stated. Receipts of Hawaiian sugar during the ten months of 1911 aggregated twenty-six and three-quarter million dollars, against thirty-one million last year. Fruits and nuts, however, increased from one and one-half million to two million dollars in the respective ten months' periods. Porto Rico's increased shipments occurred in sugar and molasses, which increased from sixteen and three-quarter million dollars in ten months of 1910 to eighteen million this year; cigars, from three and three-quarter million dollars to four and one-third million; unmanufactured tobacco, from one million to

GRASSHOPPERS SPREAD SCARE IN KANSAS TOWN

MINNEAPOLIS, Kas., June 17.—Visions of devastation by grasshoppers came to citizens here yesterday when thousands of the bugs suddenly settled down on the city. For about twenty minutes the invasion lasted and last night most of the pests had disappeared. The grasshoppers followed a light rain that broke a drought of several weeks.

SERENADE SENATOR TO WIN HIM FOR SUFFRAGE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 17.—Two hundred women, carrying Chinese lanterns and chanting songs, paraded the business streets of Syracuse last night and finally gathered in front of the residence of State Senator J. Henry Walters, where they made a prolonged demonstration in an effort to change his views on the question of woman suffrage. The parade included practically every prominent club and society woman in the city. The demonstration was the climax of a three-weeks' votes-for-women campaign.

CHARGE U. S. OFFICIALS ABETTING MONOPOLY

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Charges that officials of the postoffice department are abetting the existence of a monopoly in the mail chute business have been made before the House committee on expenditures in that department by F. T. Nesbitt of New York, a contractor, and Edwin F. Naulty, president of a mail chute company in New York. They complained that a Rochester, N. Y., company has been maintained in its monopoly by the methods of the department.

MUNICIPAL MARKETS TO COMBAT FAMINE

BERLIN, June 17.—To combat the general meat famine that is increasing throughout Germany, despite the recent concessions of the imperial government to facilitate the importation of cattle, the cities are establishing municipal fish markets for the sale of sea fish at low prices. Charlottenburg, Spandau and Wilmersdorf, three Berlin suburbs, have opened or are about to open such markets, and their example has just been followed by Leipzig. As fish is not popular as a food in Germany, the present fish markets are undeveloped and inadequate, and the municipalities have found it necessary to take this step in order to place a good nourishing food within the reach of the masses who cannot pay the prohibitive prices now charged for meats.

Racial Feeling in Church Administration.

Race friction has become very acute in the Catholic diocese of Portland, Maine. It was the occasion a fortnight ago of a demonstration at the funeral of Dr. J. L. Fortier at Waterville. Over 8000 persons, all French-Canadians, assembled to express their disapproval of Bishop Walsh and his method of dealing with the malcontents who are disputing his authority. Dr. Fortier died under interdict and hence the funeral services could not be held in a Catholic church.

Race feeling is at the bottom of the trouble; indeed, it is the whole trouble. In recent years there has been an enormous emigration from French Canada into Maine, and the French Canadians now far exceed in number the English-speaking Catholics of the diocese. They are very clannish and are devotedly attached to their language and racial customs. They want only priests of their own race as rectors of their churches, and insist upon having French taught in the parochial schools. When Bishop O'Connell died they made a desperate effort to have a French-Canadian appointed his successor, and when Bishop Walsh was appointed they broke out almost in open revolt. They disputed his authority at every step and went so far as to petition the Maine Legislature to abolish the corporation sole in the diocese of Portland.

Since then the dispute has waxed warmer and has reached such a stage of bitterness that the parish priests, nearly all of whom are English-speaking (most of them Irish), are at loggerheads with their parishioners, the great majority of whom are of French-Canadian birth or descent. No religious or even doctrinal question is involved in the controversy; only racial difficulties and prejudices. The French-Canadians are insubordinate because they cannot have priests of their own race as their spiritual shepherds.

It is a repetition on a larger scale of the conflict in East St. Louis some years ago when an Irish parish revolted against the authority of a German priest. Such conflicts merely illustrate the persistency of race feeling and the tenacity of race ideals in even religious matters. The Catholic church has no more loyal adherents than the French-Canadians, and nowhere is ecclesiastical authority more respected or more supreme than it is in French Canada. But in Maine these devout and obedient followers of the Roman church have become disobedient and contumacious because the church authorities have not yielded to demands made on purely racial grounds. The authority is rejected solely because the prelate invested with it is a scion of another race. His piety and ability are not questioned—only his blood and speech. However, the trouble will end as all such troubles end. The church will maintain its authority and then adapt its rule to the situation as the Catholic church has a knack of doing, and the whole thing will pass into history as a passing incident.

The Chamber of Commerce ought to exert itself to build up a wholesale district in Oakland. Nowhere on the Pacific Coast are there better facilities for the quick and cheap handling of merchandise. In fact, few cities in the country have such good and such widely distributed facilities for handling freight by both rail and water. Building sites close to rail and wharf are cheap and convenient to the retail center. All that is requisite in building up a big jobbing trade in this city is energy and organizing ability. This branch of commercial development has been neglected too long and left too entirely to individual effort. All the forces in Oakland should combine to give it a boost.

Senator Cummins is finding that insurgency is not the road to the White House. Having made that discovery, he is not willing to insurge further merely to aid La Follette's ambition or assist the Democrats to elect a successor to Taft.

La Follette Hoists the Black Flag.

It has been announced in Washington that Robert La Follette will fight Taft for the Presidential nomination next year.

This announcement explains what all the kicking is about. There is no longer any secret as to the reason why La Follette has stubbornly fought every measure that Taft has stood for. While he was digging a pitfall for the President he was trying to build a ladder for himself. That is why he is trying to block reciprocity with Canada and striving to embarrass the President in every direction.

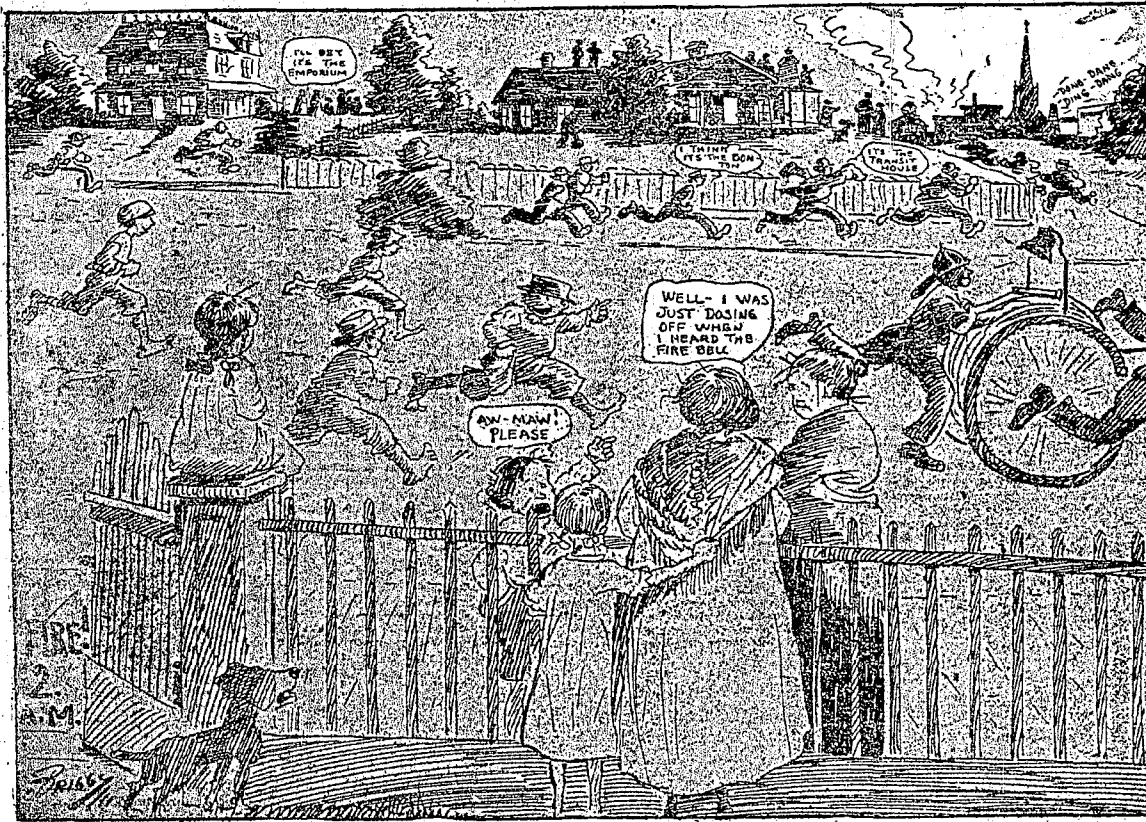

It seems impossible for La Follette to win the Presidential nomination, but should accident give it to him, his defeat would be a foregone conclusion. He would be left at the post by either Governor Marmon, Woodrow Wilson or Champ Clark. In short, he is an impossibility—his nomination would be a futility.

The character of the campaign La Follette is making is shown by the battle cry his henchmen have raised, "La Follette and a chance to win, or Taft and sure defeat." Thus the knock at Taft is stronger than the claim for La Follette. Reduced to logical terms it is an assertion that Taft is doomed to defeat if nominated, but there is a chance of electing La Follette. The animus of malice and disappointment is the dominant note in this watchword. The main effort is to strike down Taft even after his renomination. Behind it is discernible a treacherous purpose to aid the Democrats in their campaign against Taft, which, in effect, is a purpose to betray and defeat the Republican party.

However, the La Follette declaration will do some good. It will clear up some doubts and smoke out some skulking hypocrites. We shall soon see who are really Taft's friends in this State. The Lissner-Rowell junta will either have to hoist openly the La Follette banner or crawl back into the Taft tent. Thus far, without openly declaring themselves, they have been plotting to betray the President while trying to make him believe that his true friends in this State are unworthy of trust.

The cotton crop is a tremendous item in the credit balance for agriculture in the United States. It is announced in the Census Bureau's annual bulletin that the value of the cotton crop, including the seed, for 1910 was $963,180,000, an increase of $151,090,000 over the value of the crop of 1909. No wonder the South is prosperous. In 1910 the Southern States produced more foodstuffs than they had ever done before. They produced one-third of the entire corn crop of the country—nearly 1,000,000 bushels, besides vast quantities of wheat, oats, sugar cane, rice, fruits, berries and vegetables. But the cotton crop represents actual cash—money in hand—and its importance as a staple was never greater than it is today. It is not surprising, therefore, that the South should feel the stimulus of the enormous influx of capital that annually results from the sale of the cotton crop. In the last two years cotton has brought $1,775,000,000 into the South. It is a pile of money. It has freed the Southern farmers from debt and immensely enhanced the value of their lands.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

—CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

When the Lord Will Provide.

"The Lord will provide" is not a dependence that the lazy and shiftless can rely on. There is an old maxim that goes with it, a maxim too often forgotten or ignored. The Lord will provide, but the Lord helps those who help themselves. Just remember that. The Lord will not provide for those who will make no provision for themselves; those who neglect their opportunities, waste their substance and pass their time in idleness and dissipation. Remember that. The law of self-help is the law of thrift, industry and sobriety. It is a part of the law of compensation. As the sacred book says, "Ye shall reap as ye sow," "to him that hath shall be given and from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." No man can sow idleness and reap plenty; none can waste his substance and still keep his store, nor can any claim in justice provision from the Lord when he has neglected to make it for himself. The providence of God may direct distribution, but it is the hand of man that tills the field, grinds the corn and bakes the bread. Every one that eats takes toll of some one's toil. If he neither sows, nor reaps, nor bakes, nor spins, he is eating his bread in the sweat of some other man's face; he is a drone, a parasite, a sponger on his kind. Why should the Lord provide for such? He does not. He never promised that He would, and it would be a sorry thing for the human race if He did. Even the bee, the ant and the squirrel are frugal, foresighted and industrious; they make provision for themselves and have no need to call on the Lord. If men would only follow their example few would have to ask the Lord to provide or appeal to their fellow men for help. If they strive honestly and earnestly and fail because of misfortune, sickness or the dishonesty of others, they will never lack friends or aid without help and friendly sympathy. In that sense, and that only, does the Lord provide.

According to Judge Gary the motive for the organization of the Steel Trust was philanthropy. J. Pierpont Morgan, so Gary said, organized the trust to protect certain industrial enterprises from ruin and to avert a panic. He now admits that the Morgan banking concern reaped a profit of $129,000,000 by the transaction. Surely this is a case of virtue getting a tremendous reward. Never before was philanthropy so well paid. Morgan's ability to transmute water into money gained for him this immense sum. Let us all go in for philanthropy—it pays better than anything else in these degenerate days.

La Follette's Weekly intimates that "the system" dictated the appointment of the committee selected to investigate Lorimer's election. The insinuation can neither be proved or disproved, and being only an insinuation, La Follette can be brought to account for making it. But La Follette tried to have Lorimer investigated by a committee every member of which was in favor of unseating him. He tried to pack the committee against Lorimer and because he was not allowed to do it intimates that "the system" packed the committee in his favor. As far as can be ascertained the committee is equally made up of foes and friends of Lorimer—four against and four in favor. This is not a packed committee nor one that is likely to suppress evidence or bring in a whitewashing report. The friends of Lorimer cannot control it or prevent the bringing out of all the incriminating testimony that can be reached. The eyes of the whole country will be upon the hearing, and in the end the Senate as a body will have to pass upon the case.

EGYPTIAN COTTON

That the requirements of the cotton goods industry necessitate the importation of approximately 60,000,000 pounds of Egyptian cotton, costing $18,000,000, is probably unknown to the majority of readers who read of the enormous crops of cotton produced in our southern states and learn that during the last seven months all records have been broken and practically $500,000,000 worth of that staple has been exported.

But it was the considerable value of this import that induced the United States department of agriculture several years ago to endeavor to develop Egyptian cotton culture in the United States in order to supply our own market with a home-grown product.

Although experiments were made at different points from South Carolina to Texas, as well as in western Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and southern California, it was only in the Colorado river region that climatic and other conditions similar to those in the Nile valley and suited to the long staple Egyptian cotton were found. There 600,000 acres of excellent land are, or soon will be, under ditch in the Imperial, Yuma, Salt and Gila valleys, and one-fifth of this acreage could produce the amount of Egyptian cotton annually imported for the use of New England mills.

For several years studies and experiments with the various Egyptian varieties have been undertaken in southern Arizona, southeastern California and Egypt, and several bulletins have been issued giving detailed reports of the progress made and success achieved.

Just now the department has issued another pamphlet (Bulletin 210, Bureau of Plant Industry), reporting the results of a visit to the cotton growing districts of Egypt in June and July, 1910, of the bloomist of the department, in which is shown that the mixture of Hindu cotton is proving to be a serious burden upon the Egyptian cotton industry. It is the name applied in Egypt to an undesirable type of cotton with a short, weak fiber that injures the high-grade Egyptian varieties by infesting them with hybrids. The introduction of the Egyptian cotton into the United States brings also the problem of the Hindu cotton and the practicability of establishing a commercial culture of the Egyptian cotton in the United States depends largely upon the elimination of Hindu contamination and other forms of diversity, so that the fiber may be produced in a satisfactory condition of uniformity.

LUXURY AT SEA.

With all the progress in shipbuilding and increase in the luxury of equipment, it is only the newest of the ocean liners which have overtaken some of the features of the ships of two thousand years ago. The Roman vessels in use for regular passenger service in the Mediterranean, as well as the private yachts, were marvels of beauty. The finest of these boats were furnished with halls decorated with marble pillars and rows of statues. Elaborate baths were installed, the water being held in basins of silver and bronze. Several of the yachts owned by the emperors carried hanging gardens, a wealth of foliage, and large fountains. When Rome declined these floating palaces disappeared, but they set a standard which is only now being surpassed. A reproduction of the Roman bath, carried out in marble and bronze, will be installed on the steamship Imperator, of the Hamburg-American line, the largest ship in the world now under construction, which surpasses anything attempted by the Roman shipbuilders in size or beauty of its decorations.

ANIMAL SUICIDE

A coroner's jury composed of the animal's keeper and two scientists from the Texas State University—their specialties are not given—has returned a verdict that Bob, the veteran performing seal, committed suicide by drowning at Galveston on Friday last. The keeper alone is responsible for the interesting statement that the animal had made a previous attempt, which he frustrated in time. Bob was old, and suffered from toothache and disabilities incurred in the course of his twenty years' service as a public entertainer. The animal may have been dying, and instinctively have sought relief in its native element, where its strength failed it.

The suicide of animals was a favorite tradition among their lovers and observers long before the advent of the present school of nature writers. There are old tales in many tongues of horses that have committed felo de se for humanly understandable reasons; of lions that have done away with themselves, of pigeons that, crossed in love or bereft of their mates, have sought oblivion in the cooling waters.

It is a curious, because a humanly appealing, subject, which, however, should be left to the students of animal psychology, and not to laymen; least of all where their affections are involved. Are animals conscious of the existence of death? That is the fundamental question. Danger they recognize, and will even court it in order to save their young, as may be seen in the noisy utterances of pretension of flight by the partridge when its nest is too closely approached. But beyond this the evidence does not go, not even in the case of the dog in its relation to its master. It has died of grief over its loss and starved to death because of it; but there is little or no reason to believe that the starvation was not an uncontrollable physical result of the grief instead of an act of conscious deliberation.—New York Tribune.

WORK OF MOSES

Agencies apparently so trivial as to be almost beneath notice have changed, and are now changing, the face of the earth. For instance, so comparatively insignificant a form of vegetation as moss may not only affect the aspect of a landscape, but may powerfully assist in giving a new character to a continent.

One of the surprising results of scientific investigation in Greenland is the indication of this wonderful work mosses are performing there. Where glaciers have ceased to advance or have become "dead" various species of mosses have found a foothold on them and gradually overspread them with a mantle of green. The amount of vegetable matter slowly deposited by these Greenland mosses is so considerable that it has been suggested that this deposit will be of great importance in the future history of that strange land.

It is known that in a past geological age Greenland was not the dreary, ice-sheeted continent that it is today, but a beautiful land, almost tropical in appearance in some respects. And if in the future geological or astronomical causes should bring about a return to the former conditions when Greenland was really "green" the rich stores of vegetable matter now accumulating there through the growth of mosses amid the ice will give wealth to the soil of the regenerated continent.—Harper's Weekly.

LONDON AND NEW YORK

The census recently taken in England and Wales shows that the population of London is 7,252,953, an increase of 10.20 per cent in ten years. In the previous ten years ending in 1901 the percentage of increase was 12.17 per cent. A loss is shown of 1.97 per cent in the decade ending with 1910 as compared with the previous decade. An effort is made to account for this loss on the ground of the falling birth rate and the increase of emigration.

New York city is the only great center of population with which the growth of London can be satisfactorily compared. The population of New York is 4,766,835. This is 65.73 per cent of London's population. New York's rate of increase from 1900 to 1910 was 35.7 per cent, showing a gain of 1.6 per cent on the rate of increase from 1890 to 1900. Therefore, while London shows an increase of 35.7 per cent, and a gain of 1.6 per cent on the previous decade, against a loss of 1.97 per cent on a similar period on the part of London.

In actual figures, while New York in ten years added 1,229,835 to its population, London added about 750,000. If this relative growth were maintained by both cities, New York would pass London in about twenty-five years. However, the prophetic statisticians give to New York in 1930 a population of 9,500,000. This is due by taking into account the progressive rate of increase or gain in rate which each successive decade shows on its immediate predecessor. Computing on the same basis and making the loss in rate for each successive decade a factor, London will fall behind New York in population in about nineteen years, or say, in 1930.

There is statistical justification for this latter computation. The conditions of the two countries favor the theory of a progressive rate of increase in New York and a retrogressive rate in London. Emigration, in which must be included the lure of the colonies, is a large factor in the decreasing rate of London, while similar forces work for increase in New York. This city, which is yet in an undeveloped stage, as any one who has studied deeply the subway question will appreciate, profits more than any other American city from the contributions which immigration makes to population.—Brooklyn Eagle.

POLO AN ALIEN GAME

For obvious reasons, polo, although introduced much earlier into this country from abroad, has attracted far less popular interest than golf. Like cricket, another exotic game, for years it has had a firm hold in a number of localities throughout the United States, but necessarily the cost of keeping strings of ponies and providing good grounds makes it a rich man's sport. That is a drawback which its greatest advantages as a high test of skill are never likely to overcome, even among horse-loving people.

Yet merely as a spectacle, from which standpoint most persons past their youth regard outdoor sports, polo is one of the greatest of games. It is easy to follow and is exciting to watch. The international match on the Meadow Brook club grounds naturally excited unusual enthuslasm because the teams were made up of the crack players of the United States and England.

Nevertheless, the true measure of the affection in which any sport is held by the everyday public is the extent to which it has played the game. Americans cling to baseball as Englishmen do to cricket because it was their boyhood game. Polo may occupy one of the most honorable positions in the history of athletic sports, descending as it does from the Persians of the tenth century to the British merchants and army officers in India, and through them to England and the United States in the last forty years, but it remains an alien game whose claim is on the eye and not on the heart of the great American public.—New York World.

MAKING OF CLOTH

Every woven fabric is made by crossing, or interlacing two distinct series of threads together. When the yarn comes from the spinner it is mounted upon the loom in spools. So wonderfully automatic are these modern looms that when a hobbin is started it is forced out and a full spool is put in its place without stopping the loom. There are all classes of looms for all classes of material, from the thinnest fabrics to the thickest felts. To attempt to describe one of them or the principles on which they are constructed would involve the reader in a wilderness of technicalities. The power loom is one of the most remarkable and complex of mechanical products, the growth of many years of experience and ingenuity and the crystallization of the inventive genius of many minds.

The cloth in the shop window resembles the cloth as it comes from the loom so closely that there would seem to be no relationship between them. The first product of the loom is usually uncouth, harsh and anything but inviting in appearance. It has to pass through many processes before it is finished and made ready for the market. It is first mended so as to correct weaving faults as far as possible. Then it is scoured and thoroughly cleansed. Again it is looked over and mended before it passes to the fulling or milling machine, which, with soap and fullers' earth, produces the finish that is required. Then it is scoured again. Tentering is the next process. This sets the cloth at a satisfactory width and strengthens it for the operations that follow, the first of which is called raising. The millions of tiny hooks on the gilling machine raise up the fibers on the surface of the cloth and leave them in an upright position. The pile, or nap, is the result. This produces a remarkable change in the appearance and condition of the fabric. Shearing is the next thing. This cuts off all the raised fibers, leaving them of a uniform length. The required gloss and solidity are obtained by the pressing which follows.—Rupert Bowers in Harper's Weekly.

SCOTLAND'S CENSUS

The population of Scotland, according to the British census returns, is 4,759,445—an increase of 287,342 since 1901. The percentage of gain was 6.4—a lower ratio than that for any other decade since 1851-61. Yet the decline in the rate of increase was relatively small, the average decennial gain in the last half-century being only a little over 11 per cent. Unlike Ireland, Scotland has had a steady growth. One hundred years ago Ireland's population was just three times as large as Scotland's. In 1841 it was even more than three times as large, but Ireland's heavy losses by emigration after 1845, coupled with Scotland's normal gains, speedily reduced the disparity. In 1901, Scotland finally drew ahead, having 4,476,102 inhabitants to Ireland's 4,457,775. Now Scotland has 4,759,445 and Ireland 4,381,951.

The Scotch birth rate has been much higher than the Irish in recent years. The deaths in the two countries have been about the same—nearly 80,000 a year—but the births in Scotland have averaged about 131,500 against about 101,500 in Ireland. Immigration has also been unequal, Ireland losing every year on the average about 15,000 more inhabitants than Scotland has lost. The Irish outflow, however, has diminished, but it is doubtful whether Ireland will overtake her northern neighbor in population, in spite of the latter's vast area of waste land.

and uncultivated land. Industry is more varied in Caledonia than in Hibernia, and the former's population is more trained to thrift and has a greater capacity for making the most out of national resources. The uncultivated and non-productive element in the male population above ten years old in 1901 was about twice as great in Ireland as in Scotland, undoubtedly due to the furnishing of thousands of high class immigrants to Canada, Australia and the United States. But the ancient kingdom will also continue to push ahead, enlarging its population and increasing its influence as a component part of the United Kingdom. The race which inhabits it is sturdy and keen and can be counted upon to hold its own against competition either in the present or in the future.—New York Tribune.

OF MORE IMPORTANCE.

Betty may not be very worldly wise, but she is practical. She knows enough to take a common sense view of things sentimental as well as material. So when she listened to the proposal of the young man she is fond of she couldn't help saying what she did.

"If you reject me, Betty dear," he urged in a final appeal, "I shall never, never, never see you again. It will be the end. And if I accept you," she asked, "does the same thing hold good?"—Philadelphia Times.

Officer Sill is a dangerous man for criminals to tamper with. A couple of nights ago he arrested a couple of youths for malicious mischief and they went to Darkeytown at the foot of Willow street and got their gang together to "jump" the officer when he put in his appearance. Sill got wind of the affair and went after them. He found them assembled on a street corner and wading in knocked them right and left until he was master of the field.

Alameda has a ghost if the statements of two members of the police force can be taken. The place where he keeps his vigil is the shell mound on the property of the Sather estate, corner of Central avenue and Mound street and he appears only in the early hours before the cocks begin to crow. A few mornings ago Police Officer Kamp came breathlessly into the station where sat Officers Schumacher and Bray. Big drops of perspiration rolled down his cheeks as he exclaimed: "I've seen a ghost; is my hair white?" Then he took off his cap as he rolled on the floor.

200 TO SING AT CELEBRATION CORONATION FETE IS PLANNED

A. J. WILLSON of Oakland is president of the coronation celebration to be held at Shell Mound Park. The other portraits are of soloists who will take part in the musical program.

Maypole Dances to Be Feature of British Day

Arrangements for the coming celebration of the coronation of King George, which is to be held at Shellmound Park, are now completed and a great treat is promised the public.

The grand chorus of 200 voices, under the direction of John W. McKenzie, has arranged a program of the songs of England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales and the United States, and will be assisted by several soloists of prominence.

Lillian Beaumont Blanche, who will sing the "Invocation," is said to possess a dramatic soprano of great beauty. Ruth McKenzie, the contralto, and very talented daughter of the musical director, will sing the old songs of England and Scotland.

The many attractions in the arena will consist of a large number of athletic sports and races which will, no doubt, appeal strongly to the thousands who will attend.

MAYPOLE DANCES.

A special feature of the day will be the competitive Maypole dances between the Oakland and San Francisco lodges of the Daughters of St. George, and promises to be exciting.

Golden Gate Lodge of Oakland is being trained by Mrs. C. A. Rice, assisted by Mrs. Fanny Petty and Mrs. Eliza Lorenson. While Britannia and Empress Victoria lodges of San Francisco will be under the direction of Mrs. P. Crebo, with Mrs. G. Hutchinson and Mrs. M. Jewett as assistants.

There is a great rivalry between the two sets of dancers, as they have both reached a degree of proficiency, each feeling confident of winning the prize.

The various committees are using every effort in making this celebration one long to be remembered by those fortunate enough to attend.

THOSE WHO WILL DANCE.

Anderson, Phyllis E. Maclean, Catherine D.

WILL LOSE ITS TOWER

PARIS, June 17. — The church of St. Jean at Troyes has just lost its tower built in 1324. The fall of a building in course of demolition next door to the church brought about the downfall of the tower which, in its turn, demolished several houses. The church of St. Jean is one of the most historic in France. Among other associations, it was within its walls that in 1420 the famous Treaty of Troyes was signed by Henry V of England, the victor of Agincourt, and Charles VI of France. By the terms of the treaty Henry was to have the hand of Catherine, the French King's daughter, and succeed to the throne of France on the death of his father-in-law. The first part, the wedding of Catherine and Henry was carried out in the same church soon after the signing Stereoscopic views made from photographs of the scenes were shown in illustrations of the talk. These photographs were taken when Dr. Case and others were in the Lake Umbagog region, even in connection with the free schools which are held every Thursday evening at the Lake Umbagog Hotel. The lecture was an excursion from Walnut Creek in concord for the races at the latter place.

The lecture which Rev. L. L. Low, pastor of the Fourth Avenue Methodist church of Oakland delivered at the Lake Umbagog Hotel, was well attended and successful.

MAY PLACE BIT ON EXPRESS COMPANY PROFITS

National Association of Railway Commissioners Seeking an Investigation.

WOULD LIMIT RATES THAT CAN BE ASKED

Committee to Study Problem in All Its Phases and Report.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Another step toward regulating express companies and curbing the accumulation by them of enormous profits was taken today, when a committee representing the National Association of Railway Commissioners met here and decided to make a thorough investigation of the question. This body, which is composed of railway commissioners and members of public service commissions in every State in the Union, is expected to exert a powerful influence in shaping further legislation and formulating rules pertaining to express carriers relative to the maximum amounts they shall charge for service.

In order to expedite their plans, the committee directed Chairman C. E. Staples, a member of the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission, to appoint a sub-committee to study the problem and make a report to the general committee concerning further co-operation between the Interstate Commerce Commission and State commissions in controlling express companies.

It is said that the members of the committee concurred in the general opinion that the countrywide movement to force more reasonable express rates is gaining momentum and greater union of action among the States in their regulation may be expected within a short time.

MOTHER AND BABE HURT IN RUNAWAY

Hurled From Buggy as Frightened Horses Are in Mad Flight.

MODESTO, June 17.—Mrs. Walter Garrison, wife of one of the most prominent farmers in this section, narrowly escaped being killed this afternoon when the buggy, which she and her 5-year-old daughter occupied, was overturned by a runaway team of two horses in the center of the business district.

Mrs. Garrison and her daughter were thrown out of the rig, which was demolished. The runaway team was driven by Dr. C. S. Griswold and the horses took flight while they were being watered.

As a result of the runaway two other persons were started in wild flights and for some time the entire business section was the scene of screaming and terror-stricken men and women attempting to elude the frightened horses.

Mrs. Garrison is confined to her home, but physicians attending her say that her condition is serious only as a result of the nervous shock. The child was hurt about the head and mouth, but otherwise not seriously injured.

GRAVEL WASHER IS BEING INSTALLED

Bay City Developing Company Makes Improvements On Creek Dredger.

The Bay City Developing Company is having a mechanical gravel washer installed on one of its dredgers at the Pacific Shipyards and Ways, which will greatly facilitate the loading of barges on Napa Creek, where the dredger has been working for the past three years. The sand and gravel is obtained from the bed of the creek by means of a suction pump.

The three-masted schooner Queen, recently purchased by J. D. Hanlon, is at the above yards for final repairs before going into commission. The vessel has been laid up in the upper estuary for several years.

MORMON BAPTISM IS SHOWN AT SEA

Missionary Walks Into Ocean and Immerses Two Pretty Girls.

LONDON, June 17.—Thousands of holiday makers on Roker Beach, Sunderland, witnessed a Mormon baptism at sea today.

After addressing a great crowd the Mormon missionary, who wore neither coat nor vest, suddenly walked into the sea, leading by the hand two pretty young women attired in white summer costumes. When the water was on a level with their shoulders they slipped and the missionary made a number of gestures, put his arms around the waists of the damsels and immersed them. The dripping trio then marched back to the beach singing joyous hallelujahs.

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 18, 1911.

NO. 125

GREATER OAKLAND NOW A CITY OF BUSY HOURS

MUCH WORK FOR MANY HANDS

Carrying Out of Vast Projects Involves Outlay of Millions.

Builders of Today Vision the Municipality's Splendid Future.

PRONOUNCED as has been building activity in Oakland for a number of years past, at no previous time has it been pursued on so comprehensive a scale as at present. In all portions of the city work of that character is general and is supplemented by the grading of streets, extending of water and sewer mains and the laying of sidewalks. In addition, all of the railroads having their Western terminals here are extending branches well into the country sections contiguous to Oakland, and the Oakland Traction Company is preparing to greatly improve its already excellent street car service. In furtherance with such plan the Grove street line is to be double-tracked its entire length, as is likewise the San Pablo avenue line to the Contra Costa county line. Overshadowing all other building operations here, however, are those of the municipality itself. In the aggregate the cost entailed in carrying the plans to completion is better than $6,000,000, and as much of that very considerable sum will be expended among home manufacturers and artisans, it is money destined to become a permanent asset of local financial circles.

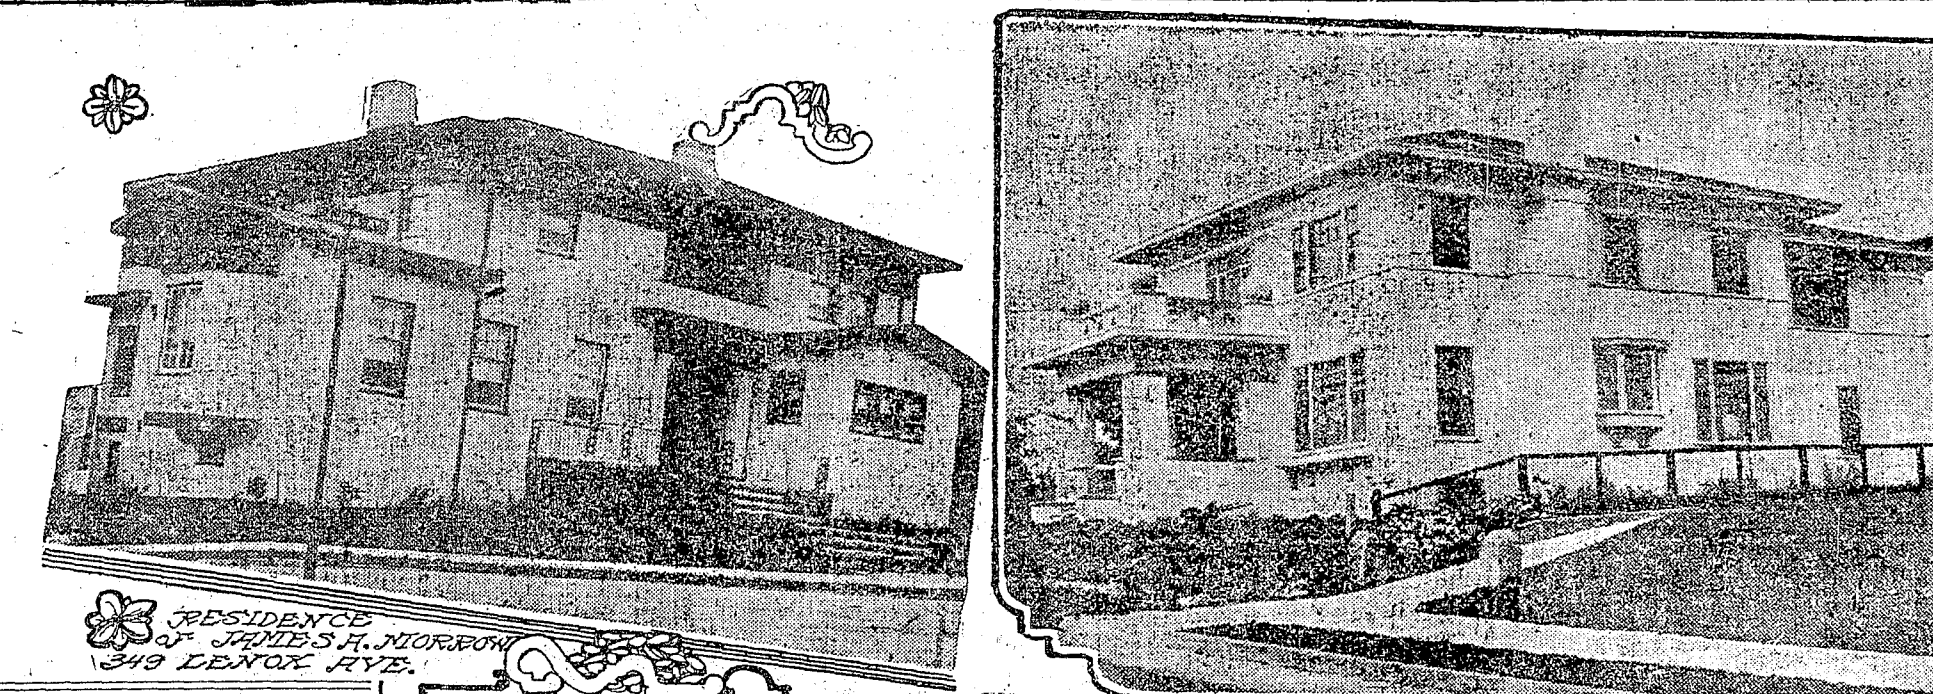

Eighteen of the twenty-seven contracts for the construction of Greater Oakland's $1,200,000 municipal building have been awarded by the Board of Public Works, the total cost entailed in their fulfillment being $1,106,499. These contracts cover the most essential portions of the job and were made upon the recommendation of the local representative of the New York firm of architects who designed the building and will have general supervision of its erection. J. J. Dwyer, superintendent of construction, reports that the structural steel is now being manufactured in the East and that a portion of it will be on the way here within a short time. He expects to have the entire framework of the building in place by the time the steel beams may be put in position at once.

MANY CALIFORNIA CONTRACTS.

In connection with the contracts awarded it is well to call attention to the number which have been awarded to Oakland, San Francisco and other California concerns. This action on the part of the Board of Public Works set at rest the irresponsible rumors to the effect that little of the money entailed in the erection of the city hall would be expended by Californians as all of the contracts were to be filled in the East. As a matter of fact, only such contracts went to easterners as could not be handled by California manufacturers. A good deal has been said about the steel and the stone used in the structure having been ordered in the East, but as a matter of fact that section of the country was the only place where the proper materials referred to could be obtained. It was found impossible to secure others just as good here, or anywhere nearly as good, hence the men making charge of the job sought the stone and the steel elsewhere. The fact comes somewhat as a shock to local pride, but is none the less a fact. Following is a list of the successful bidders and the amounts of their contracts:

MASONRY WILL SOON START WORK.

Within a few days a large force of masons will begin the work of setting up the foundation of the 17-story city hall and the concrete piers upon which the steel frame is to rest. Just Anderson, who had the excavating contract, under a bid of $6330, has completed his portion of the work in time for the next contractor to complete his portion of the job well within the allotted time mentioned in the specifications. It is, however, probable that Anderson will do the excavating for piers and walls under a sub-contract from the Gladding-McBean Company, the successful bidders on the masonry contract. The latter was let on a bid of $123,360.

Within a few months work will start on the $500,000 auditorium the city is to build. The bond issue providing therefore will soon be sold and immediately thereafter bids for the job will be advertised for. It is probable the building, which will be one of the largest in the United States devoted to convention purposes, will occupy a site near the center of the park which is being established by the municipality adjoining the Twelfth street causeway on the south. The structure is to be of classic design and will be reinforced with steel throughout. Naturally it will be fireproof.

S. P. ELECTRIC SYSTEM.

The electric system of the new Southern Pacific local on Webster street will be put in operation on June 22. The track laying is practically complete, the poles have all been set, the guy wires strung and little remains to be done save to finish the concrete roadbed and string the trolley wires.

Track laying on the Seventh street line is progressing rapidly and Roadmaster Eugene Corrigan is forcing matters as rapidly as possible without delaying traffic. There are two trains each way every twenty minutes and these trains must not be delayed for connections must be made with each boat. This is not an easy job and Corrigan has been kept busy watching his men and the trains, and so far has secured the compliments of the operating department.

SYSTEM AT ALAMEDA.

The Alameda system is already in operation electrically. By the time the Webster street line is ready for operation a night service will have been installed on the Alameda lines. Ten minutes in running time can be saved between High street and the Alameda depot with the electric trains.

The Berkeley system is practically ready for operation, but will not be started with electricity until after the Alameda lines are all in complete operation.

After that will come the Seventh street lines. The track men and pole setters are now working at Broadway, but no date has been set for the operation of that section.

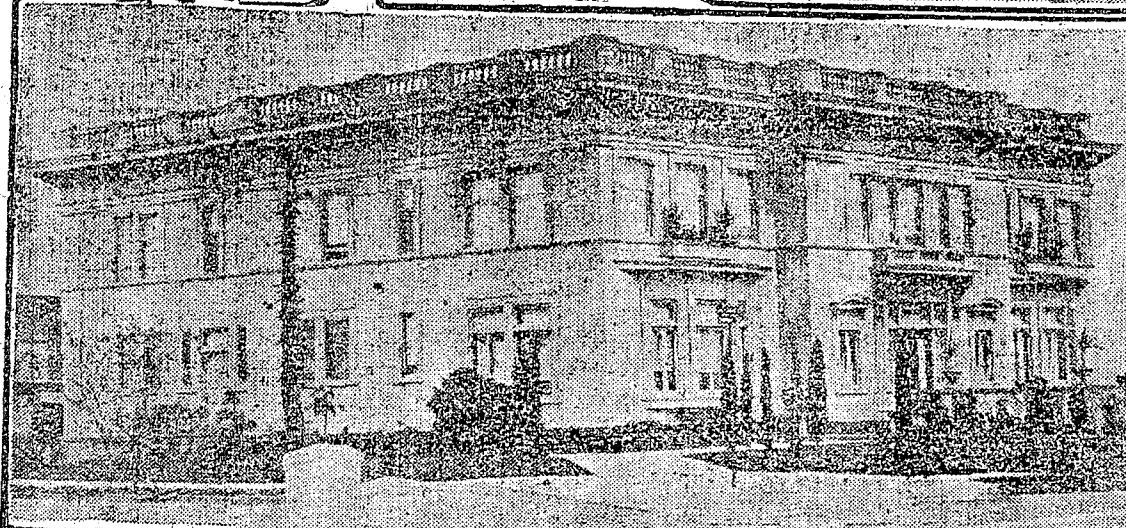

Work is now being done on the extensions to Melrose, Broadway, several extensions in Berkeley and the line out Franklin street which will make the loop around to West Oakland. The first of the year will see all electric lines on this side of the bay in operation. Formerly Assistant Division Superintendent at the pier, will have in control the operation and management on this side of the bay of the local electric lines with Paul Shoup as the general manager in San Francisco.

PLANS TO REMODEL BLOCK.

Plans for remodeling the new home of the Chamber of Commerce at the corner of Thirteenth and Harrison streets are now well advanced. As outlined, it is the intention to take possession of the structure on July 1. The sum of $2000 has been set aside for refitting and remodeling the interior. This is, of course, but a makeshift, as it is the intention of the Chamber to top the site with a model and commodious building of its own in the not distant future. The cost of the proposed structure will be about $30,000.

In that connection it is well to state that the Oakland Real Estate Association believes that the Chamber of Commerce is worthy of more active support from the business interests of Oakland, and has taken action to enroll the same. At a meeting of the body the following resolution offered by E. B. Bull, manager of the Frank K. Mott Company, was unanimously endorsed:

"Whereas the Oakland Chamber of Commerce has been accomplishing a splendid work in promoting the progress and prosperity of the city of Oakland, and in advertising the ad-

WILL AID PROJECT.

"Whereas it is learned that the Chamber of Commerce through memberships and special fund subscriptions are inadequate to properly continue this work, and

"Whereas, the Oakland Chamber of Commerce has announced its intention of conducting a campaign, whereby it shall be placed in a position of being able to rely without question upon such sums as shall be necessary to properly continue the work it has so magnificently begun, now, therefore, be it resolved "That the Oakland Real Estate Association does hereby pledge itself and the services of its members to the Oakland Chamber of Commerce for the work which must accompany the enlargement of its treasury, and be it further resolved

"That this association does earnestly call upon the business interests of the city of Oakland and the county of Alameda to in every manner possible property support the Oakland Chamber of Commerce, and that it be considered the duty of every loyal resident of Oakland to assist in continuing to make the Oakland Chamber of Commerce the potent factor in the commercial advancement of the community."

MANY NEW DRIVES ARE BEING BUILT

Oakland Boulevards Lead to Scenes of Picturesque Rural Beauty.

The rapid advancement of Oakland as a city of homes and the development of new residence tracts, have not only through the extension of the service of the Oakland Traction Company lines opened up new recreation grounds in the country surrounding, but have resulted in the building of new boulevards.

Two properties placed upon the market within the past year by the Wickham Havens Company are conspicuous examples of this. The marketing of the East Piedmont Heights residence tract carried with it not only the extension of the Grand Avenue cars through the property, but the building of the Mandana boulevard at considerable expense. The portion already completed has been much enjoyed by auto parties and others.

Through Fourth Avenue Heights the Wickham Havens Company has built a mile of bituminized boulevard which connects with Thirteenth avenue and Fourth avenue, the latter being the finest bituminized drive and residence tract in Oakland. This system of roads, together with the county roads, offers beautiful drives along the wild beauties of Diamond Canyon, and Trestle Glen, a route to the beautiful hill section of Central Piedmont, trips to Contra Costa county, Redwood Peak, down Diamond Canyon and along the Foothill boulevard.

REAL ESTATE IN ALAMEDA ACTIVE

Building Operations Are On the Increase and General Business Good.

ALAMEDA, June 17. — The Mastick Park tract in the west end is one of the busiest building tracts in the city. Eleven houses are under course of construction on the property and several more will be erected. The houses are typical California bungalows. The park was purchased from the Mastick estate.

Siller & Roberts report a brisk week with sales and rentals. Roberts said today:

"The general tone of the realty market is more lively and none of the real estate brokers have anything to complain about. We have been making fairly heavy sales this week and expect to put through other sales within the next week. Rental is particularly good, and has been since the summer began."

"We have many new residents coming into Alameda who have rented houses for a few months preparatory to building. Lewis & Shaw report an increase in business which the firm attributes in part to the operation of the new electric railroad of the Southern Pacific company. The following building permits have been issued by Building Inspector John Davies:

Owner, W. J. Woods; builder, J. H. Pores; addition to 1016 Grand street; cost, $400.

BRISK DEMAND IN BERKELEY MARKET

New Ferry Lines and Extension of Car Service Benefit Real Estate.

BERKELEY, June 17. — Construction of new ferry lines of railroad and extension of street car lines are having their effect upon the real estate market in Berkeley.

This city occupies the unique position of being the center of education and culture in California and of having more transportation facilities in proportion to its population than any city in the United States.

When the new roads are in operation this fall the Southern Pacific will have five parallel lines—Ellsworth, Shattuck, California, Ninth Street and the main line; the Key Route will have three—Claremont, Shattuck and Sacramento Street; the Santa Fe, one line. The Traction Company has twelve lines—College Avenue, Telegraph Avenue, Shattuck Avenue, Grove Street and San Pablo Avenue, running north and south, and Alcatraz Avenue, Dwight Way, Russell Street, University Avenue, Rose Street, Euclid Avenue and Northbrae lines running east and west.

As transportation makes suburban values it surely seems that Berkeley has a particularly brilliant outlook for the future.

R. C. Newell, of Newell-Hendricks, Inc., reports that the great activity of the various railroad and street car extensions to Thousand Oaks is continuing to have vital influence on sales in that attractive section. The Southern Pacific transformer and station at Thousand Oaks (a $25,000 concrete building) is nearing completion, and the entire double-loop track system has been completed with the exception of stretching the transmission cables and trolley wires.

The Traction Company is extending and double-tracking its Northbrae line out Grove street and Arlington avenue to the large gardens owned by J. H. Spring in Arlington Heights, and the Key Route is erecting trolley poles on its Sacramento street extension.

Such extensive traction developments have never been under way at one time in the history of Berkeley. Building permits have been issued as follows:

One and one-half story, 2-room frame addition, Josephine street near Cedar, for Sydney A. Tibbets; $600.

One-story 4-room frame cottage, Francisco street near Chestnut, for E. M. Loomer; cost, $1500.

Two-story, 7-room dwelling, Mariposa street near Amador, for Oliver Poket; $2500.

Garage, Webster street near College avenue, for G. G. Towel; $250.

One-story music room, Cloyne Court, Ridge Road near LeRoy, for J. M. Pierce; $975.

Tank frame, Mabel and Irving streets for F. Schleuter; $240.

Two-story, 6-room dwelling, Mosswood street near College avenue, for J. Q. Barlow; $4745.

Two-story, 6-room dwelling, Casswood Road, adjoining university land, for J. T. Allen; $4475.

One-story, 5-room dwelling, Seventh street and Alston way, for L. S. Lewis; $1500.

Two-story, 9-room dwelling, Ashby avenue and Elmwood court, for J. N. Rogers; $2300.

Two-story, 7-room frame dwelling, Burnett street near San Pablo avenue, for R. Hughes; $2000.

S. P. WORK ADVANCES VALUES

George Austin Predicts 100 Per Cent Increase There Within Four Months.

The transformation of Seventh street through the improvements of the Southern Pacific in accordance with the terms of the franchise offers an immediate factor in Oakland realty development, which is being closely followed by the brokers, but is not appreciated fully by the general public. In this connection George W. Austin says:

"Seventh street will soon be one of the best paved, longest and best lighted streets in the city, but many do not seem to have awakened to what is going on there. The Southern Pacific will spend $250,000 for paving alone inside of five months, while the electrification of the system means everything to property values. I believe the realty market at the present time is a city of hopes and values. Along Seventh street will return 100 per cent in four months' time."

Activity in the exclusive residence district of Adams Point is a feature of the realty market at the present time. George W. Austin closed two good deals for residences there with several being negotiated. He says it is an indication of the growth of Oakland as a city of homes and that the worth of the park improvements being made by the city along Lake Merritt.

Through Phil H. Rosenheim of his office, Austin sold to E. C. Hartman to I. A. Beretta, the option on a residence at 235 Van Buren avenue for $16,000. Another $16,000 sale in the same district is being consummated. For P. H. Graham to E. C. Hartman, the home at 760 Rand avenue was sold for $5500.

LOCAL FIRMS DO A GOOD BUSINESS

Taylor Bros. & Co. report an active business for the past week, having closed a number of sales in the city of Oakland. The sales in country property have been beyond all expectation. The Glendale Colony Tract at Oakdale has nearly all been sold during the past month. The Elmar Colony is a tract of land suitable for fruit and shade, and subdivided into ten-acre tracts, and have been sold at an average of $80 to $100 per acre.

Some of the recent sales in Oakland are as follows:

REFUSED TO BURY WEALTHY UNCLE

SAN BERNARDINO, June 18.—Alex. R. Unruh, of Pomona, Mont., has wired Undertaker Mark B. Shaw, curdy refusal to contribute to the burial of his uncle, R. E. McDonald, a wealthy miner, who died here Sunday, after a lingering illness, at the age of 84 years. The nephew not knowing that the aged man has left an estate valued at $100,000.

The refusal was based upon the statement of the old man owed the nephew $2000, which the nephew had sunk in the mining ventures of the deceased. From letters found among the dead man's effects, it is apparent that a number of relatives contributed money to aid in the development of his mining ventures, and had finally become dissatisfied and suspicious of the wisdom of their investments. Mining partner, arrived from the desert and stated that the old man's interests in certain paying mining properties are valued at $100,000.

R. C. Hillen has already sold four cottages in the east end on which he has not yet started building operations. The cottages have been sold at a cost of $2500. Hillen is erecting many attractive cottages in the east end and expects to sell them all rapidly.

Business and Apartment House Leasing Is Very Good. Plenty of Money to Loan On Property at Seven Per Cent.

S. H. Masters, manager of the sales department of Layman's Real Estate Company, reports an average market.

Referring to this he said tersely, the past two weeks may be summed up as follows:

"Offers numerous with owners stiff on prices; plenty of private money to loan at 7 per cent; business and apartment house leasing good; house renting falling off on account of exodus during vacation months; country land in good demand; out-of-town inquiries and sales equal to local demands, with exchanges leading the market."

"While it is true that there are many circumstances that tend to cause sellers to think well of their Oakland property, it would be well to remember that the buyer must see a profit or at least good value in his purchase or he will seek other investments. This has been demonstrated in a dozen instances in our office dur-

Rich Senorita Railroaded Into Madhouse That Fortune May Be Others.

BARCELONA, June 17. — Senorita Matilde Andrey has been released from an asylum after thirty years confinement on a trumped up charge of lunacy to enable the trustees of her enormous fortune to manage it to suit themselves.

Senorita Matilde refused to marry a person of their selection and has spent all this time in a mad house rather than yield to their wishes. She was accidentally discovered by a cousin who has obtained her release.

The case is attracting great interest throughout Spain owing to the high social position of all parties involved. Her father was a colonel in the Spanish army in the Philippines, where he accumulated a fortune after the customary manner of Spanish colonial grandees.

WHISKERS BARRED ON DAIRY FARMS

ow Kentucky's Fight On Germs.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 17.—Managers of dairies in and near Spokane will issue a joint order on June 21, compelling milkers and other male workers in their establishments to shave every other day.

Thomas S. Griffith, president of a large dairy farm, said he believes the plan originated by J. B. Haggis, a millionaire dairyman of Kentucky, will be adopted in all parts of the country.

The local dairymen already have ruled against tobacco chewing and have installed wash basins and laundries in connection with the milking stables. The milkers wear white suits, which are changed every day.

Some of the dairymen say that while a ban on whiskers is without question one of sanitary importance, such an order might make it difficult to obtain sufficient help, even at the present wage scale, which ranges from $35 to $45 a week. In any event, it is announced, facial adornments in the way of whiskers must go.

Awnings and

Sleeping Porches

A modern home is not complete unless supplied with canvas awnings for the windows and porches. They more than save their cost the first three months they are in use. In fact, the cost of an awning does not exceed one-sixteenth part of a cent per day and is therefore within the reach of everyone. Shades are all right, but the sun hits the glass just the same and heats up the room inside. Awnings keep the sun away from the glass and the result is a cool and comfortable home. If you have a porch or intend to build one you ought to equip it with awnings or curtains as you really cannot sit outside on a windy day without them. Let us fix up a cozy corner for you on your porch and you will be surprised how much better you will feel and how much more you will live out of doors.

Apricot Trees Nine Years of Age on a Portion of Stonehurst

This picture was taken on May 25, showing the apricot division of Stonehurst. Lots in this tract can be bought from $350 to $400. Terms are 10 per cent cash, balance $5.00 per month.

Notice the large trees and the heavy foliage. This orchard is about 9 years old. The fruit on these trees will average about 250 pounds to a tree. Considering the value of apricots this year one can easily figure on 20 per cent on his investment.

There are macadamized streets, sewers, water, gas and electricity installed, free of charge to the purchaser. Same is all complete, thereby one does not have to wait for building. He can immediately connect with the sewers, water and gas.

Any one desirous of inspecting this property can call at the office of the Mutual Realty Company, 475 11th st., Oakland, who will be glad to take you out in their automobile.

DON'T SACRIFICE SAFETY FOR SPEED---GET BOTH

Those two things are seldom combined. "Haste makes waste," as the old saying goes. Hurry a man, and you worry him. And a hurried and worried man is a poor one to rely on for accurate, complete, trustworthy work.

Yet there are times when you need an abstract or title quick. Come to us for it. You'll get it "on time" and infallibly accurate. The reason is simple—we have a set of complete, systematized, accurate records that make quick and correct work easy for us. Without such records, speed and safety would be out of the question for anybody. For your own satisfaction, come in and learn the details.

Is Your Home Comfortably Heated?

My desire is to elevate the standard of warm air furnace installations, and to educate the public to a knowledge of the necessity of pure air in their homes, which can be secured at a reasonable cost only through the medium of a properly installed warm air heating plant. I firmly believe in a high-grade warm air furnace, properly installed, and employ none but first-class mechanics to do this work.

Great Ball Playing by Oakland and Los Angeles Brings Joy to Faithful Fans

Locals Hammer Criger and Score 8 Runs; Angels Tear After Christian and Mark 6

By BERT LOWRY.

AKLAND and Los Angeles played one rattling good game of ball yesterday afternoon, and when the seance was over the fellows with the big Oaks on their shirt bosoms were on the long end of an 8 to 6 score.

Swats there were aplenty, the Oaks gathering twelve of 'em, while Dillon's crew managed to break into the hit column eleven times. Some of them were long and some of them were short, but every one of them had a resounding swish behind it and the big crowd was happy.

It was Tyler Christian, the silent iceberg from the Long Star State, that did the ball shooting for the locals, while the Angels did the shooting for the fellows who come from Lemonville, a little village down the coast 480 miles.

Both these great masters of the hurling line started like a world beater and for five innings hits and runs were as few as teeth in the sea.

Then somebody methinks rung in a cork center ball (we have to blame the swatting on something) and suddenly the players began to swat and bang the ball to the far corners of the lot, over the fence and up again the fence.

ANGELS MAKE THE FIRST RUN.

For some reason or other the most of the fans were for the Lemonville cherubs and everything they did brought forth a cheer and a burst of feminine delight.

This they showed in the sixth inning to a marked degree. Criger had gone out on a clever pickup and toss by Wares, Howard, some ball player by the way, poled a single to right field and went over to second when Bernard duplicated the shot. Howard ran too far for second and Tyler winged the ball to Cutshaw to nip the best footed Angel. Howard kept right on third and when Cutty whanged the ball into the Angels' bonch the Angels speed boy went to the plate.

Cutty was mighty sorry for this boot and said, "Nevey mind, Tyler, old boy. I'll make up for that boot and he did. And this is how the second sucker made all the rooters for Oakland sit up, also others, and cheer."

OAKS SHOW SOME REAL HITTING STRENGTH.

Pyl went to the fore in the last of the sixth and after a heated argument with the umpire as to the way to call when they were over or not over, Monte sat down, for by pointing at the pitcher hit to Metzger and was declared safe at first on the boot. Hoffman stepped in front of a bean bat so that the pitcher aims it at your head, and was safe at first.

Cutshaw, bearing in mind that boot of his, poled a long double to the club house and two runners were over. Zacher, the home run pitcher, poled a single past Akin at the mile a minute clip that scored Cutshaw and on Wares' single and Metzger's single after Wolverton had filed out, the buses became jammed, but could not find the plate and four bad ones put Tyler at first and forced Zacher to the rubber, that made four tallies for the round. Pretty good, was it not?

CUTSHAW IS AGAIN SORRY FOR THAT BOOT.

Monte Pyl opened the seventh inning as he did the sixth, only this time he fouled out. Coy played in luck and was safe on the boot. Howard, the home run pitcher, poled a single past Akin at the mile a minute clip that scored Cutshaw and on Wares' single and Metzger's single after Wolverton had filed out, the buses became jammed, but could not find the plate and four bad ones put Tyler at first and forced Zacher to the rubber, that made four tallies for the round. Pretty good, was it not?

ANGELS TAKE LIBERTIES WITH TYLER'S SHOOT.

Up to the eighth inning Tyler was in no trouble but in this round he got himself badly shattered, but he stayed by the gun and waded through it storm and mercy it was fearful while it lasted.

Smith, opening the round, poled a double to right and Howard and Bernard then poled the ball up against the fence for long stunts and wondrous fielding kept them from being two-baggers. Daley flew out to Cutshaw and Moore struck out. This gave us reason to hope but singles by Aldin and Metzger made us sad again.

When Dillon forced the third sucker at second we all gave a cheer, that is us fellows who were for the Oaks did.

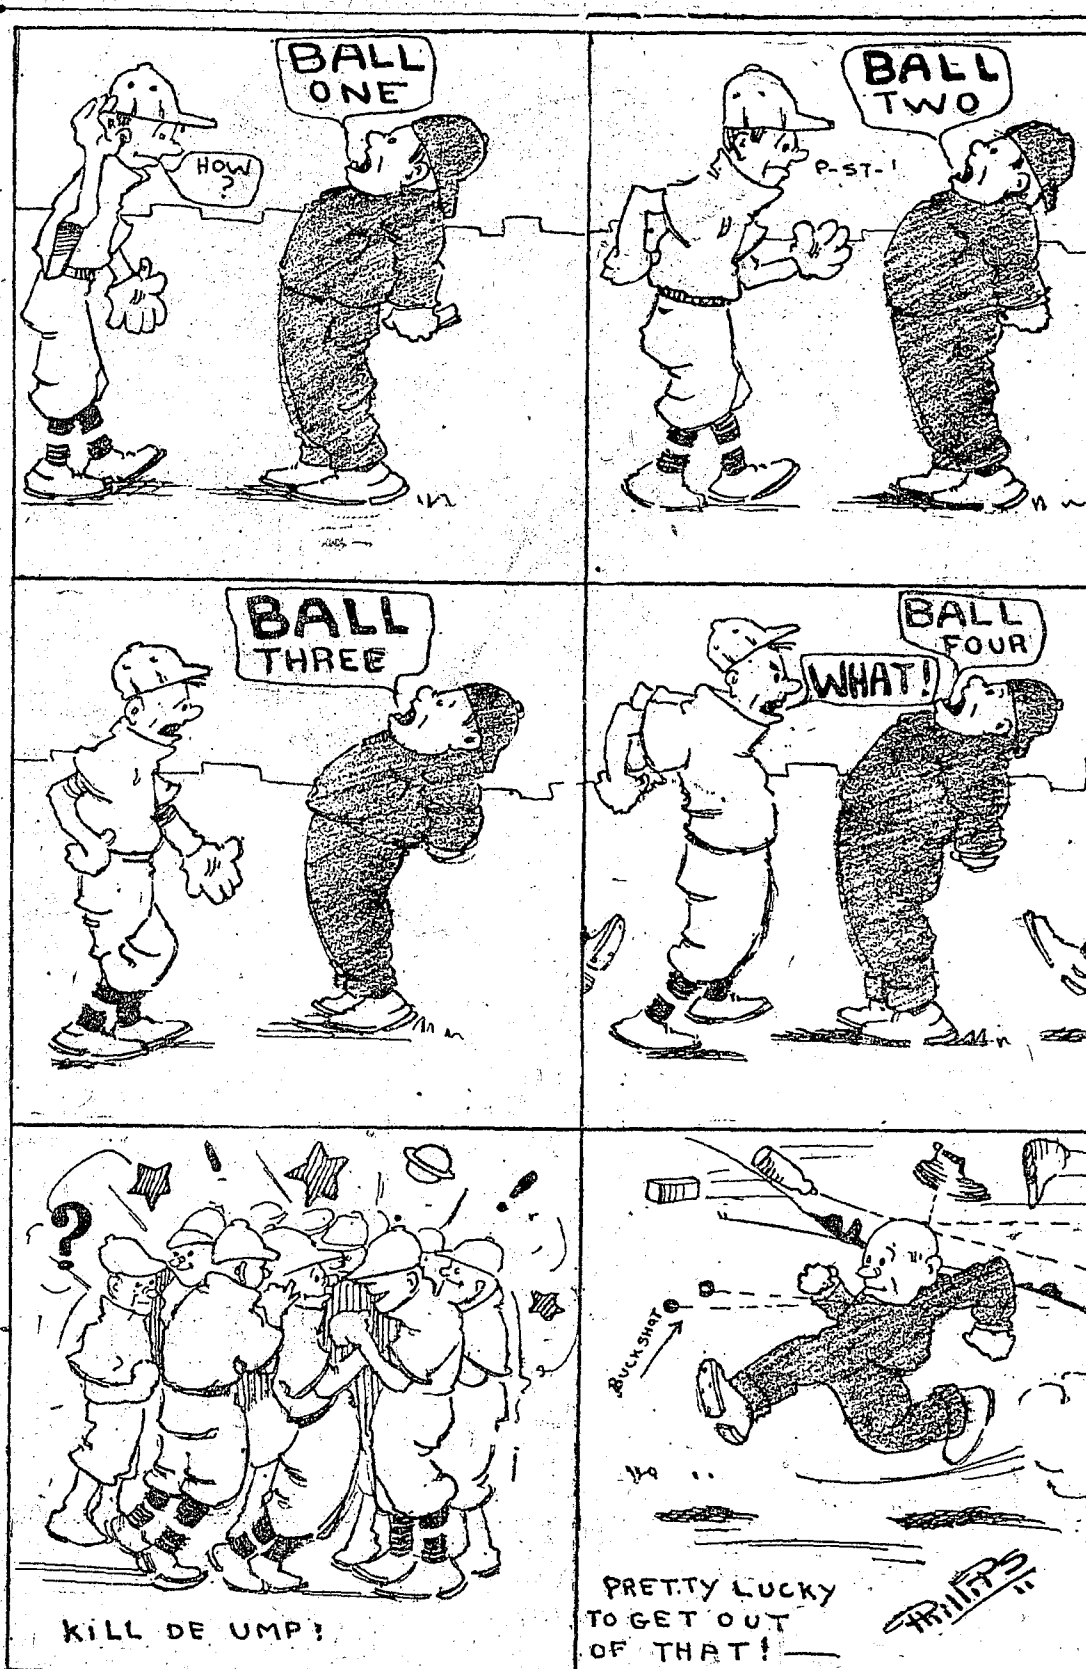

In the ninth frame with Smith and Wheeler out of the way Howard poled the pellet far out of the lot, but it was harmless except that it earned lots of applause and a package of smokes. It wasn't the end of the trouble by far when we think of it again. Bernard was safe on Tyler's boot and Daley was up.

ZACHER MAKES A WONDERFUL CATCH.

Whang went the bat of "Beef Stew Pete" up against the fence and a world centered in went for what looked like a good two-bagger and maybe a three base swat.

Out in center was a young man named Zacher and this young man Zacher isn't afraid of fences, brick walls or anything else. If he was, he never would have gotten away Bernard would have scored.

Portland continues to romp along in the lead in the race for the pennant and today the victory of the Beavers was a road for a stay of three, have made Happy Hogan's gang look like a bunch of crass leaguers here and simple.

Even if one wanted to consider the Vernons a clever ball team and wanted to say the victory of the Beavers was a road for a stay of three, have made Happy Hogan's gang look like a bunch of crass leaguers here and simple.

Akin and Metzger are crimpies, both being under wraps with badly bruised fingers. Metzger's in the worst as the nail is torn loose from the first finger of his throwing hand.

If today's game at Stockton between the Seals and Senators is a success Cal. will advocate Thursday's base ball day games at the Slough City next season just as is played at Freeman Park now.

Baltimore wants to get rid of big Heine Heine and offer him to any coast League team for $3000. If the Seals have gone stale he would be a card with any of the teams, especially San Francisco, which is weak in right field.

An eastern exchange says of a hit Cravath's home run at Toledo on May 22 was the longest hit ever made there. It cleared the left field fence at a point 385 feet from the home plate.

Outfielder Zacher was the best ever brought to California and his addition to the strength of the Oaks has helped them wonderfully. Not alone is he a remarkable hitter, but he ranks with the best of them as a fielder.

In going up against the fence in yesterday's game and grabbing Daley's hit he showed that he didn't care for obstructions. He is in the game to give his best service to the club and this he always does.

This morning the Oaks and Angels will meet in the sixth game of the series at Freeman's Park commencing at 10:10. In the afternoon they move over to San Francisco for the final game. The new infielder, Weaver, is expected to be in and allow him special privileges over the other players. When he was told to report for practice it was his place to be suspended, just as Manager Wolverton would have suspended any other player who acted like Maggart.

Again, admitting that Maggart is a "star ball" player, there are other ball players who are better than he. He proves that there never was a ball player that lived but some one could take his place.

A ball player is paid to deliver his best services to the club. He is to stand with his team through thick and thin and when Manager Wolverton decided that morning that practice was conducive for the Oaks, the Oakland team Maggart should have reported and practiced like the rest of the men. This he failed to do and for that he was suspended.

MARMON TRAVELS AT RECORD SPEED

500-Mile Race Winner Annexes
200-to-500-Mile Motor Records.

Ray Harroun, driver of the victorious Marmon car in the International Sweepstakes Race at Indianapolis, May 30, traveled 500 miles at the fastest rate for the distance that man has ever known. The average of 74.6 miles per hour is a world's speed record for the distance, the time being 6 hours, 42 minutes and 8 seconds.

Traveling at the same rate the yellow Marmon car could cover the entire distance from New York to Chicago by daylight in practically twelve hours. Could Harroun maintain the same speed over the 3250 miles from New York to San Francisco, he could make the coast to coast trip in less than forty-four hours—less than three days. The fastest mail trains take 105 hours for the distance.

The Marmon car already holds the 200-mile American speed record and the big race added the 300-mile record in four hours, one minute and twenty-five seconds.

In addition the race established new world's records for 400 miles in five hours, twenty-three minutes and fifteen seconds and the 500-mile record gives the Marmon the American speed records for 200 and 500 miles and the world's records for 400 and 500 miles.

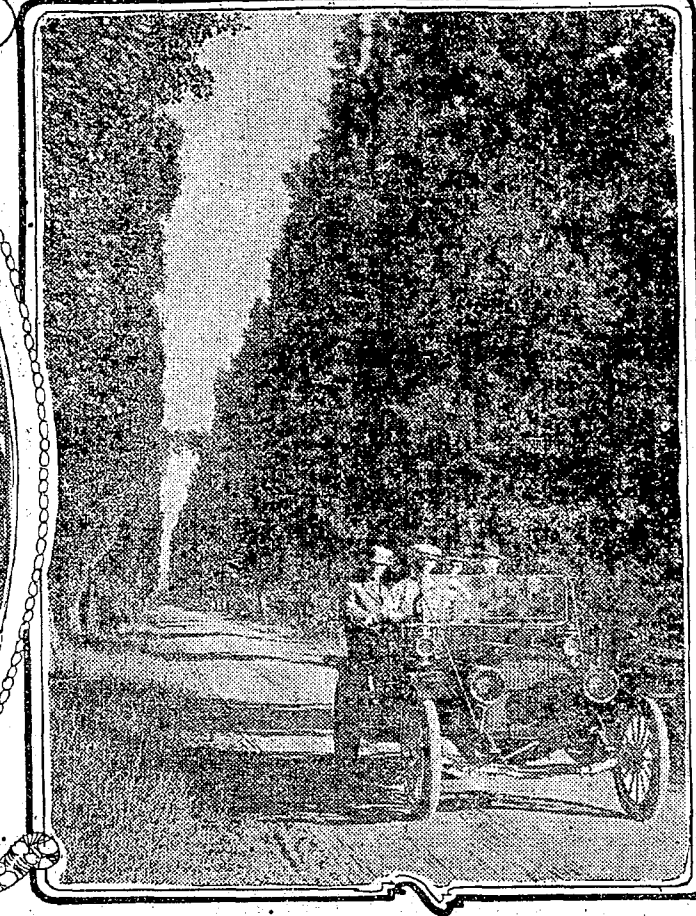

Considering the fact that the entire 500 miles were made at a faster average than the greater part of the speed evolutions for 100 miles on America's speedways during the year of 1910, it is most probable that these marks will stand for some time to come.

MORRISON BACK FROM COLE PLANT

Finds Activity Everywhere and Good Prospects for the Coming Year.

A. E. Morrison, salesmanager of the Pacific Motor Car Company, has just returned from an extended trip to Detroit and Indianapolis, on which he visited all the automobile factories in those cities. He found great activity everywhere and prophecies of good business for the coming year. Unusual interest is being evidenced in the Pacific Coast market and a large quota of the machines manufactured next season will be sent here for distribution. A good share of Morrison's time was spent at the Cole plant in Indianapolis and here he found preliminary plans progressing for a new factory building of most modern type. The present plant has been too small to meet demands this season upon its output and as the call for Cole cars is on a decided increase, the new building has become necessary.

Morrison also spent considerable time studying recent developments in the Eastern motor truck trade and found that the demand for commercial vehicles is far exceeding the supply. It is getting to a point where motor conveyances are doing all the extensive transfer work in both Detroit and Indianapolis. Morrison, together with a number of other San Franciscans, witnessed the big 500-mile speedway race at Indianapolis.

TRENCH DIGGER EXPEDITES WORK

A huge trench digger, with steam as a motive power, is now at work on the Fremont tract, the Realty Syndicate's subdivision in Fruitvale, and is doing the work of 100 men in excavating for the sewer and water pipes. The principle of the dredger has been applied to the machine which operated on the plan of a traction engine, cutting out the trench as it moves along the street.

Through the use of this machine the contractors who have the tract improvements in hand will complete the work well within the contract time of 150 days. Then laying of the macadam will be commenced at an early date and the cement sidewalks and water and sewer connections will soon be completed. Almost $10,000 worth of property has been disposed of in this tract within the seven weeks it has been on the market and the remaining lots are being rapidly sold out.

COAST-TO-COAST EXCURSION PARTY

Tour Promoters Charter Garford Cars for New York to L. A. Tour.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Applying time-tried excursion ideas that long have been successful in summer and autumn automobile trips from New York to the White Mountains, to the first transcontinental motor trip of its kind ever attempted in this country (the Raymond-Whitcomb corporation will start a fleet of Garford touring cars from New York on October 2 with Los Angeles, Cal., as the destination. The plans as outlined recently and made known when the contract for seven passenger Garford cars was made with the factory at Elkhart, Ohio, contemplate the most novel tour ever outlined for a considerable party.

Sixty days will be utilized in crossing the continent, the tour following closely the itinerary exhaustively routed by A. L. Westergaard of the Touring Club of America in the interests of automobile owners. With a schedule calling for about eighty miles a day, requiring about five hours of actual touring and every Sunday to be a day of complete rest for the tourists and machines, it is thought that the element of touring fatigue will be eliminated and a maximum of satisfaction assured for all who elect to abandon the usual "cross country speed journey" on railroad trails.

"Only four passengers besides the chauffeur will be permitted in each big touring car, thereby insuring an abundance of room in the liberally appointed touring cars, the more frequently traversed summer resort routes. The total mileage will approximate 4200 miles. C. E. Mathewson, the popular Coast manager of the Diamond Rubber Company of New York, left for Los Angeles on Wednesday. The branch in that city of the Diamond Company is one of the busiest in his entire territory. This is doubtless occasioned by the many fine tours leading out from that city. "Circuit" has been receiving orders for so many carload shipments in the past month from his southern branch that he decided that he had better run down and see what was stimulating business to such a large degree.

ENDURANCE RUN IS PLANNED SOON

Oakland Motorcycle Club to Participate in Tour to Placerville.

The Oakland Motorcycle Club, organized but a few weeks ago, is fast becoming one of the largest of its kind on the Pacific Coast. But two other clubs, those of San Francisco and Los Angeles, surpass it in point of membership. The local boys assert that it will be a matter of but a few short months before the membership roll of the Oakland Club will exceed that of both of the two others in the cities mentioned.

At a recent meeting a decision was reached to join with the San Francisco club in the endurance run which is being promoted by the latter motorcycle enthusiasts to Placerville.

The committee in charge include P. L. Peterson, Walter Collins, F. Roseberry and Frank Karslake, the latter of this city.

Four hundred and twenty-eight miles is the round trip distance between Placerville and Oakland. The start is to be made at 6:00 a. m. on the morning of the 2nd of July from Fifteenth street and Broadway in this city and the finish of the run necessitates the riders checking in at Market street and Van Ness avenue in San Francisco by 6:00 p. m. on the 3rd.

Oakland, to Stockton, Sacramento, Auburn and Placerville is the route for the first day, while the return trip is to be made via Folsom, Sacramento and San Jose.

A set of rules and regulations of a most severe nature will govern the endurance run.

Further particulars concerning the contest can be obtained from any member of the Oakland Motorcycle Club at their meetings, which are held every Tuesday night in the club rooms at 641 Twenty-second street.

Warren Detroit Is Becoming Popular. The Warren Detroit is coming into its own and the various new models which have been received by the John R. Taylor company are going out to various customers. New shipments continue to arrive, each carload containing models far superior in refinement and finish with respect to body colors—than the previous ones.

"KEEP OUT NO VISITORS" PUZZLES TIMOTHY HAY

EDITOR TRIBUNE: I once read an article in which it was stated that "a man was digging potatoes with a Roman nose," and being obtuse and as the punctuation marks were not properly placed, it took some time to find out whether the man was digging potatoes with his nose or whether this potato-digger was a Roman-nosed man.

I have just returned from the G. A. R. picnic in Alameda, and I observed near the entrance to Lincoln park in this city a sign which reads as follows: "Keep out no visitors solicitors peddlers or agents of any kind allowed" in these premises. Now as there were no punctuations at all it's hard to tell just what they mean. I wish they would say just what they mean.

AUTOMOBILE HAS ECONOMIC VALUE

The Chalmers Agent Disagrees With Economist as to Cause of High Living Cost.

"The statement was made not long ago by a political economist that the automobile is the cause of the high cost of living," says O. B. Leonhart, manager of the Pioneer Automobile Company, local representative of the Chalmers Motor Company, "but while I am forced to respect the gentleman's opinion, I most certainly take exception to his statement."

"I believe the automobile has a real economic value. Facts prove it."

"In the first place, the automobile is not merely a luxury. It is the last thing a man buys. It follows his home, books, the theater and even travel. When he really needs a motor car he buys one. Of course, there are some who overspend; but these always have overspent, if not for automobiles, for horses, steam yachts, jewels and many other things. The wealthy classes who own many motor cars cannot overspend. Furthermore, among the wealthy the automobile has merely replaced the teams of high-bred horses and expensive carriages."

"The number of automobiles used by business houses proves the commercial value of the motor car. Mercantile houses, contractors and physicians have found the automobile invaluable, and in business lines its use is increasing daily. Statistics show that one motor truck will replace six horses and three wagons. As a time saver, the automobile more than doubles the efficiency of the man who uses one. Modern business demands the automobile."

"The automobile industry has done more to raise the standard of labor than any other thing in the world. It has given us a higher class of mechanics and

PICTURES TO SHOW MAKING OF TIRES

B. F. Goodrich Co. to Give a Novel Entertainment at the Macdonough.

An hour of moving pictures, instructive and delightful, will be given as a complimentary lesson in the rubber industry by F. M. Tillisch at the Macdonough Theater, Thursday night, commencing at 8:30 o'clock, an expert in the historical part of the business, and explanation of the moving pictures which are one of the chief parts of a novel entertainment.

The B. F. Goodrich Company of Akron, Ohio, is sending Tillisch about the country, at great expense, for the purpose of placing it within the power of almost everyone to become thoroughly familiar with the production of rubber and the way in which it is handled from the soil to the tire. Something of a picture trip has to be taken from the tropical jungles of Brazil to the busy shops of America in the telling of the story, and the way in which it is put before the public in the hands of this skillful booster makes an evening most enjoyable.

The show is free and tickets can be procured from any local auto dealer or at the B. F. Goodrich Company branch houses.

No industry is as interesting as the procuring of rubber and its manufacture. The picturesque natives make extraordinary pictures, and the various processes are so unusual as to be something to be remembered for years.

The first picture shows scenes in the jungles of Brazil along the banks of the Amazon river and its tributaries. Mr. Tillisch explains that the various districts in which the crude rubber is gathered are rented from the Brazilian government by contractors. They then fit out their expeditions, comprised of natives with their overseers. The force is divided into gangs, each of which is given a district to "work."

The tools employed by these natives are of the very crudest kind. The incision in a tree is made with a machete, and an earthen gourd is fastened under the incision, into which the juice is allowed to flow. The native method of working the juice into crude rubber biscuits will then be shown. These biscuits are transported down the Amazon to tidewater and the rubber markets. They are then carried in large coasting freighters to the United States and then brought to the Goodrich factory at Akron. Cotton and other products being also very important factors in the manufacture of auto tires and rubber garments of various kinds, the different methods of obtaining these products are also shown.

First Models of Ohio Late in Arriving

The first model of the Ohio Electric which was due here last Friday will arrive within the next day or two. At least this is the latest advice from the railroad which H. Hinkel, the new representative, has received.

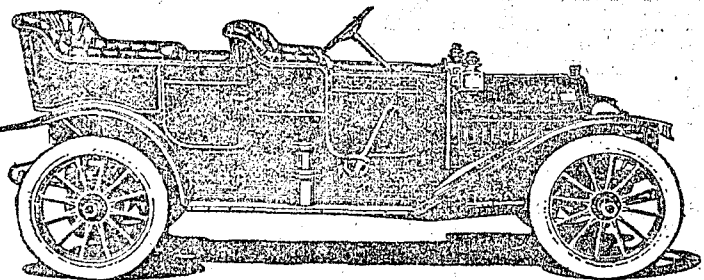

A number of demonstrations planned for yesterday today have necessarily been postponed on account of this delay but these will be taken care of immediately upon the arrival of the first cars. The salesrooms which will house the cars are being fitted up with equipment necessary for the electrical system such as rectifiers and recharging apparatus. Throughout the southern part of the state the Ohio is becoming one of the most popular vehicles of its type in use in that part of the country.

a much better grade of unskilled labor. It has greatly widened the scope of a new profession.

"In the matter of assessed valuation alone, the automobile industry has greatly enriched the country. "The automobile has done more for the roads of the country in less than a decade than horse-drawn vehicles have done in 200 years. The automobile carries good roads with it, bringing nearer together widely separated communities. And as good roads penetrate new countries the field of the automobile's usefulness is widened."

"It is indeed a mistake, I think, to lay the blame for the high cost of living at the door of the motor car. The foregoing points are not theories but facts, and to my mind they prove the real economic value of the automobile."

HARLEY DAVIDSON TWIN MACHINES COMING

The Double Cylinder Models of Well Known Make Are in Demand.

George Faulkner, distributor and representative here for both the Harley and Harley-Davidson motorcycles, is expecting his first shipment this week of the new Harley Davidson twin motorcycles. For some months past he has had a number of inquiries from prospective buyers of this style of the Harley Davidson, and will, with the first load of the twin machines, be in a position to fill a few of the orders he has for this type motor bike.

The Harley Davidson twin has been brought out to meet the requirements of experienced riders who demand extraordinary speed. This new model is a result of five years' exhaustive factory experiments and test. The motor is rated at 6 1/2 horsepower, has a bore 3 inches and stroke 3 1/4 inches. The piston displacement is 41-43 cubic inches.

For the coming season this twin is fitted with mechanically operated inlet valves. Over four years of experimental work, the Harley people claim, has proven conclusively to them that it is impossible to get satisfactory results of low speed from a twin motor equipped with automatic type of inlet valve. It is their contention that the very design of the twin V motor is such that it induces misfiring at low speeds.

Ignition is by Bosch magnetos—the gasoline tank holding two and a half gallons, and the oil tank one gallon. The tank construction is the same as used on the single cylinder model.

MOTORGRAPHS

If definite results that can be interpreted in terms of dollars and cents as they come from the owner's pocket-book are the aim of automobile contests of all nature, then quite surely the endurance contest is of far greater value as a demonstration of the car's worth to the owner than special speed trials in cars which are stock cars only as the details meet the standards of the blue prints, according to William P. Jones, Regal agent here. Here is a story of an endurance contest participated in by three cars taken from the floor of the garage just as they were ready to go to any owner who wished to order them sent over to his garage.

On the morning of May 28th, Jones states, three Regal "20" roadsters left the salesroom of the Buell-Regal Car Company of Pittsburg on a non-stop run from Pittsburg to Indianapolis, 360 miles.

The cars left Pittsburg on Sunday morning at 6:30 a. m. and struck out over the road, roads of West Virginia, reaching Zanesville, Ohio, at approximately 10 p. m. The rate of speed because of the conditions of travel. Immediately upon leaving Zanesville the roads became fit for fast going, and the three little cars hit it out on the national highway as fast as the wheels would turn over.

Just as the hands on the clock in Thomas Brothers' garage on North Delaware street, Indianapolis, pointed to 8:10 p. m. the sturdy little Regals pulled up with the occupants not tired and dirty. But there was this satisfaction in the run. All records for time between Pittsburg and Indianapolis in a motor car had been shattered by almost six hours. The best previous time was eighteen hours. The actual running time for the Regal cars was twelve hours and forty minutes, making an average speed of thirty miles an hour.

The object of the trip was two-fold. It was made not only for the purpose of showing what actually could be done in a non-stop run by the Regal "20" underslung roadsters, but also to demonstrate how economical the car is. In the whole stretch of 360 miles but one of the cars showed a puncture; there were no blow-outs. Pennsylvania vacuum cup head tires were used. Total gasoline consumption for each car amounted to twenty gallons, which at an average price of fifteen cents per gallon makes $3.00 per car. The two gallons of lubricating oil used in each car added $1.50 to that expense. The total expense of running each car 360 miles was only $4.50, considerably less than two cents per mile.

Archbishop John Ireland, internationally known as a man of powerful influence in American affairs, as well as in the church with which he is identified, has just become a convert to the automobile, having admired and driven fine horses for many years.

P. J. Downes of Minneapolis delivered a Rambler Limousine to the Archbishop last week. The Rambler will do duty in covering his diocesan tours in the vicinity of St. Paul.

That the coast route from San Francisco to Los Angeles is an excellent one for pleasure motoring is the report received by letter from W. Remensperger, who has just completed the trip from this city to the Southern California metropolis in his Carter car.

Walls the grades are steep and rough in places," writes Remensperger, "the grandeur of the scenery more than repays the motorists for any difficulties. The roads on the whole are in excellent condition and the few bad stretches encountered are being put in repair. Along the Santa Ana river, where, by the way, we caught a fine string of trout, we found sand that came up nearly to the running boards. The car, however, took the going without a halt. The best evidence of the kind of service that the machine gave is found in the fact that the tool kit was not once opened on the trip. We are now planning to make return to San Francisco via the valley route."

The Elgin national road races are already claiming the attention of Eastern automobile manufacturers who have been foremost in supporting the racing game, according to report brought back from the East by A. D. Morrison, sales manager of the Pacific Motor Car Company. The Cole factory expects to enter three cars in these races. The drivers will probably be Endicott, Jenkins and Harb Wilson. The last named pilot first came to national prominence in the recent Florida beach races in which he drove his Cole to victory in practically every event entered.

Among the history-makers during the late trouble in Mexico was a six-cylinder, forty-horsepower Franklin touring car owned by John C. Greenway of Cananea, a mining town in the trouble zone.

When the revolution broke in earnest motor cars added a modern touch to the warfare by providing a rapid means of transportation when such was necessary. Foremost among these was the Franklin touring car with its air-cooled motor.

When the disturbance lent a dangerous element to residences in Mexico the car was used in rushing women and children across the border line into the United States.

At the battle of Juarez it carried the wounded to hospitals, running ceaselessly for hours with the mercury close to 100 degrees. The air-cooled motor proved

400 DELEGATES SAIL FOR EUREKA

Three Steamers Carry North Many Druids Who Will Meet in Humboldt.

EUREKA, Cal., June 17.—The steam schooner Prentiss sailed for San Francisco at 2:35 o'clock this afternoon with a full cargo of lumber loaded at Field's Landing.

Three passenger and mail vessels are due here tomorrow, the steamers Santa Clara, George W. Elder and City of Topeka. These vessels will have between them about 400 delegates to the grand lodge of Druids which will convene in this city Monday and remain in session until Friday.

The steam schooners North Fork and Phoenix are due at this port late tomorrow night or early Monday morning. The Phoenix will have both passengers and freight, while the North Fork will have a full freight cargo.

The steam schooner Vanguard will sail for San Francisco early tomorrow with a full cargo of lumber and a number of passengers.

It is reported that the British bark Britishwoman, 1889 tons, Captain Watts, came here from Newcastle, N. S. W., will come here to load for South Africa.

OAKLANDER RETURNS HOME. HAYWARD, June 17.—Miss Elshore Steinman, who has been visiting Hayward friends, has returned to her home in Oakland.

Valuable, as the high temperature, with no shade, heated the water in radiators. The Franklin's cooling system worked perfectly, and owing to its successful operation many wounded belligerents were enabled to secure medical attendance.

The big tires, full-elliptic springs, wood chassis frame and light weight of the car make it especially easy riding for the wounded over the rough roads.

SEA COAST TRAFFIC IS INCREASING

Freight and Passenger Business Done Up and Down Coast to Capacity.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—So rapidly is coastwise traffic increasing, especially the freight business, that nearly every ship arriving and departing at this port is taxed to its capacity. It is a common occurrence to see tons of freight piled upon the various docks immediately after the sailing of a ship. Although the passenger end of the shipping business is not taxed quite so heavily, it is reported that practically every company operating out of San Francisco is handling more business than a year ago. This is noted as a happy indication, when it is considered that the installation of the fast-turbine steamers Yale and Harvard by the Pacific Navigation Company has nearly doubled the traveling by water facilities between San Francisco and Los Angeles. As each of these ships makes two round trips each week and the passenger list usually numbers over 200 each time, this means that this line alone transports nearly 2000 persons per week. The Harvard, Captain Jepsen, arrived here from the south yesterday morning with 213 passengers and upon departure in the afternoon for Los Angeles the list numbered only a few less than 300.

The Pacific Coast Company is doing a big business both to the south and north. Every steamer is sailing with big passenger lists and capacity freight cargoes. When the steamer Governor, Captain Cousins, sailed for Seattle and Puget Sound ports yesterday afternoon her holds contained every pound of cargo that could be loaded on board. There were over 400 passengers, including many prominent tourists, who preferred to travel between coast ports by the water route rather than suffer the inconvenience of the dust and heat incurred by train travel.

ALAMEDA COUNTY HAS SOME IRRESISTIBLE ROADS

Many Motorists Are to Be Seen Touring Here Each Week; Is a Country of Scenic Beauty

Indisputably Alameda county has more to offer the pleasure-loving motorist than the shape of irresistible roads than any other county in California, with the probable exception of Los Angeles county; but no community north of the extreme southern counties compares to Alameda and the most emphatic proof of this is the thousands of machines which may be seen every Sunday on this side of the bay. In fact, at points it would be impossible to count the machines which pass except by automatic methods.

Alameda prides herself over the fact that it is not merely her delightful and well-built roads which lure the motorist, but that her points of interest are sufficient to bring the curious motorist scores of miles to take a look.

A trip of this kind, the principal motive of which was to satisfy to a certain extent curiosity and a desire to test out stretches of ideal roads with the throttle wide open, was taken last Sunday by a party of local motorists in an E-M-F "30" touring car. Those in the machine were: A. A. Denison, secretary of the Oakland Chamber of Commerce, A. C. Briggs, proprietor of "Pacific Motor," and M. T. Dolman, F. M. Metzgar and E. E. Westergreen of San Francisco.

OVER FOOTHILL BOULEVARD. The beaten path over the "Foothill Boulevard" to Hayward, thence on to the county road to Niles was taken. Just beyond Niles the motorists turned their car into the tropical gardens of Henry Lachman and for hours roamed over the premises. There were avenues of palm trees which are not exceeded by the Royal Gardens of Hawaii, palms of many varieties, fruit bearing trees more than 100 years old and acres of lawn and California flowers in a riot of colors and fragrance. Lachman calls his retreat "Palmdale," but attractive as is the title it conveys in only a small measure the beauty of the place.

Leaving "Palmdale," the motorists headed their E-M-F toward Mission San Jose and the olive orchards of the old silver place just beyond the Mission. Turning back there the party crossed the foothills by way of Sunol canyon. The latter has many turns and grades but none of the former are sharp and the grades are all of easy ascent. The road through the canyon is merely an index of those of Pleasanton and Livermore valleys beyond, where one can "hit the top" for five or six miles at a time without pulling down the throttle.

Just outside of Sunol is the gateway to and the aeration station of the Spring Valley Water Company, known as the "Water Temple." The "Temple" is a magnificent place of architecture and really one of a restored temple of Ancient Greece. Erected on a plain and quite removed from everything else, as one gazes into the pools of water in its interior, one recalls the stories of the oases on the great deserts.

LEAVING THE WATER TEMPLE. The motorists followed the main road to Pleasanton, thence to the junction of the main road to Livermore and the road to Santa Rita, thence to the left through Dublin canyon and as far as the road which leads through Castro Valley. The road through Dublin canyon is decidedly rough and, unless motorists are compelled to use it, it is advisable to follow another course.

The scenery through Castro Valley is decidedly Californian. The roads are fair, but in places quite dusty. Avenues of Lombard poplars line the roadways in places, forming lanes often canopied, which are most striking in their appearance. Leaving the valley road the motorists took the road which trails along the mountain side south of Lake Chabot, the People's Water Company's reservoir, one of the most beautiful bodies of water in this part of the State. The "Foothill Boulevard" was again reached at the new home of the Oakland Motor Club. From that point the motorists returned to Oakland, the odometer reading a trifle over 95 miles. The actual running time of the car was less than four hours, which indicates clearly the ideal roads found in such an extensive one-day tour.

NEW LOCOMOBILES ARE IN DEMAND

1912 Models of High Grade Car Contain No Radical Changes.

The 1912 Locomobile announcement made two weeks ago has, even at this early period, resulted in a demand for this car in its various models in quantities far beyond even the most hopeful expectations of the coast distributors. S. S. Southworth, agent here for the Locomobile has already delivered a 1912, 30 horse-power touring car of the Ford Door type to the Realty Syndicate.

In common with other makers of strictly high grade cars the Locomobile Co. have adopted no radical changes. Instead have adhered to a mechanical excellence which has proven its worth in no small degree in years past.

The torpedo body is to be continued on the Six Cylinder car and a new type of body that of five passenger, for which there is a continual demand has been added.

The cars are finished in the best manner possible, radiators being enameled to match the bonnet. The hand levers are enameled black below the grips, and the lamp equipment is to be black with brass combination finish. The Locomobile's idea of carrying tires on the rear has been very satisfactory, and has been kept to a considerable extent.

During the past season, no car among the best of the highest price made enjoyed a greater popularity in this county than did the Locomobile.

ISSUES STATEMENT ABOUT PAINTING

The Mother of "Perfect Girl" States Her Side of Controversy With Artist.

The following statement has been issued by Mrs. L. Edyth Edwards in connection with her suit to recover a painting of her daughter, Margaret, from G. S. Perhach, the Berkeley artist.

"In 1909 Mr. Perhach came to me and asked permission to paint my daughter. I permitted Margaret to pose for him on condition that he paint two pictures, one of which should be his own property and one of which should belong to me. This was agreed upon, and an agreement to this effect was later drawn up by Congressman Theodore Bell. I have the original draft of that agreement, which, however, was not signed, Congressman Bell having to make a hurried trip East at that time.

"We considered, anyway, that a verbal agreement would be sufficient when dealing with a gentleman and an artist.

"After spending months of time and undergoing a good deal of expense, coming repeatedly from our ranch in Santa Clara county to Mr. Perhach's home in Fruitvale, with Margaret giving up her school work to pose for these pictures, two pictures were finally finished, and then Mr. Perhach, without my knowledge or consent, painted a third picture of Margaret. When I learned of this I objected strenuously and referred the painter to our original agreement, which was that only two pictures of Margaret should be painted—one to be his property and the other our possession. He then agreed that we should each have a joint interest in this third picture, and the written agreement which Congressman Bell drew up at that time so stated.

"After waiting a reasonable time for Mr. Perhach to fulfill his agreement, we asked for our picture and were told by the artist that he had become dissatisfied with the first picture, which he had entitled 'California,' and was also dissatisfied with the third picture, called 'The Perfect Child,' and that he had destroyed them both, leaving only the second picture, called 'Nymph of the Woods,' by which we were amazed at what seemed to be a high-handed action in connection with what was really my picture, and asked for the return of my own picture, 'A Nymph of the Woods.'

"I doubted that he had really destroyed the pictures, which he said he had thrown away, but called for the return of my own picture as part of what was my right.

"The painter refused to give up the picture which belongs to me, and accordingly I took legal means to secure it.

"It was then proposed that I should also, which may take the form of a criminal action, to call Mr. Perhach to account for having destroyed or disposed of the other painting, 'The Perfect Child,' in which I have a half interest."

'OLD GUARD' AND NEW TO MEET IN CELEBRATION

Famous Military Organization Formed 50 Years Ago in Oakland.

ANNIVERSARY TO BE OBSERVED WEDNESDAY

Members of Company A, Fifth Infantry N. G. C., to Hold Reunion.

Half a century ago, civil war was raging between the north and south and the residents of California took sides in the controversy. At that time Oakland was but a hamlet, but there were a number of patriots here who espoused the cause of the north and this espousal led to the formation of the military organization which became known as the Oakland Guard, of which Company A of the Fifth Infantry N. G. C. is the present and legitimate successor. Next Wednesday night the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the company will be celebrated by a reunion of the old and young members of the company in Reed Hall.

The Oakland Guard was organized on June 21, 1861, but it was not until August 21 of that year that the first corps of officers was elected and the organization started out on a career which has continued.

At that time there were in this city three distinguished soldiers who had for years been connected with the regular department of the United States army. They were then Major (afterwards General) Ralph Kirkham, quartermaster-general; Major Wood, paymaster-general; and General Lucius H. Allen. These took a great interest in the company and had considerable to do with its formation.

NINETY IN THE COMPANY.

The duties of General Allen ceased when the Guard elected its first officers. The new company commander was James Brown, who had seen service in the Mexican war.

Captain Brown continued the excellent work which General Allen had begun and succeeded in making the Oakland Guard the crack military organization of the time in this section of the company.

OFFICERS OF OLD GUARD.

The other officers elected were as follows: First lieutenant, John Foster; second lieutenant, William H. Foster; junior sergeant, John Hobart; orderly sergeant, H. F. Crocker; second sergeant, T. W. Newcomb; third sergeant, E. Woolsey; fourth sergeant, Charles McKay; first corporal, Harry N. Morse; second corporal, Harry Summers; third corporal, Charles Stewart; and fourth corporal, James Travis.

Of these officers the only survivors are Harry N. Morse, who is still one of the active heads of a private detective agency, and T. W. Newcomb. Of course, there are still surviving a number of the enlisted members of the company.

It is not to be wondered at that there are some lapses in the historical record of this early guard. Some of the members of the organization, both old and young, are laboring for the want of supplying the missing facts and probably before the next anniversary rolls around, the story of the company will be brought down from the earliest moment to the present time.

POPULAR ORGANIZATION.

There was never, probably, in this State a more popular military organization than was the Oakland Guard. From among its members have been selected the incumbents of almost every office within the gift, not alone of this city and county, but also the State of California.

George C. Pardee, a captain of the company, became governor of California. Captain Lauck, a later member and commander, served for eight years as adjutant-general of the State.

Harry N. Morse, one of the original officers, was for fourteen years chief of Alameda county, having been elected to the position for seven times in succession. Previously he had served as deputy provost marshal.

Jerry Tyrrel, a member of the original organization, served as sheriff of this county.

Charles G. Reed at various times served this county as clerk and as deputy auditor.

Lieutenant Henry Maloon, who is still one of the most active of the early members, was for a number of years inspector of licenses for the city of Oakland.

Henry Hildebrand was for a time clerk of this city.

James Brown, the first captain, served the people of this city for a long period as city marshal.

Charles McKay also occupied the same position.

Harry Summers, the original second corporal, was connected with the police department of this city until he died.

W. H. Foster and H. F. Crocker were among those who were sent as members of the California One Hundred.

STANDARD BEARER.

George Carleton, who was one of the first men to join the company, acted for many years as the city electrician of Oakland and for a long time, because of his commanding height and stalwart appearance, was retained as the standard-bearer of the company.

William Hoskins was marshal of this city at the time he joined the organization.

Minor Smith, who was one of the earliest members, performed the duties of assessor of the city of Alameda for about thirty years.

W. W. Crane was one of the early mayors of this city.

The first appearance of the company in public was made in red blouses, bound at the waist with a white belt, upon which rested the belt supporting the cartridge box. Later the regulation uniforms were received.

Among the captains who have served at the head of Company A are James Brown, Harry N. Morse, Charles T. Foulter, E. G. Hunt, A. W. Burrell, W. C. Little, H. D. Rayner, Henry Levy, A. L. Smith, G. B. Daniels, J. B. Lauck, Dr. George C. Pardee, W. J. Petersen, Fred W. Petersen and Leonard Francis, the last the present commander.

The reunion next Wednesday night will comprise all the present members, many of those who have served recent terms of enlistment and as many of the early members as are still able to be on hand.

The younger people and the survivors of the earlier commands have formed what is known as the "Old Guard" and both take the greatest interest in these and annual gatherings. There will be a literary and musical program rendered and reminiscences will be indulged in which will be interesting to both young and old. Refreshments will be served.

CLUBMEN TO PLAY BALL FOR CHARITY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The Owls will battle against the Storks in a benefit baseball game for the Armitage Orphan asylum at Recreation Park next Thursday afternoon. The Owl team is from the Bohemian Club and the Stork team is made up of members of the Family Club.

The grand stand will be divided into two sections for the rival camps of rooters. "Big Bill" Lange, former National League star, will be in the Family Club's line-up. The uniforms will be white with orange stockings and orange peaks to the caps in order to make them look as much like storks as possible. The team has been practicing at the family farm near Woodside.

Bill Harkin will be the mascot for the Bohemian Club. General admission will be 25 cents, reserved seats 50c and box seats $1. Tickets may be secured either at club at Sherman Play Co.'s and at Recreation Park the day of the battle.

PREVENT REMOVAL OF 8000 BODIES

San Mateo District Attorney Demands $80,000 From Six Companies.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The prospective removal of 8000 bodies from the Chinese cemetery in Colma, which are to be shipped to China as the final resting place, has caused a controversy between District Attorney Franklin Swart and Health Officer W. G. Beattie, who insists that $10 should be paid for each burial permit, and Recorder Harold Heiner, William Hoff Cook and Carroll Cook, attorneys for the Six Chinese Companies, who declare that under the State law but 25 cents is the sum fixed for the issuance of such a permit.

Without the knowledge and against the advice of the District Attorney, Heiner issued seventy-seven removal permits. When a gang of grave diggers appeared at the cemetery yesterday armed with permits bearing Heiner's signature, Health Officer Beattie stopped them and communicated with the District Attorney, who directed that the men be arrested at once if they made an effort to remove the bodies. Beattie followed out the order of Swart and no work was done.

The sum of $80,000 is involved in the removal of the 8000 bodies of Chinese, which the District Attorney and Health Officer believe should be paid to the county by the Six Chinese Companies.

Attorney William Hoff Cook first approached Supervisor James T. Casey of

ORGANIZE REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE

Dealers in Fresno Enter Into Agreement Concerning Property Sales.

FRESNO, June 17.—A committee of real estate men of this city has completed by-laws for the proposed real estate exchange and an organization will be effected at a meeting Tuesday. By the terms of the agreement to be entered into, all real estate listed for sale will hereafter be in the hands of all the members of the exchange, the firm with which the property is originally led being given twenty days in which to make a sale, after which all the members are free to attempt to dispose of it.

Provisions are made for divisions of commissions which are to be uniform with the present rates. Practically all the real estate firms in the city are signed up with the exchange.

The first township in which the cemetery district is located, and requested him to issue the requisite removal permits without charge. The Supervisor declined to do so and referred Cook to the District Attorney.

The Chinese are very anxious to have the bodies removed this summer, as contracts for this purpose have been entered into with the steamship companies.

Swart and Beattie declare that the money must be paid before the bodies are removed, even if a test case be made subsequently.

MYSTIC SHRINERS GUESTS OF FRESNO

Visit Interior Town and Take Part in Ceremonies of the Local Temple.

FRESNO, June 17.—Francis V. Keenling of San Francisco was at the head of 200 nobles of the mystic shrine of Isalam Temple who arrived in this city this afternoon from various points in northern California, and this evening a class of fifty Fresnoans were initiated into the order. A large escort of local Shriners received the visitors and were assisted by delegations from other towns in central California, including Bakersfield, Coalinga and other points.

A delegation from Los Angeles came in later, in celebration of a reunion. O. T. Cearly of this city was in charge of the arrangements. A banquet followed the evening ceremonies, in the new Masonic temple.

Tomorrow morning the visitors will be shown over some of the surrounding country, after which they will return at 4 o'clock to Fresno and elsewhere.

Harley-Davidson
Twin Cylinder Motor Cycles

Our store will be open evenings this week to give those interested a chance to inspect this long-looked-for machine.

Geo. A. Faulkner
232 12th St., Oakland

OAKLAND TRIBUNE, Oakland's greatest evening newspaper, assures its advertisers that the circulation of this paper reaches every day over 200,000 readers.

Here is the Flanders "4" Motorcycle

Made in the World's Largest Motorcycle Factory. It is a Big, Powerful, Beautiful Machine, Combining all that is Best and the Price is a Little More than Half—$175. Magneto included—of course.

THIS IS THE MOTORCYCLE you have heard so much about. We hope this announcement will quell the anxiety of other makers—now that they know the worst they may rest easier!

EVER SINCE IT BECAME KNOWN that Flanders, the man who makes the E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" automobiles, was interested in the manufacture of motorcycles, nothing else has been talked of in trade circles.

IT WAS AMUSING to listen to the many stories that were told. Some of them were weird—and all were far from the truth. They originated doubtless from the fact that it was known we were experimenting on something very different from present types—experiments that may or may not come to something in the future.

HERE ARE THE FACTS: The Flanders "4" is not an experiment in any sense—nor is there a single radical feature about it. It is a standard, four-horse power, belt-driven motorcycle—a trifle larger, longer, yet lighter, and more powerful, and much better built than other "4's".

THE PRICE IS SENSATIONAL—that's all—price and quality.

YOU WILL RECALL that Flanders' success in the automobile industry was made, not by inventing a new kind of motor car, but by taking the best $3,500 car that could be found, manufacturing them in thousands instead of hundreds and selling them for just half the former price. Of course the profit was small on each car—but on thousands it figured up pretty fast. And the low price made it possible to sell all and more than the big factories could make.

THE REST IS HISTORY—no other car in the whole world enjoys so splendid a reputation. Over 30,000 delighted owners will tell you it has no equal.

NOW GET THIS—It's important! We are following the same plan. We have nothing new—just a standard "four" motorcycle made as much better than others as we know how. The genius of this organization is designing and manufacturing ability—our strong point is making things in immense quantities. We have the capital, the factories and the experience.

THEN WE SELL IT FOR LESS—much less. Why? Simply because if we are to manufacture say 50,000 motorcycles per year we must place the price within the reach of that many people—working men, clerks, as well as business men. Every ten dollars added to the price cuts down the demand—less people can afford the price.

BESIDES IT COSTS HEAVILY to sell an article for more than it is worth. The customer knows about how much he should pay and get one hundred cents' worth for every dollar.

MOTORCYCLES ARE TOO HIGH PRICED—the value isn't there. The Flanders "4" will correct that.

WHEN FLANDERS ENTERED the automobile business prices were fifty per cent higher than they are now—the reason other makers have been so worried of late was because they knew the advent of Flanders in the motorcycle business meant a revolution of both price and quality in this as it did in the automobile business.

THE PRICE IS $175.00—magneto included—of course. Flanders was the first to say no automobile was complete without a magneto—we say it again now—no motorcycle is complete without a first-class magneto—and we use the Splitdorf—admitted best. Others charge $25 to $40 extra for a magneto—and a foreign one at that.

AS FOR THE REST—we need not waste space here on technical specifications. They are all in the catalog and you can have one for the asking. Suffice it to say this is a full size machine—55 1/2 inch wheel base; 28 inch wheels shod with 2 1/2 inch tires. Heavily tired for the weight for Flanders "4" is 25 pounds lighter than the next lightest motorcycle of the same size.

WHY? BECAUSE instead of heavy, uncertain castings we use drop forgings and stampings scientifically heat treated. In other words, we use the same kind of materials that are used in first-class automobiles and so we are able to make a lighter yet stronger machine. Of course, we need not tell you the advantages of lightness in a motorcycle—you know them yourself.

NOW IF THIS WERE A NEW and unknown concern you might have reason to doubt the quality of this motorcycle—agents for other machines selling for $225 to $350 will, of course, try to tell you a first-class 4 horsepower, belt-driven free engine motorcycle can't be made and sold at a profit for $175.00—including a Splitdorf magneto.

BUT YOU KNOW THE NAME FLANDERS. You know it stands head and shoulders above all others in the automobile industry—and above all you know—all the world knows—that name stands for quality and fair dealing.

SO WE NEEDN'T answer that statement which, of course, other makers will make—because they must. It is the only thing left for them to say.

YES, WE WILL answer it—by saying that the Flanders guarantee goes with every motorcycle—and all the world knows what that means, too.

JUST A WORD about deliveries. Already the fame of this machine has spread over the country and we have a large number of orders on hand. You may have to wait a little, but it will be worth it as you will get a better motorcycle for much less.

PERHAPS THERE ISN'T a dealer in your immediate territory yet—we are signing them up as fast as we can, but it takes time, especially as we are very careful to select the best—men who will properly represent the Flanders policy.

IF THERE ISN'T a dealer in your vicinity you can send your order to the factory direct—it won't get any better service, but we promise you a delivery in your proper order—no partiality.

DEALERS: Perhaps we haven't signed up in your territory yet—only way to find out is to write our Sales Manager at the factory. You will have to measure up to the standard to secure this agency. So if you want it, hurry—and when writing tell him all about yourself and why you think you are entitled to this plum. Ten of these machines will be sold for every one you are now selling—greater value for the money.

DREXEL'S FRIENDS CARRY OLIVE BRANCH

Strive Hard to Bring About a Reconciliation Between Couple.

ANTHONY NOT HAPPY
IN HIS LONESOME LIFE

Hope That Arrival of Maidstone
Heir May Soften
Mrs. Tony.

(By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.)

PARIS, June 17.—Friends of the Anthony Drexels in Paris are doing all in their power to bring about a reconciliation between husband and wife by having Mrs. Drexel abandon her purpose to enter a suit for divorce on the grounds of desertion. They declare that all cause for this disagreement between the couple has been removed and both will make a serious effort if they insist upon a legal separation.

There is a coming event which these friends of Drexel's bank upon to all their efforts to effect a reconciliation. A little visitor to Lord and Lady Maidstone, the latter a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Drexel, is expected in August, and it is hoped that this will be the means of softening the heart of Mrs. "Tony" toward her husband and that matters will be amicably arranged.

Drexel is not altogether happy in his lonesome life in Paris, but he is taking very good care that none of his actions shall be such as to widen the breach between himself and his wife. Mme. Letellier, to whom he was some time attentive, now has an admirer in the person of a Roman shipbuilder who has a large fortune and who appears to occupy her time. This fact appears to be very pleasing to Mr. Drexel.

INVOLVES PRINCE.

The arrival in Paris of the Maharajah of Baroda and his gossip entourage has caused the circulation of a story of an Indian incident involving the German Crown Prince, the Maharajah and Maharanees of Kapurthala, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ross Winans of Baltimore and Andre de Fogueres, the Beau Brummel of Paris.

During the Prince's recent visit to India he was the guest of the Maharajah at Kapurthala. Experiencing a sensation of freedom, the Princess being in Egypt, the Prince found himself seriously impressed with the charms of the Maharanees, formerly Anita Delgado, the Andalusian beauty whom the Maharajah married some years ago. Anita Delgado is a sister of Marie Delgado, the young Winans' nephew, Walter Winans of London, married five years ago. Both the beauties were daughters of a Spanish innkeeper and were involved in financial arrangements made by an impetuous father with an Indian nabob and an American millionaire. The flirtation between the Prince and the Maharanees became so pronounced that it would have been difficult for the Maharajah to notice it, so his first impulse was to behead his beautiful wife, as is customary with men of his caste in India when they have a serious grievance against their spouses.

CONSULTS RELATIVE.

But Andre de Fogueres, his brother-in-law, there on a visit, was consulted and with that diplomacy that has made him charming, induced the family council to advise the Maharajah not to punish the unsophisticated peasant girl of Spain, but to cable the German Emperor. This was done and the Crown Prince was called home by cablegram. He returned, not in a German battleship, such as carried him out to India, but in an ordinary P. & O. steamer.

William Dulany Hunter, the popular American consul at Nice, is lying dangerously ill with typhoid fever. He has just returned to Nice from a visit to his sister in Washington and the night before leaving America, at oysters which caused him to fall seriously ill on the steamer. The illness developed into fever.

LAUDERAUX BRANDED SUICIDE BY POLICE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—An investigation by the detectives into the death of Emil Lauderoux of 710 Vermont street, who was found with a weight tied around him in the waters of the bay in the Potrero has resulted in the discovery that he committed suicide. It was learned that he had been treated at the Mission hospital Wednesday for charcoal fumes and appeared despondent to Steward Leadbetter, to whom he said: "It's pretty hard when a man's children turn against him."

DANGERS OF FAT HOW FAT AFFECTS THE KIDNEYS

The kidneys often become affected by fatty deposits before any other organ. Probably there is no more important function of the entire body than that performed by the kidneys. Any interruption or impairment of this function, must necessarily soon result in serious trouble. And not the least of these dangers is the gradual change in substance of the organs themselves. You will hardly care to risk Bright's Disease, or the torments of Rheumatism, or the pangs of the unrelenting burden of fat which attacks the whole body, making it a sight far from attractive. There is one sure, harmless means by which fat may be checked; that is the famous Marmola Prescription of a Detroit Physician, rendered more convenient and effective in Marmola's Prescription Tablets. All druggists sell Marmola's Prescription Tablets, and their price is 75c for a large case, or they will be sent postpaid on receipt of price by the Marmola Co., 78 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich. By their use, exercise and dieting may be discarded; a smooth, clear complexion and even satisfactory reduction accomplished at the rate of 10 to 15 ounces a day.

NEW GIANT SHIP

Steamship Olympic to Sight
Sandy Hook the Coming Week.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Not since the arrival of the "Great Eastern" at New York has the harbor been prepared to give so hearty a welcome as will be extended to the steamship "Olympic," which will sight Sandy Hook next week. The new Chelsea docks have been especially extended to accommodate her, while the foresight of the government in preparing the Ambrose channel will make it possible for her to enter the harbor without danger. The Olympic is the first of the 50,000-ton liners which establishes a new record for size, comfort and carrying capacity on the high seas. Her sister ship, equally large, will soon follow. Within two years another ocean giant, the steamship "Titanic," of the Hamburg-American line, will be added to the fleet, even exceeding the Olympic in length and carrying capacity. The Olympic will be followed in turn by a sister ship of the same line, of even greater dimensions. The great liners of today will be completely outshined by these great 50,000-tonners.

LOW VALUE ON MARRIAGE.

BERLIN, June 17.—Low value is placed on marriage by a Berlin locksmith, Paul Beck, who was detected and arrested on the act of breaking into the strongbox of the church in which he had been married a month before. When Beck, who has a good business and reputation, was asked what had tempted him to commit the crime, he replied that he wished to recover the fee of $2.50, which he had paid for his wedding, a sum which appeared to him as altogether too much for the service.

SOUL MATE IS MUTILATED

Husband Suspects Wife and Wreaks Terrible Vengeance
On Lover.

Jury Sympathizes With Guilty Man and Acquits Him of Charge.

BERLIN, June 17.—An amazing story of vengeance wreaked by the husband upon the lover of his wife was revealed during the course of a trial at Glatfelter, Galicia.

The feature of the husband's revenge was a bomb concealed in a basket of flowers with which it was intended the lover should be blown to pieces.

As it turned out, however, when the bomb exploded the result was not fatal, but the unfortunate victim was terribly mutilated.

SUSPECTED HIS WIFE.

The accused man was Felix Dwor-sky, a railway servant. For some time he had reason to suspect his wife's fidelity and eventually made certain she was unfaithful to him.

Thereupon he set about devising his scheme of revenge. The wife, however, suspected there was some scheme afoot to injure her lover. Therefore she warned her lover not to sleep in his usual room at his home, lest some harm overtake him. The man laughed at her fears. He accounted the idea that the husband would dare attempt to interfere with him. That night when he was in bed he was aroused by a slight explosion in the room. Jumping up he saw clouds of smoke rising from a flower basket on the windowsill. He seized the basket and just at the moment he picked it up the bomb exploded with great violence.

ADMITTED CRIME.

When Dworsky was arrested he admitted he had placed the bomb in the basket with the intention of blowing the other man to pieces, but he denied the motive of the crime was jealousy. He alleged he had placed the bomb at the order of a secret society.
The trial lasted five days, but during the jury sympathized with Dworsky's marital troubles and acquitted him.

Chief Executive of Minnesota Town Charged With Leading Band of Desperadoes.

BEMIDJI, Minn., June 17.—Two men are wounded, one a prisoner, the other trailed by blood from his injuries into the street and a warrant for the arrest of Dr. E. J. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, on a charge of being at the head of a crowd of safe robbers, is the dramatic culmination of a piece of detective work staged here by J. C. Fielding, a Minneapolis
"Pinkerton" man.

The crisis of the episode came today when two safe robbers, Mike, alias Curly, Davis, and Billy Dean, were trapped by the detectives while in the act of cracking the safe of a bank, eighteen miles north of Bemidji.
The men drew automatic revolvers and fired. Dean fell wounded and Davis, though shot, escaped.
Davis sent twelve more bullets toward Fielding and his men, but missed.

Steamer for the Immigration Service

The Angel Island, the new immigration service steamer, which has been building at the United Engineering Works for the past six months, will be launched next Wednesday evening in the presence of officials of the immigration department and officers of the shipbuilding firm. Mrs.
Luther C. Stewart, wife of L. C. Stewart, acting immigration commissioner, will be the vessel's sponsor and will break a bottle of champagne over the bow when the doghead is knocked out, releasing the vessel from the ways.

Among those to be present at the ceremony will be R. Christie, manager of the United Engineering Works. The government party from Angel Island will come over on the revenue cutter Inspector.

The vessel is the only one ever built on the Pacific Coast specially for the immigration authorities and for that reason will be in a class by itself. The hull is of steel throughout, as are all other parts where metal could be used. The cabins on the main deck will be used for accommodating Asiatics, while those on the upper deck will house Europeans.
The officers' quarters are separate.
The vessel is electrically lighted and will be an oil burner.
After the launching the engines and boilers will be installed. The steamer probably will go into commission about August 1. It measures 144 feet in length, with a 24-foot beam, and is 12 feet 9 inches deep.
The engine to be installed is a fore and aft compound 650 horsepower, with a capability of developing a speed of twelve knots. The Angel Island will be one of the naughtiest steamers on the coast when completed.

Must Repay $500,000
He Took by Deceit

Henry Belden, Associate of Jim Fisk, Forced to Return Fortune.

NEW YORK, June 17.—William Belden, once a prince of finance in the street and a sharer with Jim Fisk and Jay Gould in responsibility for "Black Friday," was forced by the Supreme Court today to repay a fortune of more than $500,000 that it has been determined judicially he wrongfully took away from the children of his brother, Henry Belden, by fraud and deceit. For nine years there has been a bitter struggle between the heirs of Henry Belden and William Belden to force the latter to account for the big estate he took from Henry in his declining years.

Never Deny Rumors of My Death'—M. Corelli

LONDON, June 17.—Marie Corelli heard the report of her death from America today and laughed. "I never bother to deny rumors of my death or marriage," she said. "Don't worry; I'll be on hand to write my impressions of the coronation."

ASSUMED NAME FAILS TO HIDE IDENTITY

'Engaged? Never Again'
Says Mrs. R. Menges
Corwin-Hill

NEW YORK, June 17.—Mrs. Robert Menges Corwin-Hill arrived here today aboard the steamer Kalamazoo from Victoria. She thought she would pass unrecognized by using a false name, as she did when she sailed from here on Le Province a month ago.
She has forgotten the name she used when she left here and declared that Jack Burtonaby was not a passenger on that boat.

'ENGAGED? NEVER AGAIN.'

"Engaged to any one, not me. I've had enough of that. Never again," replied Miss Hill when asked concerning reports that she intended to marry. At the customs desk on the pier she smiled and whispered that she felt sure she had not made a mistake or forgotten anything.
"I know better now," she said. "So I am sure you will find everything all right."

Her friends, Mr. and Mrs. H. Walms, attracted as much or more attention than Mrs. Hill.

Mrs. Walms said she had been abroad several years, but was an American. Her maiden name was May Somers, she declared, and she said she had married Walms in New York and that he was an American citizen also.

'OUTRAGEOUS,' SHE SAYS.

"It is outrageous that I should be detained here," she said.
"It is the result of threats made by these card sharpers whom I met the first day I came aboard. One of them I have known a long time and when he recognized me on board he said, 'Don't you pass any knocks around here or I'll bound you every where you go.'"

"There was, however, one man," a Mr.
Pealson, whom I had met before and when they found he would not play with them they thought I had put him wise.
Then they said they would get me into more trouble than I had any thought of.
So here I am, an American woman held aboard this ship."

She was permitted to depart, but Mr.
Walms, who is an Englishman, was detained still longer and it was late before he came ashore.
He admitted that Walms was not his right name and added that he had known the woman for several years and intended to visit New York so he made up his mind to accompany her. His companion, in addition to her own trunks, had one of Mrs. Hill's big boxes with her.

WORE 'HAREM,' POLICE GUARD

Girl Wears Gowns as Prank and Fiance Kills Her On Sight.

Slayer Does Not Regret Act and Asks for Immediate Death.

BUCHAREST, June 17.—A lover's objection to his sweetheart wearing a harem skirt was responsible for the death of Milla Vassili Monrol, a beautiful and wealthy girl in Bucharest, today. Her fiancé, M. Aigne Yuvansco-co, had expressed strong views on eccentric fashions and was particularly bitter in denouncing harem skirts.
For more mischief Milla Monrol determined to get a harem skirt and on the first day she wore it she met her lover.

Without saying a word Yuvansco-co took out a revolver and fired at his sweetheart, killing her at once by a shot in the head. When arrested he stated that he did not regret his act and wished to be sentenced to death "as soon as possible."
"I could never marry a woman who deliberately opposed my will," he said, "and life without her would have been quite impossible."

VALLEJO, June 17.—Lieutenant

Million in Presents to Couple Lead to Securing of Detectives.

DENVER, June 17.—Florence Sheedy, youngest daughter of Dennis Sheedy, millionaire mine owner and merchant of this place, today became the bride of A. Townsend Burden of New York. Bishop Joseph Burke of the diocese of Missouri performed the ceremony.

No wedding in Denver in years has attracted as much attention as this ceremony. The bride gifts, which came from all over the world, aggregate in value $1,000,000.
Glittering babies by hundreds lay on tables in the drawing room of the Pinkerton detectives kept watch. In the rooms of the big house, mingled with the guests, were more detectives and men from a safety deposit company in New York city, who are to transport the gifts to New York.

This wedding was a true union of millions of the west and east. The Burden millions came from the big blast furnaces and forges of Troy,
N. Y.

After the ceremony and reception the couple left for New York. They will sail for a tour of Europe June 24 and on their return will live in New York.

Burden's father will present to the couple a home to be built later in the year.

ROMANTIC BOYS TIE KNOT OF FRIENDSHIP IN BLOOD

Primordial Instinct Leads Lads to Renewal of the Brotherhood of the Gory Rite of Savagery

ALAMEDA, June 17.—The surge of primordial instinct in a pair of Alameda boys has led them into an unconscious renewal of the brotherhood of blood rite of savagery. Ages ago two savages who wished to pledge friendship that could not change slashed their wrists and mingled their blood in an earthen cup. Then they together drank of it. No stronger friendship was possible.

Ernest Miller, fourteen years old, of 1111 Fountain street, and Adna Am-brucker, thirteen years old, whose home is on San Jose avenue, entered into secret pact that each should cut off the thumb of the other with an axe.

Young Miller is now without the first finger of his left hand, but the other lad lost only the nail of his thumb, for the nerve of the boys failed just as they were completing their ceremonial ordeal.

AS FIXED AS STARS.

The boys have been sworn pals for a long time, but delving into the just literature of adolescence they learned of formal pacts that bound hearts together with hoops of steel. They wanted their friendship to be as fixed and eternal as the stars.

All sorts of signs and seals of deathless devotion between two tried souls were investigated by the Alameda David and Jonathan. The sign of blood was chosen as the true manner for two romantic lads to cement an improvable friendship.

It would call for grit and sacrifice.
An axe was sharpened down to a keen edge, and the young heroes stole quietly into the woodshed for the solemn ceremony.

"Are you ready?" asked Ernest, as he raised the axe to take the toll of blood from his pal.

"You bet—go ahead!" replied Adna in a wavering voice as he crammed a snuffle back into his throat.

The axe descended and half of the ceremony was done, a boy's bleeding finger stump showed.

LOSE THEIR NERVE.

"When it came time for Miller's turn under the blade his wincing was more than apparent. The sight of blood had taken a lot of nerve from both of the youngsters.

But Ernest laid his hand on the block, the axe was lifted, and the axe fell. But the aim was bad. The blade only clipped off the thumb-nail.

The ax's edge left him then. It was the difference between the nature reared in civilization and the nature of savagery. The shirt of the child asserted itself and young Ernest dropped his head into his sleeve and ran crying into the house for his mother.

There at her knee he sobbed out the whole heroic tale, while Mrs. Miller bandaged his thumb and sent for a doctor.

Piece of Woman's Rib Is Changed Into Nasal Bone

RENO, Nev., June 17.—A most remarkable operation was performed in this city recently by Dr. J. Larue Robinson. A young woman was suffering from disease of the nose, which had eaten away both nasal bones, leaving a hole through the soft portion. So unfavorable was her general condition that any operation that might be performed was of an extremely delicate character. An operation was performed. It consisted in chiseling a bench for reception of new osseous matter, the entire bridge of the nose being eaten away. One of her ribs was dissected and not halves were used in place of the nasal bones. The healing process has been completed and the nose is perfectly restored.

The only other case on record of a similar nature was performed in New York city and pronounced by the surgical world as a marvel.

Du Pont Has Disowned His Daughter, It Is Declared

WILMINGTON, Del., June 17.—
Alfred Dupont, the wealthy president of the powder trust, has disowned his young daughter, Madeline Dupont Bancroft, according to authoritative information received today. It is said that Du Pont has refused to have anything more to do with his daughter since the announcement of the exceptional suit for divorce brought by John Bancroft, Jr. Bancroft names his wife's three-weeks-old baby as co-defendant and denies that he is the child's father.

Mrs. Bancroft was the favorite daughter of Dupont and became estranged from her mother, Mr. Dupont's first wife, because she sided with her father when he obtained a divorce in Dakota several years ago.
When Bancroft's suit was announced it was reported that Dupont would take sides with his daughter and that the Dupont millions would be thrown in legal battle against the millions of the Bancrofts.

It takes 8 MINUTES to walk to the Y.
M. C. Cafeteria, 21st and Chicago from downtown. The "HOME COOK-ING" is worth the walk.

WHEAT PRICES SAG; CORN EASY

The Rains in Farming Country Have Tendency to Lower Quotations.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Rains in the spring wheat country carried down prices here today. Good commission buying caused a rally, but the market again sagged. Bearish feeling was increased by the fact that country offerings of wheat to arrive were decidedly free, with purchasers holding off. Cash demand halted completely. The opening was 1/4c lower, and then fell back to 7 1/2c. An improved outlook in Nebraska and dentals of alleged crop damage in Russia dropped prices to a much lower level. The close was 1/4c off, but firm, at 88 1/2c for July. Cooler weather and more moisture made corn easy. September opened 1/4c down at 55 1/2c, and steadied around 55 1/2c. The market held steady, closing at 55 1/2c for September, a net loss of 1/4c. Data suggested with other grains. September started 1/4c off to 1/4c lower at 85 1/2c and reacted to 86 1/2c. Provisional firm. First sales were 2 1/2c higher, with September at $5.80 for lard and $8.00 for ribs. No business was done in pork.

Closing prices were as follows:
Wheat—July, 88 1/2c; September, 88 1/2c; December, 88 1/2c.
Corn—July, 54 1/2c; September, 55 1/2c; December, 54 1/2c.
Rye—July, 38 1/2c; September, 39 1/2c; December, 40 1/2c.
Barley—July, 31 1/2c; September, 32 1/2c; December, 33 1/2c.
Clover—$5.00 to $5.10.

CHICAGO, June 17.—The Inter Ocean says: Sentiment in wheat last night was advanced and bearish, but so long as the bull interest are apparently willing to buy on the break and sell on the break, narrow range of price until something happens to give it a pronounced trend and create sufficient trade to affect the influence of bull leaders. The traders said that 85 per cent of the trade was among the local professionals. Commission men reported the outside interest as limited and looking for a nervous, fluctuating market. Comparatively few of the local traders are of wheat last night, neither were many of the big people who are bearish short any of consequence. Corn bulls are looking for a crop scare unless good rains come soon. Commission houses are openly in favor of the buying side and say that the market can be bought on all breaks from around the present level. These who have worked on the principle of buying every good break in the past two months have secured profits. Traders said that it looked as though the Armour interest was covering its loss and reselling for September. The Nye-Jenks house was doing the same, which some of the traders attributed to Armour. The situation is working stronger.

LIVERPOOL, June 17.—Broomhall says: There was a firm undertone to the speculative market this morning, with prices 1/4d to 1/2d higher. The following the opening further advanced 1/2d, with shorts rather nervous. Support was due to private cable receipt here from a large quantity of wheat from Roumania, which was favorable for the market. Expectations of light world's shipments than expected, smaller shipments as shown by Bradstreet and some further demand from the continent. The market toward the close showed some disposition to recede, but at the end of the day the undertone was firm and 1/4d to 1/2d higher than yesterday. Shorts covered with moderate demand for Manitoba parcels. The corn market opened unchanged at 1 1/2c, with a member advanced 1/4d, with the general undertone steady, with an improved demand for distant European offerings.

COTTON MARKET SUFFERS DECLINE

Favorable New Crop Reports Inspires General Selling.

NEW YORK, June 17.—There was a further and structural decline in the cotton market this morning and a general selling of the favorable new crop reports, including private advice of additional rains in the drought stricken of the Western belt and a private condition rather showing an improvement in crop prospects since the government's figures were made up last month.

The old crop months were violently excited, with July selling off to 14 1/2c or 20 points below last night, and $8.00 per bale under the high record of last season.

The market closed barely steady, with prices net 22 1/2 points lower.

Port receipts today estimated at 1000 bales; last week, 1132; last year 911 bales.

New York—Cotton—Cotton closed as New York yesterday were 1374 bales, including 1085 bales consigned.

Bradstreet says: Cotton crop, owing to the continued dry weather, is in an excellent state of cultivation, but needs rain from Texas east to Alabama. Reports are of breaking of the Texas drought by rains, but oats and corn in that State are reported short. In Tennessee, the Carolina and Virginia recent rains greatly benefited all crops and the outlook is good.

The New York Cotton Exchange places the general visible supply at 2,002,000 bales, against 2,543,253 bales last year; visible American, 1,558,000 bales, against 1,558,253 bales last year; decrease for week visible, 114,700 bales, against 143,000 bales same period last year; spinners' takings, American, for the week, 155,225 bales, against 158,700 bales; total spinners' takings, American, for season to date, 1,741,000 bales, against 1,953,118 bales for same period last year.
